DEMAND CHECKS TOMORROW IN INQUIRY HERE

7 Get Subpoenas; Insull to Talk.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Only seven witnesses have been served with subpoenas to appear tomorrow morning for the slush fund investigation of the Illinois primary of April 13, last. Two witnesses for whom subpoenas have been issued have not been served. One of these is former Mayor William Hale Thompson, who is spending a vacation with George Pike, his former city controller, upon the western ranch of William Randolph Hearst. The other is State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, who is having a holiday at Eagle River, Wisconsin. The offices of both men have promised to notify them that subpoenas are awaiting their return, and it is expected that both will appear soon, before the senate committee headed by Senator James A. Reed of Missouri.

Senate Candidates Summoned.

The seven upon whom service has been obtained are as follows:

L. Smith, Republican nominee for United States senator.

Willoughby, secretary to Senator William B. McKinley who was defeated for renomination.

rge E. Brennan, Democratic nominee for United States senator.

muel Insull, head of the Commonwealth Edison company, gas company, elevated roads and sundry other public utilities.

ward H. Wright, member of the Illinois Commerce commission and colored Republican leader of large influence in the second ward.

Charles V. Barrett, member of the board of review and leader in the Crowe-Barrett faction of Cook county Republicans.

O. West, treasurer of the National Republican committeee and prominent leader in the Deneen-Lundin Republican faction in the primary.

A subpœna has also been issued for Senator William B. McKinley but has not been served, owing to his illness in Washington and inability to come to Chicago at present.

Pennsylvanian to Appear.

It may be that the first witness in Chicago will testify about the enormous expenditures in the Pensylvania primary instead of Illinois. Thomas W. Cunningham of Philadelphia, who was active in the Vare campaign, could not be located while the Reed committee was in session in Washington. He has since been served with a subpœna commanding him "all excuses and delays set aside to appear in Chicago" tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Then again, the senators may be as careless of Mr. Cunningham's time as he has been of theirs and shove him aside to wait around for some dull hour in the inquiry when they have nothing else to do except to listen to him explain.

Each of the seven witnesses has been told by Palmer E. Anderson, United States marshal at Chicago, in writing to appear prepared to testify on "the collection and payment of moneys or promises of emoluments or rewards or other things of value, including all agreements or understandings calculated or intended to influence the nomination of any person for United States senator."

Documents Are Called In.

Each of these seven witnesses has been "commanded to bring with you and produce before said committee all books of account, and all bank checks, bank drafts or other instruments showing the receipt or distribution of money which may be under or subject to your control; and all memoranda in writing, including all letters received and copies of all letters by you sent; and all and every instrument in writing which is calculated to or may throw any light upon any of the above mentioned matters."

Under a strictly technical interpretation of those words relating to the production of bank checks and drafts in the subpœna, they relate primarily to campaign managers and candidates and their agents. They do not seem to fit such a witness as Samuel Insull because there has been no suggestion that he received or distributed campaign money, but rather he has been charged with contributing a large sum to the campaign funds. It is interesting to anticipate whether Mr. Insull will appear with canceled bank checks and bank

POLICE GUARD YANKEES FROM MOBS IN PARIS

Poincare Decrees Tourist Escorts.

PARIS, July 24.—[U. P.]—Premier Poincare today ordered Paris police to provide greater protection for American and other tourists in France.

The premier was disturbed by the recent anti-American manifestations in the streets and in some of the resorts of Paris. He summoned the prefect of police and ordered that all tourist motor busses be supplied with an escort of bicycle police, that police guards be posted at tourist agencies and intimated that if these measures were ineffective, the use of motor busses by tourists may be temporarily suppressed.

Herrick Denies Outbreak Talk.

Paris, July 24.—(AP)—The American ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, today denied reports that trouble had occurred around the embassy, saying:

"There has been no demonstration before the embassy or chancellery today by any one. There has been no unusual police protection in expectation of a communist demonstration; only the usual French police were on duty."

Demonstrations against foreigners on sightseeing buses continue in the boulevards, and Americans are not singled out for verbal attacks on these nightly tours. It is the French idea that all foreigners are taking bread from the Frenchman, hence the boos and catcalls when tourists start seeing Paris by night.

SOFTENS DEBT VIEW

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 24.—Premier Raymond Poincare called in Henri Berenger today and THE TRIBUNE learns that he informed the ambassador to Washington, who let it be known that he is considering giving up his job in the new government, that he has no intention of nullifying the ambassador's efforts to effect a debt settlement with Washington by a refusal to bring the accord before the chamber of deputies.

M. Berenger was greatly surprised when M. Poincare told him that his former bitter opposition to the Berenger-Mellon accord had softened and that he expected to renew negotiations promptly for amelioration of the terms, beginning where Joseph Caillaux left off.

Britons Assure Credits.

In his dealings with Washington, M. Poincare, however, will not be cowed under the club of American credits, for it is learned that he has received assurances of enough credits from English banks to carry the government through the summer. After that, by presenting the accord to the chamber, he can start working for Wall street's favor again. M. Poincare bluntly told M. Berenger today that although he would like to talk of debt ameliorations with Andrew W. Mellon, United States secretary of the treasury, during the latter's visit in France, this is not a question of life and death now, and he will not be broken hearted if the secretary, who is circling Paris en route to the cities of Burgundy and Italy, never presents his card.

Asks $125,000,000.

The iron willed M. Poincare forced the ministers to take an oath not to divulge any of the cabinet plans, but following the cabinet council today THE TRIBUNE learns that he will ask the chamber Tuesday for 5,000,000,000 francs ($125,000,000) in new indirect taxes and that he means to enforce immediate tax payments on imports of 1926, which have been lagging.

M. Poincare's project for the financial rehabilitation of France does not call for immediate stabilization. Differing from M. Caillaux, the new premier and finance chief wants to restore public confidence by a drastic reform of the taxation system before subjecting the country to the arduous strain which is bound to result in an increase in prices, entailing an increase in bank notes in circulation.

Radicals Oppose Tax.

Violent opposition has been aroused among the radicals to the proposed indirect tax of 5,000,000,000 francs. A heavy inheritance tax seems to be the only direct impost envisaged.

With the increased confidence in financial circles as the result of the

CATHOLICS ORDER SUSPENSION OF MEXICO SERVICES

Mexico City, July 24.—(AP)—Suspension of all religious services and withdrawal of priests from all Roman Catholic churches in Mexico, beginning July 31, is made known in a pastoral letter protesting against the new religious regulations.

The letter, issued late tonight by the National Episcopale, is signed by all Mexican archbishops and bishops and is addressed to all Catholics in Mexico.

What may develop into an endurance contest in arresting and being arrested apparently has commenced between the police and the department of justice authorities on the one side and the League for the Defense of Religious Freedom on the other. When the league's first set of directors were arrested and put in jail and the headquarters closed the league promptly opened under new management in another place, whereupon the police arrested the new director.

Judicial orders were issued demanding "declarations" from Archbishop Mora y del Rio of Mexico and Bishop Diaz of Tabasco. This means that agents of the department of justice will interrogate the bishops and take their depositions, after which the government will decide on further procedure.

The league intends to continue operating regardless of the number of arrests or how many headquarters are closed. New directors will be appointed as fast as the old ones are arrested.

FOOTBALL STAR GRAPPLES ARMED EVANSTON BANDIT

Battling with a bandit who attempted to hold him up last night in front of 927 Ridge avenue, Evanston, Maurice Reichelt, formerly a star football player on the New Trier High school team, suffered a possible concussion of the brain when he was struck with the butt of a revolver.

Despite the blow, Reichelt staggered to his automobile, seized his own revolver and fired at the man. The latter ran a few steps and returned the fire. Then he fled. None of the bullets took effect.

Reichelt, who is 19 years old and lives at 1328 Elmwood avenue, Wilmette, was a member of a party at the home of August Gerske, a wealthy contractor. He had stepped out to adjust the curtains on his automobile when the robber tried to overpower him. He was taken to St. Francis' hospital for treatment after the other members of the party ran out to find him lying dazed on the sidewalk.

Ousted Dry Ace Admits Rum Parties

San Francisco, Cal., July 24.—(AP)—Advised that he had been ousted as federal prohibition administrator for northern California and Nevada, pending the investigation of charges against him, Col. Ned M. Green said today. "I should have been suspended long ago." Asked if he believed in prohibition, Col. Green declared:

"I believe in prohibition firmly, because of its economic benefits to the nation. But it is unfortunate that the temperate have to suffer for the sins of the intemperate. I do not believe that there will be any modification of the dry law.

Human Being, Not Fanatic, He Says.

"As for myself, if any friend or stranger calls on me I will offer him a drink and take one with him. I still insist that I have done nothing against the law. I did not come out here with a long nose to snoop into other people's affairs to see whether they had liquor or not. I came here to stop the bringing in of liquor; to stop it at the source, and you have to admit that I made considerable progress there. I have given an honest administration. I am a regular human being, not a religious fanatic."

Liquor from His Office.

Asked if he was worried about the grand jury investigation, Col. Green is quoted as saying:

"My situation is like that of a fighter. You can't get into a battle and expect to come out clean. I expect to come out of this a little dirty. I've had a lone fight for ten months. It's about time some one got in some blows against me. But I'll retaliate when my time comes."

"Did your guests on your parties ask you where the liquor came from?"

"Certainly, and I told them I got it from the prohibition office."

"Aren't your employés going to be accused of taking government evidence to give to you?"

Defends His Employés.

"I don't want any of my employés to be implicated in this. Anything they did was done on my orders. I am responsible for what goes here. I want them cleared of all suspicion of misconduct. Nothing could have been done at my office without my knowledge.

"More than half of those who are 'investigating' me are just as guilty as I am. If they were honest, they'd have to admit that they, too, drink and attend wild parties. I'm no prude. I don't want people to think I am. I'm just a good sport."

Capital Amazed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[Special.]—Has the boasted prohibition enforcement machine, built up by Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, federal dry czar, already hit the rocks?

This question confronted both critics and friends of the 18th amendment following a tumultous day in prohibition enforcement circles. High lights of the day's proceedings which critics assert point to a breakdown in the dry organization, follow:

Suspension of Col. Ned M. Green, prohibition administrator at San Francisco on charges of irregularity and misconduct in office by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Winston. Announcement that as a result of the revelations of bribery and graft in New Jersey among coast guardsmen, the coast guard is to have a thorough investigation with the spotlight directed on the rum running division of the organization.

Secretary of State Kellogg denies reports that Gen. Andrews has authority to negotiate a new treaty directed against rum running with England.

Moody Leads Governor in Texas Primary

Austin, Tex., July 24.—[Special.]—Scattered returns of the votes cast in today's Democratic primary for governor indicate that Attorney General Dan Moody will lead Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson by 80,000 to 100,000, with Lynch Davidson third.

Incomplete returns from 206 out of 252 counties in the state (nine complete) give Moody, 157,433; Mrs. Ferguson, 110,684; Davidson, 49,188.

The larger cities gave Moody a heavy vote, but his majority over all the candidates was lost on the late returns. Under the Texas law, unless one candidate receives a majority of the votes cast the two leading must engage in a runoff primary held a month later.

Run-off May Be Necessary.

It may not be known until Monday, when the final returns are in, whether Moody received the majority necessary to nominate him or whether there will have to be a run-off primary a month from today. The returns so far lead to the belief that Governor Ferguson will be Moody's opponent in the second stage of the contest if there is a run-off.

Lack of interest in the contest was shown by the farmers and people of the rural communities throughout the state. It is believed that the total vote cast did not exceed 650,000, or approximately 50 per cent of the total number of qualified suffragists of the state. It is explained that farmers were too busy with their crops to go to the polls and also that many men and women were disgusted with the turmoil of the campaign and decided not to express their preference at the ballot box.

Moody Sweeps North Texas.

As the count proceeds the most significant indication of the outcome is that Moody is well in the lead in all except a few of the counties. He swept all of northwest Texas and the vote for him in the populous counties of north Texas amounts almost to a landslide.

In east Texas Gov. Ferguson is in the lead in the unofficial returns from ten counties. In the former Ferguson stronghold of south Texas Moody leads in all except a few counties, with Davidson second. In former years the Ferguson support in the strong German counties around San Antonio was overwhelming. In the primary today all except one of these counties gave Moody a larger vote than Gov. Ferguson.

What little analysis of the vote is possible to make at this time leads to the conclusion that the Ku Klux Klan support went to Moody, although he criticized and condemned the secret organization in all of his speeches. It is explained that the klansmen were so bitterly opposed to the Fergusons that they concentrated their support on Moody.

Wurzbach Has Big Lead.

Mrs. Edith Williams of Dallas and Mrs. Kate Johnston of San Antonio were among the "also rans." The same is true of the Rev. O. F. Zimmerman of Naples.

No figures were available on the Republican race for governor, in which E. P. Scott of Corpus Christi opposed Col. H. H. Haines of Houston. Early returns gave Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach an apparently safe lead for renomination. Wurzbach, the only Republican congressman from Texas, was opposed by Fred E. Knetsch, who had the support of R. B. Creager, G. O. P. national committeeman, and the regular organization.

Five Killed, 40 Injured When Bridge Collapses

Charleston, W. Va., July 24—(AP)—Five persons were known to have been killed, two others were believed fatally injured, and between 40 and 50 seriously injured when a bridge collapsed at Whiteside tonight. A large throng had been attracted to the town by a carnival. A fire fighting event was staged on the bank of Coal river. When 200 or more persons crowded upon the bridge it crashed into the water.

ROBERT SCOTT'S AFFIDAVIT STIRS NEW JAIL MESS

Story Not Believed; Inquiry Begun.

County jail officials were facing another inquiry yesterday for their part in what was termed the attempt of the Scott borthers, Russell, who is under sentence of death, and Robert, who is under sentence of life imprisonment, to make mockery of justice and a plaything of the law and a joke of a solemn oath to tell the truth.

Such an attempt is seen in the affidavit of Robert Scott, declaring his brother innocent of the murder for which both were sentenced. The affidavit was made public, it was said in the state's attorney's office, in the hope that Gov. Small might be induced by it to extend clemency to the condemned man.

Jail Rule Called Travesty.

The Scott episode is the latest in a series of burlesques which, according to investigating agencies, has made the administration of the Cook county jail a travesty. Beginning with the escape of Tommy O'Connor the series has run through such amazing episodes as the Druggan-Lake affair in which two notorious bootleggers were given freedom to come and go as they liked, the peddling of moonshine to prisoners, the drunkenness of a bootlegger prisoner and his appearance drunk in court, the drunkenness of a jail guard in court, the dynamiting of the jail by a condemned felon last Sunday, and a long list of comparatively less important infractions.

This latest county jail breach, in so far as it may help Russell Scott defeat the gallows, is regarded as a failure.

Robert Takes the Blame.

In so far as it added to the odium of the jail it is called a success.

"I, not Russell, killed Joseph Maurer," Robert Scott made affidavit.

"I, Fred Springer, do hereby swear that I was present during the time Robert Scott made the attached confession and that I witnessed his signature," attested the assistant jailer.

"I wasn't there," said Judge William B. Gemmill, before whom Robert Scott pleaded guilty to participation in the murder of Maurer, a loop drug clerk, but under oath said he was not the one who fired the shots.

Prosecutors Weren't There.

"I wasn't there," said First Assistant State's Attorney George E. Gorman, "but I should have been when any such affidavit was made."

"I wasn't there," said Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, "but I should have been, because for two weeks I have been investigating the other rotten things in that jail, drunken guards, drunken prisoners, immoral women being permitted to visit prisoners, favors granted to inmates with money to pay for them, dope peddled to prisoners, bombs exploded in the jail and what not."

Judge Says Russell Was Killer.

"I wasn't there," said Chief Justice Thomas J. Lynch, before whom Russell Scott was tried by a jury, found guilty of the death of Maurer and sentenced to death on the gallows. "And I know it was Russell Scott, not Robert Scott, who killed Maurer."

"I was there but I was too busy to notify either the state's attorney or the judge," said Jail Warden George Weideling. "I have all I can do trying to find out which of the guards are crooked."

Weideling was having more trouble yesterday. He was testing a tear gas bullet fired from a revolver. He put one in his gun, went into a room and fired it. He was nearly overcome by the fumes. The report resounded through the jail and could be heard outside but none of the twenty-five jail guards or the policemen with shotguns detailed on watch outside the walls came to see what was wrong. None even left their posts.

Hoffman Gives His Side.

"I wasn't there," said Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman, who has just returned from the Du Page county jail where he spent thirty days because of in-and-out favors to Terry Druggan and Frank Lake while they were in his custody.

"That jail is a thorn in the side of the sheriff," Hoffman continued. "All this stuff about McErlane and Durkin being drunk every day in the jail came about while I was away.

"Earl Dear and Lloyd Bopp, who were sentenced to be hanged, escaped from that jail. Tommy O'Connor got out and we have never heard from him since.

"Druggan and Lake were trouble enough but then Fernekes came to the jail as a prisoner. We were very watchful of him and we did catch him once with saws, dynamite and percussion caps in his cell but that didn't stop him.

Doing What He Can.

"Last Sunday he tried to blow out the jail wall and escape and he was nearly successful. I did all I can do about that and I am doing what I can about the other conditions at the jail called to my attention.

"Judge John P. McGoorty is now trying to find out about the booze situation in the jail and I am helping him. He sentenced one of my guards to the House of Correction. I fired a lot of others and I will fire every other one I find is wrong.

"I can't help it if one of the assistant jailers is simple enough to help the Scott brothers spread more perjury. I hope the court will find out all about it."

The courts were intending "to find out all about it," and so were the prosecutors. Assistant State's Attorneys Gorman and Mueller were doing more. They were showing by the statements of the two brothers themselves that Russell was a cowardly thief who shot a man in the back when a kick or a blow might have served the Scotts as well.

Bring Out Trial Testimony.

They showed by testimony that the Scott brothers went into a drug store to rob it, that Maurer leaped on Robert Scott and bore him to the floor and that Russell then shot Maurer. They produced Russell Scott's confessions to several other robberies and particularly to the one in which Maurer was killed. The "confession" said there was no robbery involved, but only a row and misunderstanding.

They showed that when Russell was caught and Robert was not, Russell's first thought and act was to throw all the blame on Robert. They charged hypocrisy in the statement of Russell yesterday: "I knew Bob would do the manly thing; I knew he would tell the truth. I never blamed him for the crime and I knew all the time where he was."

In addition, Judge Gemmill made public a letter charging Russell Scott with brutality long before he became a murderer, the letter also stating that Russell abused his wife for several years.

Judges Are Incensed.

The judges particularly were incensed at the latest maneuver in Russell Scott's behalf. They called attention to the others, which were these:

Mauer was killed on April 2, 1924, in the drug store at La Salle and Washington streets and Russell was arrested for the crime a few hours later. The proof of his guilt was so convincing that he pleaded guilty before Judge William J. Lindsay who heard the evidence and then pronounced sentence of death.

Scott's lawyer threw himself to the floor and cried. Then a technicality was found in which Judge Lindsay's sentence was set aside and Scott was granted a jury trial—with the same result, the death penalty.

Gets Reprieve on Letter.

The governor granted Russell one reprieve because of a telegram signed "Robert Scott," and saying the sender was coming to exonerate Russell. But it was a telegrapher from Detroit who sent it and eventually the defendant was again in the death chamber awaiting execution at dawn.

Then, at 2 o'clock in the morning Russell was granted another stay on a petition alleging that he had become insane since sentence of death was pronounced.

Club women in Detroit had been led to believe Russell had not had a fair trial. He once lived in Detroit and Windsor, Ont. He was a promoter and was once rated as well to do but drink, dope, and women were his ruin. The Detroit club women raised money to aid him.

Sent to Prison as Insane.

He had a sanity hearing, a jury said he was insane and he was sent to the penitentiary for criminal insane at Chester. While he was there Robert Scott was found to be an inmate of a California prison and brought back here for trial.

Then Russell, on a hearing conducted by the state, was pronounced sane and brought back to Chicago for another trial by jury. The second jury found him sane and he was again sentenced to death.

Then came Robert's turn. Robert had been convicted of one robbery and sentenced to imprisonment from ten years to life. The witnesses were marshalled against him in the trial to be held for his part in the murder of Maurer.

He pleaded guilty and tried to avoid testifying. Judge Gemmill decided he must testify, and he did. Robert told Judge Gemmill he did not fire either of the shots that killed Maurer. Judge Gemmill fixed his punishment at life imprisonment.

Brothers Reunited in Jail.

Then the Scott brothers had a reunion in the jail. Russell is awaiting another appeal to the Supreme court. Robert wanted an appeal on the robbery conviction.

Mrs. Russell Scott was going to give a public starving exhibition—at 50 cents per ticket—in a glass case at a local theater. The police prohibited the spectacle as against public policy. Then she went to Detroit, where she is now supposedly existing without food to get money to carry on the legal fight for the man she once left.

Russell and Robert had the same lawyer and the same jailer. Warden Weideling put the brothers together for one night, then decided he had better keep them separated.

Then Comes the Affidavit.

Robert had no more hope of clemency in the Maurer murder. He was given a life sentence, the equivalent of twenty years. Russell's hope of the state Supreme court's setting aside the last sanity hearing was weak. His other only chance was in an appeal to the governor. So——

"I killed Maurer; Russell didn't do it," Robert takes oath in the county jail. "I lied on the witness stand to save my own neck and who can blame me. Now I want to do justice to my brother."

"Poor kid, he did it all right," Russell commented later, just before Warden Weideling permitted them again to be together. "But at the worst he is guilty only of manslaughter."

The judges and prosecutors, however, think differently about the truth of Robert's affidavit.

Gemmill Points to Testimony.

"Robert Scott's testimony did not influence me one bit," Judge Gemmill said. "The physical facts demonstrated beyond the possibility of a doubt that Russell did the killing, not Robert.

"We also have the eyewitness testimony of Floyd K. Pinckney, 328 South Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, a reputable business man. He testified that Maurer had Robert on the floor and was on top of him when Russell came up from the basement, revolver in hand and fired down on Maurer.

"I insisted on Robert's testifying because I expected some such trick as this. I knew all the time Russell was dominating Robert, who is a weakling."

Assistant State's Attorney Gorman declared the statement is another abortive hoax intended to help Russell. He said Assistant Jailer Springer's aid in preparing the statement "is the most asinine thing I ever knew a public official to do." The decent thing for Springer to have done, he said, would have been to notify the state's attorneys office of any such impending statement.

Crime Expert of Same Belief.

Francis D. Hanna of the crime commission issued a similar statement.

"Robert Scott admits having perjured himself on the witness stand," Hanna said, "and now he expects to be credited with telling the truth. It is plain he has just one purpose: helping his brother escape a just punishment.

"The method doesn't inspire confidence. Springer should have notified his superior, Warden Weideling, and the state's attorney should have been told of the contemplated statement."

Assistant State's Attorney Mueller, who prosecuted Robert Scott, called the statement "drivel, intended only to have an influence on Gov. Small." He said he will ask Judge McGoorty to make an inquiry.

Offers More Physical Evidence.

"Here's proof Russell did the killing," Mueller said. "The coat of Maurer is not powder burned nor are bullet holes large. Robert now says he was on the floor on his back and Maurer on top of him and he reached around and put the gun to Maurer's back and fired.

"If he did so the coat would have been noticeably powder burned and the holes would be wide and jagged. Instead, the proof is that the shots were fired from a distance of at least two feet—Russell bent over Maurer and pointed his weapon so as to shoot Maurer and not to injure Robert.

"The statement that Robert and Maurer were fighting because of a 15 cent package of cigarettes is a weak one. Robert had taken $300 from the register before Maurer had made an attempt to tackle him.

The Shooting Recalled.

"When he did so Robert's gun went flying twenty feet away. That was the gun picked up later, with all the cartridges in it unfired. When Russell was arrested he had in his pocket a gun that bore two discharged cartridges. Two shots had been fired from it.

"Russell said today he never squawked on Robert. Well, he did, first thing, and here it is."

Prosecutor Mueller then produced the confessions made by Russell Scott the day of his arrest and others made on subsequent days. The first was a ready admission that he and his brother were in the drug store. He said he was in the basement and he heard two shots and rushed upstairs, grabbed Robert and hustled him into a cab.

From Russell's Confession.

"Where did you get the revolver that was taken from you when you were arrested?" he was asked.

"I got it from Bob in the cab out there," he answered.

Q.—After the man was killed? A.—I did not know the man was killed until I saw it in the papers.

On April 5 another statement was taken from Russell. Floyd C. Carr pointed him out as one of the two men who had robbed the Eckert & Eckert drug store, 2460 North Clark street. Then the questioning took this form:

Q.—Russell T. Scott, you heard what this gentleman, Mr. Carr, said? A.—Yes.

Q.—What have you to say about it? A.—I remember the store and I remember Mr. Flynn's face here.

Q.—Do you remember this young man (Carr) waiting on you for the drinks? A.—I remember there was a young man, but I don't remember his face—I remember the clerk went somewhere else before Robert [brother] and I held up the place.

Q.—Who was with you in the holdup besides Robert and yourself? A.—That's all.

Q.—Did you both have revolvers? A.—Yes, sir.

On the same date, April 5, 1924, at 5:15 p. m., another statement was taken concerning the robbery of the Park and Hoagland drug store at 9:40 p. m. on March 29, 1924. Fred Kraus, 1634 Bissell street, was at the detective bureau and said he was a customer in the drug store at the time of the robbery. He identified Scott as one of the bandits. Then Lieut. John Norton proceeded as follows:

Q.—What have you to say to that, Russell Scott? A.—That is all true.

Q.—Did you have a revolver? A.—Yes, sir; I had two of them.

Q.—Who participated in the robbery with you? A.—My brother, Robert B. Scott.

Q.—Did he have a revolver? A.—He had three, but he did not use them all. I believe he used two.

Arthur G. Ruthrauff, 1442 East 69th street, also identified Scott as a robber. So did Nels Nelson, 210 Florimond street.

Questioned on Maurer Killing.

On April 7 Russell Scott was again questioned by Lieut. Norton with a policeman-stenographer taking notes of the questions and answers, some of which were as follows:

(Scott had been telling where he had been every hour of the evening Maurer was killed.)

Q.—Where did you go then? A.—I went back to 123 North Clark street to the club.

Q.—What did you do there? A.—Bought a few drinks at the bar, met a few fellows and women there.

Q.—How long did you stay there? A.—Couple of hours.

Q.—Bob was with you all the time? A.—Bob was back and forth around the bar.

Q—What time did you leave there? A.—About 10 o'clock or a little after, 10:15 or 10:30 p. m.

Q.—Where did you go? A.—Went over to the drug store where the trouble was at Washington and La Salle streets.

Q.—Who went with you? A.—Bob, my brothter.

A.—Now you went all over the telling what happened at the drug store, did you not? A.—Yes, sir.

There follows a series of questions as to what Russell and Robert Scott did after the shooting. Then this:

Q.—Now you were present a number of times after your arrest when victims of recent holdups were brought to the detective bureau and identified you as one of the men that held them up, were you not? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You recognized a number of them as men you had held up? A.—Practically all of them.

Q.—You also recognized Dr. Brand as one of the victims that was robbed by you, who identified the revolver that was found under the body of Joseph G. Maurer as being his revolver that was taken in a holdup at 11:40 p. m., March 18, 1924? A.—Yes.

Q.—You have not been abused or mistreated by the police in any way? A.—Of course not.

Q.—And everything you have told us here is the truth, is it not? A.—As near as I can remember it.

Q.—You have not been obliged to tell this, you have been telling it of your own free will and accord? A.—I have been answering questions put to me and telling them as near as I can remember, and they are true as near as I can remember.

Q.—You were not forced by any one to tell the facts? A.—No, sir.

ANOTHER JAIL GUARD FIRED IN BOOZE INQUIRY

One more guard, Frank Oulehla, has been discharged, it was announced yesterday, as a result of the latest jail scandal.

Warden Weideling in making public the discharge of Oulehla announced that he has been linked with the jail booze traffic, which for the past week has been under investigation by Judge John P. McGoorty.

Oulehla's name was brought into the booze parties held by Frank McErlane and other prisoners by the testimony of James Castagnino, an ousted assistant warden. He said that the wife of Elmer Moore, the guard sentenced for contempt, had come to him and asked that he assist her in stopping her husband from drinking.

Mrs. Moore produced a letter from Oulehla to her husband in which he said that a gallon of booze was ready and to come and call for it.

All jail guards were searched yesterday as they reported for duty by Deputy Sheriff William G. Wood. The guards knew they were to be searched, so nothing was found.

TTACK ON U. S. IMED AT DEBT CANCELLATION

rah Assails Churchill in "Shylock" Charge.

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[Special.]—That Europe now looks upon the United States as an enemy and that Americans are the victims of an overseas propaganda, the purpose of which is to paint them as a people void of high ideals or honorable purposes, was the statement made today by Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho], chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations. Senator Borah's remarks were based on what he asserts is a British campaign, the ultimate aim of which is the cancellation of that country's debt to the United States.

ATOR BORAH.

There is, insisted Senator Borah, no justification for the epithet "shylock" in reference to the attitude of the United States in the matter of their foreign debts; particularly, he said, when it is taken into consideration that the United States has already canceled $7,000,000,000.

Blames Winston Churchill.

The campaign for cancellation which Senator Borah believes is definitely under way, is being, in his opinion, directed by Winston Churchill, the British chancellor of the exchequer, and in furtherance of his objects Mr. Churchill has, says the senator, apparently resorted to a campaign of vilification against the "enemy," in this instance the United States. Whether or not the British used the money loaned by this country for war or other purposes is not important. The American people, he declared, know how a debtor "acts when he does not want to pay what he owes."

The opinion is general in Washington that today's utterance of Senator Borah is the opening blast in a campaign to make the debt question, along with the world court, a commanding issue in the campaign now under way for the election of members of the Seventieth congress. In this fight, it is said Senator Borah will have the active support of Senators Reed [Dem., Mo.], Johnson [Rep., Cal.], La Follette [Rep., Wis.], Frazier and Nye of North Dakota and other senators, as well as representatives of the progressive groups.

Predict Attack on Mellon.

It is openly asserted in informed circles that Secretary Mellon will be assailed for his alleged abandonment of the "capacity to pay" principle and his present assertions that in effect the pre-armistice loans to all of the allied nations, except England, have been canceled, leaving only the war debts to be paid.

"What has happened," said Senator Borah in his statement, "since the [illegible] that would impeach our ideals? We had the note of Great Britain bearing five per cent interest and due. We canceled the debt to the extent of about thirty cents on the dollar, and gave her sixty-two years in which to pay. I am not now criticizing the lenient terms. They might have been justified, owing to the small portion of territory which Great Britain secured. Anyway, we did it.

"Our settlements with Great Britain, Italy, Belgium, and the proposed settlement with France, represent a cancellation of seven billion dollars. The taxpayers of the United States contributed to the taxpayers of these countries seven billions at a time when they held their note."

DEPUTIES STAGE PISTOL FIGHT IN MEXICO; 1 SHOT

Mexico City, July 24.—[United Press.]—A free-for-all pistol battle took place today in the hallway of the chamber of deputies with an undetermined number of candidates for the chamber participating. Francisco [illegible], a candidate, was wounded. The trouble began when a group of [illegible] Alliance candidates entered the chamber, where several coalition candidates were presenting their credentials. Words led to action, with a deputy producing a gun from his [illegible]. Police stationed in the chamber intervened to stop the fight.

FARMER HUNTED AS SLAYER OF 2 SEEN IN WOODS

Grand Marais, Minn., July 24.—(AP)—[illegible] Westblade, a farmer being sought in connection with the murder of two state road patrolmen Friday [illegible], was twice seen today. Chris [illegible] reported to officials that he conversed with the hunted man and that Westblade emphatically denied all knowledge of the crime. A [illegible] told of having seen him skulking about in the woods near the scene of the crime.

Japan to Destroy Shrines of Animal Worshipers

TOKIO, July 24.—(AP)—The shrines bureau of the home department has ordered the destruction of thousands of shrines throughout Japan dedicated to the primitive superstitious worship of foxes, snakes and other animals. These small shrines, which are part of the lives of the simple country people, are doomed now on the ground that they are antagonistic to the progress of the nation.

Alcoholic Deaths Jump 600 Per Cent Under Dry Law

New York, July 24.—(AP)—There has been an increase of 25 per cent in alcoholic deaths in 1926 over 1925 among [illegible]000,000 policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. [illegible] made public today by the company reveal that the number of alcoholic deaths since the first year of prohibition has increased 600 per cent in the same group.

POINCARE ORDERS POLICE TO GUARD YANKS FROM MOB

Bike Escorts Will Protect Tourists.

formation of the Poincare ministry, the franc got back to 41 to the dollar today. Once M. Poincare gets the work well under way, he will be ousted, it is believed in the best informed circles, with the possibility that December will see the cabinet headed by M. Sarraut, radical leader.

Poincare's Doom Seen in Fall.

Results of the senatorial election in October are eagerly awaited, for it is expected the elections will result in important Socialist victories, readjusting the whole governmental situation, and will dispense with M. Poincare's unnatural "national union" cabinet, once the urgent need is past. The majority is expected to be more firmly established in the center and left, with the exclusion of the group headed by Louis Marin.

Aristide Briand, the fallen premier, and now foreign minister, is chuckling up his sleeve at the suggestion that M. Poincare can influence his actions, with seven ministers out of a cabinet of thirteen squarely behind him in his foreign policy. M. Poincares nose will be kept too close to the financial wheel to allow interference in foreign affairs.

Promised Anglo-Dutch Aid.

In a letter to the press tonight, Jacques Duboin, assistant to M. Caillaux in the late Briand cabinet, asserted that no credits were ever promised by America before ratification of the Mellon-Berenger accord, but he revealed that M. Caillaux had been assured the immediate support of Britain and Holland, and especially the latter, sufficient to carry out the entire stabilization project. M. Poincare is completely in accord with these negotiations.

Cry "Shylock!" Yanks Leave.

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

GENEVA, July 24.—A number of American visitors at resorts on the French side of Lake Geneva recently have begun crossing the lake to Swiss towns. They were insulted on the streets with shouts of "shylocks!" and "usurer!" Some Englishmen mistaken for Americans also were hooted. There also is bitter feeling in the French resorts against the Swiss who, because of the decrease of the French franc, make daily trips across the frontier to buy the best goods in French shops, as the customs tariff in the zone is nominal. French residents cannot pay such high prices and attribute the constantly increasing cost of living to "rapacious strangers." But the shopkeepers are delighted with the foreign customers.

SLAYER GETS DEATH VERDICT.

Kansas City, July 24.—(AP)—Millard Abel, 25, ex-convict, was sentenced to hang for the killing of Harry T. McConnell, an employé of a downtown parking station, May 8, by a jury in Circuit court today.

POINCARE LONGS TO TALK TO MELLON, BUT HE BASKS AT RESORT

DINARD, Brittany, France, July 24.—(AP)—Andrew W. Mellon, American secretary of the treasury, newly arrived in France, spent the second day of his vacation quietly at this holiday spot near the Normandy-Brittany borderline. He was seemingly unmindful of the presence of Benjamin Strong, governor of the Federal Reserve bank of New York; Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, within reach in London; Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, reported at a Dutch seaside resort; and Premier Poincare, quoted as desirous of talking with him informally regarding the American-French debts.

Secretary Mellon plans to motor to Rome by easy stages through Brittany and the Pyrenees, but keeping his itinerary a secret in order to avoid newspaper men, camera men and politicians. He may perhaps regale himself by attendance at a number of local religious fêtes of a picturesque character now being celebrated in Brittany.

Through Theodore Rousseau of the Guaranty Trust company, who accompanies him, Mr. Mellon let it be known this evening that the one person he was principally interested in seeing in Europe was his daughter, Ailsa, now in Rome with her husband, the American vice consul, David K. E. Bruce. He will not visit Paris until he has seen the young couple in Italy, and then, if M. Poincare wishes a conference with him, he naturally would not refuse.

DEATH AFTER FIGHT LAID TO HEART DISEASE

Deputy Coroner J. J. Echenseld yesterday ruled that no inquest on the death of Charles Pezolt, south side restaurant owner, would be necessary after a coroner's physician had pronounced Pezolt a victim of heart disease.

Pezolt died yesterday morning at his home, 6540 Woodlawn avenue, after he had told Grand Crossing police he had struck his head on a stone step outside his restaurant, 7127 South Chicago avenue, while attempting to eject two drunken men from his place of business.

A physician who attended him after the accident told him he was not seriously injured but advised him to go to his home, Pezolt said before he died. William Peebles, 7503 De Soto avenue, arrested on suspicion of having been one of the men whom the restaurant owner sought to eject, was released after the deputy coroner's decision.

ANTI-KLAN RIOT THREAT WORRIES IOWA OFFICIALS

Corning, Ia., July 24.—(AP)—Anti-klan demonstrations during the last 24 hours have produced a tense situation here. Tonight County Attorney Ed Fackler announced himself ready to appeal to Governor Hammill for a proclamation of martial law and the protection of state troopers in case of further disturbances.

Investigation of last night's disorders in which a mob of about 75 persons attempted to waylay a large group of Ku Klux Klansmen on their way to a meeting will lead to information being filed against more than forty citizens, some of them prominent, Sheriff J. S. Coakley said.

The sheriff said charges of mob violence and inciting a riot would be brought against the demonstrators before the grand jury in September. He declined to name the persons.

Port Colborne, Ont., July 24.—(AP)—Traffic in the Welland canal was halted today because the Lake Gradan, a steel steamer bought by Henry Ford, bound for Detroit for scrapping, is wedged in the top lock of the canal. Five tugs were trying to pull the vessel free of the lock.

ONE LIFTING OF LINK SPAN COSTS 3,000 HOUR DELAY

Motors Jam Boulevard as Bridge Is Repaired.

Chicago motorists, wedged immovably in the south bound lanes of Michigan avenue between Chicago avenue and the river, lost exactly 3,000 hours of time yesterday as the result of one lifting of the Michigan avenue link bridge to allow one boat to proceed down the river.

The single lift cost Chicago people 125 days in suspended time any way the engineers and traffic authorities could figure the incident.

Tieup at Peak of Traffic.

The tieup came shortly after noon and at the peak of the Saturday traffic rush hour, when one of the web safety barriers that blocks the roadway when the bridge is lifted stuck after the spans had been lowered into place. The barrier was down for 30 minutes, blocking off the southbound side of the bridge and banking up the traffic in four solid lines north beyond Chicago avenue. Bridge tenders finally ended the snarl when they removed the barrier, but not before every car driver using the boulevard had been delayed.

Estimates of Time Lost.

Here is the way traffic engineers estimate the loss of time in this specific instance of bridge lifting:

Approximately 2,000 automobiles use the southbound half of the bridge in 30 minutes, according to official traffic counts. These cars carry 6,000 people. Each passenger in the waiting cars spent 30 minutes while the barrier was down, or a total of 180,000 minutes. Carrying the total further the loss was 3,000 hours, or 125 days.

While the hours piled up on the boulevard, the single privileged boat went on its solitary way down the river, hooting derisively.

RIOTS SPREAD IN JAPAN; POLICE ATTACKED BY MOB

TOKIO, July 24.—(AP)—Further riots, following on those at Nagano, are reported from various sections of Japan. In the latest disorder a mob attacked a police station at Mikawa, Tochigi prefecture, last night. The mob was angered because of the abolition of two police stations under retrenchment orders. Several were wounded and twenty persons arrested. Suspension of police stations caused the riots at Nagano. Several smaller disturbances occurred in other parts of the country. The government believes that opposition parties may be instigating the riots.

"LET'S PAY OUR DEBTS LIKE MEN," BRITON COUNSELS

Scores Churchill and Mellon for Row.

LONDON, July 24.—(AP)—In a long article dealing with the debt question, J. L. Garvin, editor of the Sunday Observer, asks why the British chancellor of the exchequer, Winston Churchill, and the American secretary of the treasury, Andrew Mellon, cannot leave alone "this ugly international controversy, which unless controlled threatens to flare like naphtha."

"Stop Screaming."

"There are steady hands and decent hearts enough on both sides," he continues. "Let them work with might and main to stop Europe's screaming at America and America's sermonizing Europe. The obvious course for both Churchill and Mellon, as statesmen, is either to talk about this miserable business privately or not talk at all."

"When Europe cries 'Shylock' America cries 'Sponger,'" says the writer. "If American credits are wanted, there must be civility as well as stability."

Urges Britons Pay Up.

Remarking that the European nations in concert may be driven to diminish their imports from America, Mr. Garvin repeats the belief that cancellation of the debts would have been the best policy, but adds: "The nation signed the Baldwin agreement; let us stick to it like men."

ACCUSED BY DALE, OFFICIAL STOPS SALE OF PAPERS

Muncie, Ind., July 24.—[Special.]—Sales of the Muncie Post-Democrat, the weekly publication edited by George R. Dale, anti-Ku Klux Klan editor, was stopped in the leading news stand here today through a threat of prosecution made to Arch M. Reed by Wilbur R. Ryman, acting prosecuting attorney. Dale has gained nation-wide prominence in the last few weeks through the contempt of court charge, appealed this week to the United States Supreme court.

Ryman who last week was in charge of the investigation being conducted by the Delaware county grand jury and was excluded from the grand jury room when the inquisitorial body began an inquiry of an alleged swindling scheme said to have been perpetrated by Alpha L. Holiday, former federal prison inmate, was referred to Dale in an account carried in this week's issue of the Dale publication, issued today.

Accompanied by three policemen, Ryman went to the Reed place of business and threatened prosecution of Reed unless he ceased sale of the papers at once. No formal charges were instituted.

Dan Dale, 18 year old son of the militant editor and publisher, when informed of the acting prosecutor's action, stationed himself just outside the doorway at the Reed stand and continued sale of the papers. He was not molested and other street salesmen continued to cry out the "Post Democrat" without interference.

PAYNE SAYS FRANCE WILL NOT PAY US TILL GERMANY PAYS HER

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[Special.]—Doubt that France ever will approve a debt settlement with the United States which does not contain a guaranty clause linked with German reparations payments was expresser by John Barton Payne of Chicago, chairman of the American Red Cross, today, following his return from a Red Cross meeting in Paris.

JOHN BARTON PAYNE.

"The root of dissatisfaction in France over the debt funding agreement lies in the fact that the agreement gives France no guarantee that Germany will be made to meet her obligations," said Mr. Payne.

"France realizes that it cannot possibly meet the payments according to the agreement unless Germany meets her indemnity payments to France."

Canoe Upsets; 3 Boys Saved by Evanston Coast Guard

Members of the Evanston coast guard commanded by Capt. O. W. Fricke, yesterday rescued three boys whose canoe had capsized three-quarters of a mile off Central street, Evanston. The coast guard, notified of the youths' plight by telephone after they had been in the water for 45 minutes, found them clinging to the upturned canoe. None of the boys suffered any ill effects. Their names were not obtained.

Evanston Girl, 3, Killed by Fall from Porch

Gwendolyn Wood, 3 years old, was killed yesterday when she fell from a second floor porch at her home, 910 Foster street, Evanston. She was the daughter of George W. Wood, a druggist. Her mother gave her permission in the afternoon to go to a sandpile in the yard. Half an hour later the child's body was found near the porch

LAKE SHIP LOSES RACE TO ESCAPE SEIZURE BY U. S.

Charge Ownership Law Was Violated.

Mackinac Island, Mich., July 24.—(AP)—The steamer United States, en route from Chicago to Canada, was stopped by a coast guard cutter on orders from federal officials and brought into port here today under guard. The steamer was said to have left Chicago without clearance papers.

Second Ship Eludes Watchers.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 24.—(AP)—Eluding efforts of federal authorities to seize it, the steamer Arizona of the Peninsula and Northern Navigation company was "somewhere on Lake Michigan" tonight. Walter J. Wilde, collector of customs at Milwaukee, was at the docks awaiting arrival of the boat with orders to seize it for an alleged violation of federal laws requiring ships in coastwise trade to be at least 75 per cent American owned.

Wilde abandoned his vigil at 7:30 p. m., but left deputies on guard throughout the night, although he said the navigation company had apparently been warned. Another ship of the company, the United States, was seized at Mackinac island today.

Owned by Canadians, Claim.

Wilde recently received orders from the department of commerce at Washington to seize the ships. The steamship company obtained a temporary injunction restraining seizure, which was dissolved today.

The government contended that the navigation company was more than 25 per cent controlled by Canadians and that the ships were mortgaged and payment guaranteed by the Matthews Steamship company, a Canadian concern.

CONFESSES HE'S ESCAPED CONVICT.

Herbert Stuehmer, formerly of Davenport, Ia., admitted yesterday after he had been arrested in Schiller Park that he was an scaped convict from the Michigan prison at Ionia. He will be held for the Michigan authorities.

ANNUAL UPLIFT COST $3,000,000 AT WASHINGTON

Reformers Have Spent 20 Million Since War.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[Special.]—Uplift organizations either centered or represented in the District of Columbia are costing at the lowest estimate approximately three million dollars a year for national administration. They have levied a total of at least twenty million dollars in expenses since the world war.

This, roughly, is the requirement of a few of the outstanding organizations like the Anti-Saloon league, the International Reform federation, the National League of Women Voters, the Anti-Cigaret alliance, the Lord's Day alliance, and the various groups behind American participation in the world court or some other international affiliation.

The sum does not represent the grand total of the "uplift lobby."

Reticent About Telling.

Some of the uplifters, oddly enough, will not tell how much they are spending, on the plea that it is not a matter of public interest. Secrecy about some of the more prominent contributors was demanded recently by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, before the senate campaign investigating committee.

The same principle is followed by others who resent efforts to inform the public of the amounts they are spending.

Some of the High Spots.

Here are a few of the prominent uplift groups and their annual cost:

Anti-Saloon League of America, annual average expenditures, not including individual state organizations, about	$ 700,000
National League of Women Voters, of which Mrs. Carrie E. Chapman Catt is the honorary president, for the budget of the current year	137,000
The International Reform federation, with Dr. Robert Watson, president, founded by the late Wilbur F. Crafts, raised for the year ending June 30, 1925	63,807
National Council for Prevention of War, with Frederick J. Libby as executive secretary and Jane Addams as first vice chairman, annual expenditures, approximately	59,160
National Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc., which backed the child labor amendment and maternity act and other reform measures, estimated expenditures for national office alone, and but a small part of the grand total in states and local communities	50,000
Interparliamentary union, Senator William B. McKinley [Rep., Ill.], president, toward the expenses of which the government advanced $50,000, nearly all of which was repaid, cost	49,650
The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, with Jane Addams as the international president, annually	47,800
The American Peace society, of which Representative Theodore E. Burton [Rep., O.] is president, Dr. Arthur Deerin Call is secretary, with total receipts for the year ended April 30, 1926	27,196
People's Legislative service, a fact-finding organization for the progressive forces, in line with the work of the Council for Progressive Political Action, fostered by the late Senator La Follette, for 1925	22,899
International New Thought alliance, Washington office only, annually about	20,000
National Civil Service Reform league, which has for its purpose the improvement of the personnel system of government employés, annually, about	25,000
Anti-Cigaret alliance, annual cost, estimated as conservative	10,000
National Temperance bureau and other organizations, represented by Edwin C. Dinwiddie	17,000
American Genetic association, increasing knowledge of heredity, with about 3,500 members, annual cost, approximately	12,000
Farmers' National council, and the People's Reconstruction league, which combines work for farm relief with various other reform measures, annually, about	8,500
Sundry local relief or reform organizations in the District of Columbia, some of which are engaged in purely charitable undertakings, expend, according to the Council of Social Agencies, every year, in excess of	1,000,000

Carnegie Endowment Cost.

One of the largest organizations working for peace is, of course, the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, for which the steel magnate, the late Andrew Carnegie, set aside a trust fund of $10,000,000. It is in a different category from the others in the nature of its work. Its expenditures since 1911 have amounted to an aggregate of $7,417,498. In that year the total was $114,051. The highest in any one year was $896,062, in 1922. In 1923 the total was $672,543, and in 1924 it was $492,317. The first half of 1925 it was $267,786.

The Carnegie Endowment uses the interest derived from the ten million dollar fund. Its work has been conducted on a broad scale, with subventions granted for a number of activities. The American Peace society has received an annual subvention of varying amounts. For the fiscal year 1923 the amount was $15,000 and for the fiscal year 1924 it was $7,500.

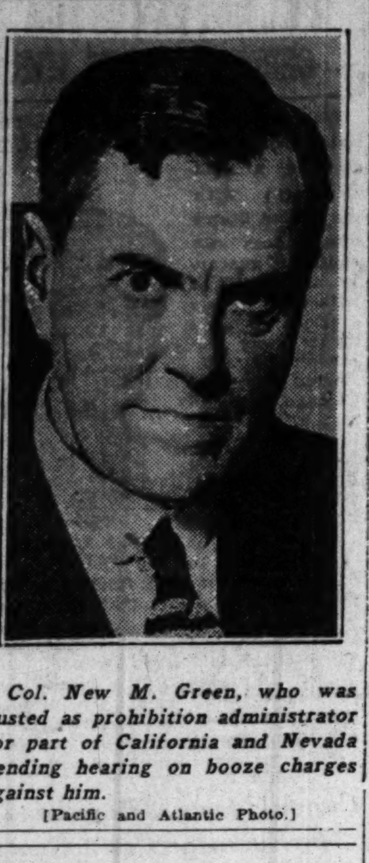
The total expenditures for the fiscal year 1924 of $492,317 were divided as follows: Administration and sundry purposes, $92,518.14; division of intercourse and education, $124,168; division of international law, $146,954; division of economics and history, $113,629; special appropriations and allotments, $15,047.

How Parent-Teacher Congress Lives.

The outlay by the reform movements for the other national organizations is but a fraction of what is collected from churches, from individual memberships, from subscriptions to magazines, and local "drives" of various kinds.

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc., for instance, looks after the welfare of children in the home and in the community and elsewhere. It backed the maternity act that was written into law a few years ago, and the child labor amendment which, on its first round of the states, seeking ratification, was defeated. This organization has a national office that costs conservatively only $50,000. There is a membership of one million. In some of the communities the fees are one dollar a head. Five cents is all that goes to the national headquarters. Just what the total is of all the units that form the basis of this congress is not ascertainable.

DRY CHIEF OUSTED



Col. New M. Green, who was ousted as prohibition administrator for part of California and Nevada pending hearing on booze charges against him.

[Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

In the same way it is difficult to compute, from the visible expenditures of offices at Washington, the cost of the reform movement of other organizations throughout the country.

Recent Big Lobby Work.

The biggest lobbying operations of recent years have been carried on in the congress just adjourned, being engineered by the Anti-Saloon league in support of prohibition and by the league of nations, world court, and world peace societies, which aided in putting the world court resolution through the senate.

While the Anti-Saloon league is the oldest and biggest lobby operating in Washington and all state capitals, the world court forces accomplished one of the most extraordinary lobbying feats ever witnessed here. Several hundred of these organizations propagandizing for the league of nations and world court were combined into one powerful agency by Edward Bok, formerly editor of the Ladies' Home Journal and donor of the Bok world peace plan award.

Bok Backs World Court Lobby.

Mr. Bok financed the world court lobby at an estimated cost of several millions of dollars. At one time there were several hundred persons on his pay roll, employed in propagandizing the constituencies of senators for the world court and organizing meetings to encourage the dispatching of letters and telegrams to senators to create the impression that there was a great demand back home for adoption of the world court resolution.

So successful were Bok's operations that an appearance was given of ardent enthusiasm for the court in such states as Illinois, Iowa, Pennsylvania, and Oregon, where senators who voted for the resolution have been defeated; and in Indiana, where Senators Watson [Rep.] and Robinson [Rep.] saved themselves from defeat by voting against the measure.

A special senate committee undertook to get Mr. Bok to say what he was spending, but finally gave it up because he would not tell. Repeated efforts were made by several on the committee to persuade him to give the information. One of these was Senator Caraway [Dem., Ark.], who subsequently introduced a bill to require lobbyists to be registered. Mr. Bok refused to tell him how much money he had made available.

Among the organizations which Mr. Bok had combined into the big group for the main drive were 93 that were chosen for the Coöperating Council of the American Peace Award. This number embraced League of Nations Association, National Industrial Conference Board, Foreign Policy association, American Association for International Conciliation, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the World Court league, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, National League of Women Voters, American Jewish committee, international committee of the Y. M. C. A., Church Peace union, Institute of International Education, the National Council for the Prevention of War.

Anti-Saloonists Most Active.

The Anti-Saloon league unquestionably has been the most active over the longest period of time, its legislative bureau at Washington being directed by Wayne B. Wheeler, the general counsel. Backed by the many millions which the league has collected over a long period of years, he has exerted an enormous influence at both ends of Pennsylvania avenue, holding congress in line for prohibition with one hand while controlling with the other the administrative machinery of the law, dictating appointments and policies in and for the prohibition enforcement unit.

It is he who, with a corps of watchers in the senate and house galleries and "insiders" in the enforcement unit, directs the showers of telegrams and letters upon wavering congressmen and officials.

Costly Fight Against Modification.

Material evidence of what the league's lobby really means in expense was given the Reed senate investigating committee. The national organization and its subsidiary leagues in the several states are estimated to have raised and spent in 22 states more than $12,000,000 to prevent modification of the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, as well as to defeat liberal candidates for congress and the state legislatures.

Closely associated with its work, but under a different organization, and with separate headquarters at Washington, is the Intercollegiate Prohibition association. A vice president is Howard H. Russell, founder of the Anti-Saloon league, while the chairman of the executive committee is Ernest H. Cherrington, general manager of the league's publishing interests. Insisting that this association operated chiefly among college students, its officials here were loath to discuss the sources or amounts of their annual funds.

Dinwiddie's Lobbying Success.

One of the best known of the older lobbyists at Washington, and the man who is said to have done more than any other individual to have the 18th amendment adopted, is Edwin C. Dinwiddie. Soon after his notable success Washington was surprised to see him drop out of the league and be succeeded by Wheeler. His leaving is said to have resulted from a clash between the two men over the political methods of the league.

Mr. Dinwiddie has been working since for three other dry organizations—the Association in Support of Prohibition, the National Temperance bureau, and the National Grand lodge, International Order of Good Templars. He is acting today for the several organizations listed and operating, he asserts, on about $16,000 or $17,000 a year, which is contributed proportionately by these groups.

One of the most radical of the reform groups has been the International Reform federation, superintendent of which is the Rev. William Sheafe Chase, D. D. He is one of the active reformers in Washington, spending much of his time before committees and with members urging the adoption of Sunday blue laws, tighter prohibition enforcement, and movie censorship. Of the total of $63,807 expended in fiscal 1925 about $26,000 was for the Washington staff of the federation.

One of the vice presidents of this organization is Dr. Clarence True Wilson. He is general secretary also of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals. A request was made at the offices of this latter organization for a statement of the amount of money expended annually, but the information was refused. The explanation was given that it was not a matter in which the public would be interested.

Close Tab on Reform Movements.

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has a small office at Washington. It is one of the largest of the organizations that take an interest in reform movements. It conducted a few years ago a monster convention here for the discussion of a number of social problems, and keeps close tab on reform movements.

The various lobbies for world peace proposals of one kind or another, as indicated in the testimony of Mr. Bok, seem to have unlimited funds. They range from those which conduct a propaganda in support of the league of nations to those who favor the abolition of all military training in the schools.

Pacifists Give Liberally.

One of the most effective of these groups has been the National League of Women Voters. It received last year $47,318.50 in contributions from state leagues and some $75,000 more from friends and sympathizers. The National Council for Prevention of War played a leading rôle in the world court movement with the league, as did the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. These three last year spent close to a quarter of a billion dollars. They were but three of the organizations in the drive for the world court.

The National Council for Prevention of War affords an illustration of what is true of most other organizations which maintain headquarters at Washington. They represent many. The national council acts as the Washington clearing house for 35 affiliated groups from the National Y. W. C. A. and the United Society of Christian Endeavor to the Fellowship of Reconciliation and the Fellowship of Youth for Peace. It has a list of 25,000 names to be circularized when there is need to bring pressure on congress.

The American Peace society includes among its directors Representative Burton, Senator McKinley, Representative A. J. Montague [Dem., Va.], and Representative Walter A. Morgan of Oak Park, Ill. "It has spent its men and its money in arousing the thoughts and the consciences of statesmen to the ways which are better than war, and of men and women everywhere to the gifts which America can bring to the altar of a governed world."

Many Brands of Uplifters.

Miscellaneous groups are seated at Washington. They are interlocking sometimes in character, having on their boards and lists of officers the same names. Miss Jane Addams of Chicago is prominent as a member of many of them. Senator McKinley is on several.

The uplifters are working usually on some main thing as a major activity, with plenty of side line matters. Oftentimes some leader comes along and unites their forces as in the instance where Mr. Bok acted for the world court move.

There is the American Birth Control league, Inc., headed by Margaret Sanger. It is one of the newest of the organizations at Washington, but has been active in circulating literature and arousing interest in preventing the human race from growing too rapidly.

Then comes the American Genetic association, also one of the more recent arrivals here. It is confining its activities just now to research and issues the Journal of Heredity, and is attempting to increase knowledge concerning heredity.

The Anti-Cigaret alliance of the District of Columbia tells its purpose in its name, and is headed by Dr. D. H. Kress of Takoma Park sanitorium, a Seventh Day Adventist institution. The anti-tobacco people, who have an organization at Pittsburgh, did not come in with this group. The district alliance is part of the Anti-Cigaret alliance with headquarters at Indianapolis and is not at the present time undertaking to foster legislation, but that may come later. One bill to prevent women from smoking cigarets in the District of Columbia was tried a few years ago but met with a miserable failure.

Among the farm organizations at Washington, some of which are in uplift effort along with other things, is the Farmers' National council and the People's Reconstruction league, which are more or less one and the same.

Benjamin C. Marsh conducts this work and has been very active before congressional committees on numerous bills, farm and otherwise. He testified in 1922 before the house committee on banking and currency that he was "a single taxer." It was brought out that an early contributor was Mrs. Fels, from the Joe Fels fund. This is not now available for the organization, but helped it in its early days.

The Federated Farm Women of America, with Mrs. Aida Mayo as chairman, has an office at Washington. Its object is to establish contact between the country and city women—to encourage more direct buying from the country.

Women Keep Up Fight.

Equal rights for women is one of the pleas of the National Woman's party, which is the successor to the organization that used to picket the White House in the Wilson administration. It is working now throughout the states in an effort to get a new amendment to the constitution giving women equal rights with men in a number of legal matters, and is headed by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York City.

There exists in Washington a Council of Social Agencies, an organization which is endeavoring to act in an advisory capacity to various groups in the District of Columbia. Some of these are interested purely in charitable or philanthropic work, but most are interested in reform measures that come forward. They backed a mothers' aid bill that was put through the last congress for the District of Columbia. The council itself has sixty organizations. There are as many more outside, and the total spent is thought to be more than a million dollars a year.

These are but part of the "uplift lobby." Its various offices are scattered throughout the city, some small and some large. A member of congress once estimated that their combined salaries would exceed the $5,310,000 paid every year to the national lawmakers they try to influence.

Dictator to Close All Night Life in Brussels

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRUSSELS, July 24.—The Belgian capital, reputed to be the gayest city in Europe, is in for a period of penitence. The cabinet is seeking the passage of King Albert's decree closing all public establishments, restaurants, cafés, and night clubs at midnight, under a penalty of a 100,000 franc ($2,410) fine and eight days in jail. He also will examine a project subjecting foreigners to a tax amounting to 50 per cent of the cost of their hotel rooms.

SECOND EDITION OF EUCHARISTIC BOOK IS PRINTED

Displaying every evidence of becoming a best seller, the booklet containing the stories of James O'Donnell Bennett on the Eucharistic congress placed on sale only a few days ago at THE TRIBUNE Public Service Bureau, 11 South Dearborn street, has already gone into the second edition. Five thousand copies comprised the first edition. Ten thousand more were received yesterday, to be placed on sale at once.

The first day's selling of this inexpensive memento of the congress indicated the popularity of Mr. Bennett's articles. The booklet is priced at 11 cents, is profusely illustrated, and is fittingly bound in a cardinal red jacket. Mail orders will be filled at 18 cents each, covering the cost of mailing.

SOCIETY FLOCKS TO NORTH SHORE FLORAL EXHIBIT

North shore society flocked yesterday to the Gorton school in Lake Forest to view exhibits in the annual flower show sponsored by the North Shore Horticultural society.

More than 150 entries were made and the banks of bloom won high praise from the spectators. Mrs. John Borden was declared winner in the class for small garden effects. Others who took first prizes were Mrs. Philip Armour, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. William V. Kelley, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick and Mrs. John T. Pirie.

The exhibit will continue today at the school.

OOLIDGE AND WILBUR PLAN GIANT AIRSHIP

Be 3 Times Larger than Lost Shenandoah.

ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Paul Smith's, N. Y., July 24.—[Spe- al]—Construction next year of a y airship three times the size of Shenandoah, which was destroyed a storm, was discussed today by ident Coolidge and Secretary of Navy Wilbur, who is a week-end at White Pine camp.

The President and the navy minis- spent two hours at the executive discussing naval policies and the of the 1928 budget.

No definite decision was reached on question of beginning construction the airship, Secretary Wilbur said the conference. Congress has au- ized two lighter than air craft for navy and it is now up to the Pres- t to determine when to ask for the cific appropriation for construction. ship contemplated would have a content of 6,000,000 cubic feet and uising radius of 6,000 miles.

Wants Lost Ship Replaced.

Mr. Coolidge stated some time ago he favors replacement of the nandoah not only in the interest providing for national defense, but the purpose of stimulating commer- aviation.

"We also went over the plans in a eral way for the development of al aviation," said Mr. Wilbur. These plans are now being worked under the supervision of the new istant secretary of the navy, Mr. rner. I am not at liberty to say many additional planes we con- mplate asking congress to appropri- for, but it will be in accord with five year program authorized by gress and I can say that it will resent a larger development of avia- by the navy than hitherto."

To Study Pacific Defenses.

Secretary Wilbur will leave Monday Puget Sound to enter upon a de- led inspection of the naval forces defenses in the Pacific from ska to San Pedro, Cal.

No immediate action looking to fur- development of Pacific coast de- ses is contemplated by the Coolidge ministration. The necessity of the ablishment of an adequate naval on the Pacific coast, presumably San Francisco bay, has been point- out repeatedly by the general board the navy and the Pearl Harbor base the Hawaiian islands has been own wholly inadequate to accom- dation of the fleet in time of peace, uch less in time of war.

Would Worry Other Nations.

President Coolidge, however, has not ked with favor upon the develop- nt of these defenses at this time. view is that such an undertaking uld be regarded by other nations, sumably Japan in particular, as a paration for war and would stim- a new competition in prepared- and become a source of interna- friction.

For the same reason, the President sed to sanction further steps ard elevation of the guns of our tleships, so as to make the range our guns equal to that of the itish and Japanese, and rejected the w that maintenance of the 5-5-3 ra- required us to build cruisers and er auxiliary craft until our navy uld be on a par with the British each class of ships.

The President took the position that petition in preparedness produced world war and that it is our duty do everything possible to prevent vival of such competition.

Critics of the administration contend the Coolidge policy is pacifism mad and that the President is ming a grave responsibility in fail- to provide for a development of cific coast defenses, which would quire not less than ten years to make quate to the demand on the fleet time of war. The President main- s that our navy and other sea de- built and building are suffi- tly strong for the protection of the ntry and that all he has set himself inst is an overdoing of prepared- leading to militarism.

HATS OFF TO SODA SQUIRT, FOR HE'S A UNION MAN NOW

700 Join Old Barkeep Organization.

All those hearty fellows, the structural iron worker, the steamfitter, the blacksmith, the drop forger, the molder of steel—the hairy chested tribe that love the union label—will be gratified to hear this morning that they can now have their ice cream on a strictly 100 per cent union basis.

In other words, introducing herewith the Drug Store Cowboys' union.

In these days when everything must bear the union label or the consequences, when the man who makes the bread and the man who makes the coffins, and he who lowers all that is mortal of us at last into the grave, all are union men—in these days shall the soda squirt be out done?

Hundreds in Union Now.

No, he too is a union man. At least 700 of him is—or are—in Chicago, and the rest of them are fast joining, according to reports from the labor front.

Specifically the new white apron-towel-on-arm organization is to be known as the Soda Dispensers' union. It is to be a branch of the International Alliance of Hotel and Restaurant Employés and Bartenders—the tail end being an obsolescence, but retained in memoriam, so to speak.

And, says Edward Parlee, veteran labor leader, who is organizing it, it should be a good thing and a public benefit.

They'll Be Regular Fellows.

"For," continues Mr. Parlee, "who of us, has not been insulted, snubbed or otherwise maltreated by the proud and haughty soda dispenser? Who has not stood before some white marbled counter and no attention paid him until at last the young man in the white apron deigned to give him a withering glance?"

And the organizer goes on to say that he will change all that. It was Mr. Parlee who organized the old bartenders' union—rest its soul—and at least a certain percentage of the male population above thirty knows what a genial fellow the bartender was—how neat, how spick and span.

So watch the soda jerker.

3 DIE AS AUTO HITS TRUCK ON DUNES HIGHWAY

No Rear Light, Charge; Driver Arrested.

Two boys and a woman were killed early yesterday and a fourth member of their party was possibly fatally injured when the automobile in which they were riding crashed at high speed into a truck which had been parked without lights on the Dunes highway, ten miles east of Gary, Ind.

WALTER DITCHBURNE.

MRS. LORA CURRIER.

WILLIAM CURRIER.

The dead, all residents of Chicago, were Mrs. Lora Currier, 45 years old, 6808 Normal avenue; her son, William Currier, 11 years old, and Walter Ditchburne, 12 years old, 6812 Normal avenue. James Currier, 19 years old, a brother of William, was taken to the Mercy hospital in Gary, where little hope for his recovery was held. He was driver of the car.

Hold Driver for Manslaughter.

Walter Hughes of Miller, Ind., was taken into custody by the Porter county authorities and lodged in the Valparaiso jail on a charge of manslaughter. He was the driver of the truck and the authorities held that his failure to have tail lights on constituted criminal neglect.

Four deaths in Cook county yesterday as a result of automobile accidents raised the total since Jan. 1 to 459.

Teralla Mitchell, 4 years old, colored, 1220 South Peoria street, died at the county hospital. He was struck July 17 near his home by a truck driven by Joseph Wozney, 847 North Winchester avenue.

David Segrue, 66 years old, 7316 Yale avenue, died at the German Deaconess hospital of injuries sustained on July 14 when he was struck at 39th street and South Parkway by a car driven by J. H. Cogwell, 422 East 42d place.

Injured when he fell from a truck at Division and Clark streets, F. Lindslee, 19 years old, of 2447 South St. Louis avenue, died a few hours later at the Columbus Memorial hospital. Stanley Fogelman, 6 years old, who was struck near his home, 5606 South Michigan avenue, on Thursday, died at the Wesley Memorial hospital.

Death Quiz Is Delayed.

Carlton Glenn, an auto salesman, alleged to have driven away at high speed after his automobile had struck and killed two men near Hinsdale on Thursday, was taken to the inquest yesterday under police guard. Eddie Boding, 17 years old, who was given a lift by Glenn, asserted that he was in the car and that Glenn begged him not to disclose his identity. The youth's conscience impelled him to tell his story on Friday, however.

The inquest was continued to tomorrow to permit the taking of further testimony. Meanwhile the salesman, was held in the Westmount jail. The men killed were Kuly Vulchess and Thomas Tate, laborers, who were working on a gas main when they were struck.

Two automobiles occupied by residents of Chicago crashed yesterday near Madison, Wis. Mrs. Philip Walsh, 1226 West Jackson boulevard, and Mrs. William Drea, 2709 East 76th. street, were seriously injured and were taken to a Madison hospital.

Sailor Wrecks Police Flivver.

Adam Doersch, 21 years old, 1532 George street, a sailor at the Great Lakes Naval Training station, led police a dizzy race through north side streets until his automobile crashed into a light post at Wrightwood and Greenview avenues. The chase began when Doersch, said to have been intoxicated, drove his car into a police flivver, overturning it. The policemen fired a number of shots and finally captured Dorsch after his car was wrecked. He was locked up.

Quiz Motorist Over Two Deaths

CALL BROTHER OF FRANK M'ERLANE SHOTGUN TARGET

Vincent McErlane, one of the leaders of a south side bootlegging ring, narrowly escaped death Friday night when unidentified assassins poured their shotgun slugs into the body of John Conlon, according to the testimony of two men and two women at the Conlon inquest yesterday.

The shooting occurred in the saloon of John Justinich, 6154 South Ashland avenue. McErlane, brother of the notorious Frank McErlane, was seated with Conlon when the killers appeared.

The witnesses asserted that McErlane fled when the killers appeared and fired at Conlon. The latter was a minor figure in the McErlane-Saltis gang. The inquest was continued pending a hunt for Vincent McErlane.

Justinich and his bartender, Joseph Spinola, will be turned over to federal authorities because 3.5 per cent beer was found in the saloon. Their attorney, James Burke, promised that he would produce McErlane for questioning tomorrow.

Police attribute the killing to revenge for the shooting of Frank De Laurentis and John Tuccello, bootleggers, several months ago.

FRIEND OF YANK EX-CONSUL DENIES MEXICAN CHARGE

Emphatic exception to accusations made by the Mexican press against Edward H. Thompson, former United States consul in Yucatan, to the effect that Mr. Thompson removed illegally many valuable archaeological objects from the country, is taken by W. E. Underwood of Cleveland, O., a close friend of the ex-consul, in a letter to THE TRIBUNE.

"Mr. Thompson went to Yucatan thirty years ago as American consul with the avowed intention of carrying on archaeological investigations in Chichen Itza," Mr. Underwood says. "During most of his years in the ancient Maya city, he has been in the employ of the Peabody museum of Harvard university and all of the antiquarian treasures raised by him from the sacred well at Chi-chen Itza have been consigned to the Peabody museum. Nothing was diverted to Mr. Thompson's personal profit. Nothing he has done was at any time secret or clandestine."

PRINCE ILL, BUT DE RIVERA KEEPS DOCTOR IN JAIL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, July 23.—Spain is sympathizing with its king, whose son and heir, the prince of Asturias, has taken a turn for the worse in health, according to reports from San Sebastian, while the royal family's physician is being held under lock and key by the Primo de Rivera directorate, charged with treason.

The prince has been under the special care of Dr. Maranon, now in prison in connection with the abortive conspiracy late in June.

Dictator de Rivera has refused to release the doctor so he may care for the prince, whose health has always been poor.

Spanish Generals Freed, Report.

HENDAYL, France, July 24.—[U.P.]—Reliable reports from Madrid today said the Spanish government has released Gen. Valerino Weyler and Gen. Aguilera, who were held for alleged complicity in the recent revolutionary plot.

CANADA BOOZE TRUSTS WAR FOR DETROIT TRADE

Little Fellows Combine to Fight Brewers.

Detroit, Mich., July 24.—[Special.]—A war in which virtually all the liquor exporters on the Canadian side of the Detroit river are involved will begin early next week when organization of the second "rum trust" on the border will be completed.

The battle to decide which of the two combines will supply Detroit and nearby American cities with Canadian beer and liquor will take place over a 40 mile lake and river front extending from Belle river, 18 miles east of Windsor, to Amherstburg, 22 miles south and west of that city.

The Bermuda Exporters, Inc., a powerful amalgamation of more than a dozen Ontario breweries with a capital estimated at several millions of dollars, will be on one side. On the other will be exporters "frozen out" by the brewery trust which has refused to continue stocking the smaller exporters' warehouses with beer and ale.

Join to Stop Price Cutting.

The breweries combined more than ten days ago in an attempt to end the cutting of beer prices at export docks. They at once raised the prices of Detroit-bound beer at the dock from $2.50 to $3.50 a case and now demand cash payment in advance for all loads taken across the river by American runners.

When exporters not included in this organization sent their orders as usual to the breweries a week ago, the orders were refused.

"You cut our prices and we have been losing money by your business" the small exporters were told. "By handling our own product, we do not need to fear your competition."

This action threatened to eliminate many of the docks. The little fellow felt he was being squeezed by the brewers if he did not belong to the combine and many of them were not asked to join. Cross river runners' orders, almost invariably consisting of both liquor and beer, could not be filled at his docks. It would necessitate runners visiting more than one dock before their loads were taken aboard.

Concerned Over Legality.

"It was a case of fight the syndicate or close the docks and we do not intend to quit without a battle," one of the small exporters said today. "If we paid the combine the price they charge runners, we could still do our liquor business and have beer stocks on hand, but would not make any profit. Furthermore, this would not be legal and we had to find some other solution. We decided to join and fight it out."

The new organization will buy beer and ale from breweries not tied up with the brewery combine. This, they say, will lead to another price war on the river.

"There is no doubt the big organization controls many popular brands of Canadian beer and ale in demand in Detroit and Chicago 'blind pigs,' but if we undersell them it is more than probable we will surprise them by the amount of our business; anyway we will give them a run for their money," said another exporter.

Will Close Warehouses.

Plans for establishing one dock in each of the border cities are being completed today by the new export ring. This will lead to closing more than a dozen warehouses which have been operating on the river during the last five years. Most of these will be small export docks not included in the brewery combine, while others will close because they have no connection with either organization.

It is possible that the new price war will mean cheaper liquor and beer, but proprietors of liquor plants and saloons in the border cities are apprehensive of the result of this friction between the exporting combines. When plans of the two combines are complete less than a dozen warehouses will be in operation on the Canadian shores of Lake St. Clair and the Detroit river. This will be within a week, it was predicted today.

HORACE DODGE'S WIDOW FIGHTS GIFT TAX LAW

Questions the Legality of $25,848 Assessment.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[Special.]—Constitutionality of the gift tax is challenged in a case filed with the board of tax appeals today by attorneys for Mrs. Hugh Dillman, who at the time of her marriage, a few months ago, was the widow of Horace E. Dodge, Detroit automobile manufacturer.

MRS. HUGH DILLMAN.

Mrs. Dillman appealed from a tax amounting to $25,848 assessed against her in connection with gifts made in 1924 to members of her family aggregating $587,482. The recipients included Mr. and Mrs. Horace E. Dodge Jr., and their two children, Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell, daughter of Mrs. Dodge; James H. R. Cromwell, her husband, and a child of the Cromwells.

The gift tax was imposed for the first time under the new revenue act of 1924. It was repealed in the 1926 revenue act and at the same time retroactive reductions were made in rates for the period from 1924 to 1926. The $25,848 assessed against Mrs. Dillman represents the tax at the reduced rates of the 1926 act.

DIVORCE GRANTED TO CLARA HARCQ, FREED IN KILLING

After testifying in the same Waukegan courtroom where in March, 1925, she stood trial for the murder of her mother, Mrs. Clara Harcq, yesterday won a divorce from her husband, Albert Harcq, of Highland Park, codefendant in the murder trial.

Judge Claire C. Edwards, who presided at the trial which resulted in the acquittal of Mrs. Harcq and her husband for the fatal shooting of Mrs. Lillie Holt, ordered Harcq to pay his wife $100 a month alimony. It was understood that Harcq waived claims to property in Chicago owned jointly by the couple and to the cottage at Fox Lake, where the body of Mrs. Holt was found.

Mrs. Harcq produced witnesses to prove her contentions that Harcq had been habitually intoxicated during the last two years.

Mother Who Hurt Son for Theft Jailed for Year

"An apple never falls very far from the tree. If he is a bad boy, as you say, it isn't hard to see where he got it," Judge Henry M. Walker said yesterday in sentencing Mrs. Anna Jasulewicz, 47 years old, of 3222 Armitage avenue, to one year in the house of correction. She was charged with having hurled a heavy sugar bowl at her ten year old son, Joseph. The boy had stolen $2 from her pocketbook. Joseph is in charge of juvenile authorities.

HOLD YOUTH AFTER SLAYING.

William Haward, 23 years old, 3066 Calumet avenue, colored, was held by Wabash avenue police yesterday for the killing of Freeman Clark, 25 years old, with whom he lived, and who was shot after a disagreement over a card game Friday night.

SENATE SLUSH INQUIRY OPENS HERE TOMORROW

Seven Subpœnas Served; Insull Ready to Talk.

that Mr. Insull has admitted or will admit paying $100,000 to the Smith and $15,000 more to the Brennan campaigns, the Associated Press says:

"Samuel Insull, traction magnate, is ready to appear as a witness. His aids today denied vigorously that Insull had 'admitted' charges repeated in the senate that he contributed $100,000 to the campaign of Col. Frank L. Smith, Republican senate nominee, and $15,000 to the Brennan campaign. While Mr. Insull is ready to tell the committee all he knows, they said, about the senate campaigns and their financing, he will make no statement outside of the committee room where his testimony is taken."

Others to Be Called.

It is frankly stated by Chairman Reed that others besides those named in subpoenas will be called in as information is disclosed.

It is anticipated by local politicians that the Rev. Elmer Williams of the Better Government association will be asked to take the witness stand. He appealed to congress for an investigation of the power of gunmen, gangsters, and booze runners in Chicago politics. Mayor Dever made a trip to Washington to deny the Williams charges which clearly imply that he has some specific information on the workings of local political machines. There is no question that the senatorial inquisitors have the authority to take jurisdiction over the subject matter of the Rev. Mr. Williams' complaint, and they are expected to give him an opportunity to talk.

It would not be surprising if the senators would call in representatives of the Chicago crime commission. That organization has had the opportunity to collect some information regarding the part that criminals play in local politics and may have some information on parts played in the primary of April 13.

Others to Be Called.

It is assumed that the committee will call Allan F. Moore of Monticello, although no subpoena has been sent to the United States marshal at either Springfield or East St. Louis. He was the campaign manager of Frank L. Smith. By the same reasoning Henry I. Green, Urbana attorney, and Andrew Russel of Jacksonville, who managed certain phases of Senator McKinley's campaign, will also be asked to tell how much coin they distributed. The campaign managers of the Pennsylvania factions were interrogated. Numerous other witnesses are expected to be called as their names are developed in the testimony.

The hearings will be in the courtroom of Judge Wilkerson on the sixth floor of the federal building. New lights have been installed for the hearing, the marble polished and the bronze touched up. In the jury room the telegraph companies have installed nine telegraph wires. The headquarters of the committee will be at the Congress hotel, where rooms have been reserved for Senator Reed of Missouri, Senator La Follette of Wisconsin and Senator King of Utah. The other two members of the committee, Senator McNary of Oregon and Senator Goff of West Virginia, will not arrive for several days.

Missouri Banquet to Reed.

The first social affair for the senators will probably be next Tuesday evening. The Missouri society of Chicago sent out invitations yesterday to a banquet on that date in the Red room of the Hotel La Salle in honor of Senator James A. Reed. Thomas S. Hogan is in charge of the arrangements and Francis O'Shaughnessy is president of the society.

David S. Berry, sergeant at arms for the senate committee, is expected to arrive in Chicago today from Washington. To further assist in handling the crowd, serving subpoenas and like tasks, U. S. Marshal Palmer E. Anderson has assigned Capt. Hal Carr with Deputy Marshals Frank Otto, George Giles, and Roy Holcomb.

Senatorial Vote Involved in Primary Poll Thievery Mess

Irregularities of the April primaries in Chicago were shown yesterday to have included candidates for United States senator along with candidates for county offices and the Municipal court bench in the ever widening disclosures of stolen votes, stuffed ballot boxes, and common errors.

With the first scratching of the surface of the senatorial recount it appeared that there had been a comparatively honest and accurate tabulation of the vote on United States senator. But a little deeper dig yesterday indicated that the senatorial vote may be in a mess practically as bad as some of the local offices.

Pushes Senatorial Recount.

County Judge Jarecki yesterday put the whole force of the election commission on the job of recounting the senatorial vote. This was done for the benefit of Senator Reed's slush fund committee that opens its inquiry into campaign expenses of the Illinois senatorial primaries tomorrow.

The county judge temporarily suspended the recount on other offices while the thirty-one teams are rechecking the senatorial vote at the request of the senate committee.

Judge Jarecki ordered a senatorial recount in wards 18, 20, 21, 24, 25, 26, 27, and 29, where some of the greatest irregularities yet exposed were uncovered. In these wards Frank L. Smith, Republican nominee for senator, lost 968 votes in the recount and Senator William B. McKinley, whom Smith defeated, lost 820.

George E. Brennan, Democratic nominee, lost 2,672. James T. McDermott gained 594 and James O. Monroe gained 461.

20th Ward Men Summoned.

Special State's Attorney Charles A. McDonald, in charge of the special vote fraud grand jury which has indicted ninety-nine men and ten women, judges, clerks, and precinct watchers, issued subpoenas yesterday for twenty precinct captains from the 20th ward, where Sanitary Trustee Morris Eller is Republican boss.

They were summoned to appear before the grand jury tomorrow morning. In a conference yesterday Judge Jarecki, Lloyd D. Heth, assistant to Special Prosecutor McDonald, and Joseph B. Fleming, attorney for the election commission, decided that all election officials who fail to account for apparent frauds in their precincts or explain the vote juggling system when summoned before the special grand jury will be cited for contempt of court by the county judge. Such citation carries possible jail sentences.

McDonald Summons Eller.

Eller himself has been summoned to appear before the grand jury by McDonald. Eller is the first of the more powerful ward leaders to be summoned. He is at Mackinac island on a vacation.

Possible jail sentences loom for precinct officials of the 27th and 13th wards who have been cited for contempt by Judge Jarecki. They will be heard tomorrow.

The special grand jury has been quietly looking into some of the gangland murders and other killings also. The murder of Phillipo Piazzo, who was shot down in front of his Milano cafe in Chicago Heights last Thursday night, has been included.

Prosecutor McDonald yesterday sent his assistant, James C. O'Brien, as an observer to the coroner's inquest into the death of John J. Conlon, beer runner, who was killed Friday night in a saloon at 6154 South Ashland avenue.

WOMEN MARCH ON STATE HOUSE FOR STRIKERS

Indianapolis, Ind., July 24.—Women sympathizers of striking street car men marched on the statehouse today with the demand that the state intervene to settle the labor dispute that has dragged on since July 5.

Headed by Mrs. Jeanette O'Brien, the delegation of forty women, many with babies in arms, the women visited the offices of the state public service commission.

They had planned to appeal to Gov. Jackson to intervene, but learned that he had left the state on his vacation.

At the offices of the public service commission they were informed that the commission can do nothing to settle the strike.

DEMOCRATS TO MAKE SEATING OF VARE BIG ISSUE

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[Special.]—All nominees for United States senator will be placed on record as to whether or not they will vote to seat William S. Vare, Republican senatorial choice in Pennsylvania, the Democratic national committee asserts in a statement today.

The Pennsylvania scandals are linked with the tariff issue, the large campaign contributions coming chiefly, it is asserted, from "over-protected manufacturers." The tariff, it is declared, will be foremost among 1926 issues.

"The most comprehensive undertaking so far disclosed in our political history to buy the whole people of a commonwealth was made in the Pennsylvania primary," continues the statement.

"The expenditure of $800,000 in behalf of William S. Vare, who got the nomination, presents an immediate, vital question of whether a republic can long endure when men win places of power by money, rather than merit."

Mr. Floyd Gibbons' dispatch from Warsaw offers vivid illustration of the article in the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin which Ambassador Herrick has thought worth calling to the attention of the state department and which the department has wisely made public.

Mr. Gibbons shows the Polish capital in a war scare which Gen. Pilsudski's supporters maintain is justified by developments within the diplomacy of Russia, Lithuania, and Germany, but which his opponents allege is shrewdly fomented to distract attention from the failure of Pilsudski to present a program justifying his régime.

Both theories are plausible and both probably contain some element of truth. What the American public has reason to be interested in is that the situation of Poland and indeed of almost all Europe is inherently and perilously unstable. The writer begins by asserting flatly that "Europe is on the threshold of a new war," and he considers that the danger is greater than it was in 1914. He declares that "the general impoverishment of Europe is, without any doubt, the only element that has prevented until now the outbreak of a European war," but he adds that "this obstacle is not insurmountable."

It is not insurmountable and it is being gradually removed. The rearrangements imposed at Paris in 1919 and the treaties and alliances then and later evolved have made a forcing bed of new wars. For one old Alsace-Lorraine Europe has a dozen new ones. We have discussed some of them. The Vossische Zeitung article lists twelve—namely: the Memel question, the Vilna question, the Danzig and Polish corridor question, the Upper Silesia question, the western Ukrainian question, the German-Czech question, the Hungarian border question (this is more than a border problem), the South Tyrol question, the Italo-Jugo-Slav question, the Albanian question, the Macedonian question, and the Bessarabia question.

These are not of equal importance or difficulty, but, as even we in America ought to know, what seems and is, in itself, a minor occasion may bring about appalling consequences. The interrelations of European nations are even more complex and dangerous than before 1919 and the tragic irony of the whole situation lies in the undoubted fact that a mere incident or individual act might precipitate disaster. This the Berlin writer rightly emphasizes. "If, for instance, Miss Gibson, who made an attempt on Mussolini, were a Tyrolese, a Serb, a Greek, or an Albanian, we probably would be having a war now in southern Europe. Thus a madman can plunge Europe into a new war, so unstable is European peace."

The Polish situation described by Mr. Gibbons is typical. Poland has territory formerly belonging to and still occupied by Germans, Russians, and Lithuanians. She has various ties and alliances which are likely and some of them almost certain eventually to involve her in wars not her own. The Berlin article especially notes the question of Bessarabia. There "is the match," says the writer, "for the eastern European powder barrel." Roumania, having back the right horse, taking advantage of Moscow's difficulties, occupied and annexed Bessarabia, but Moscow has never recognized the annexation and at an appropriate time will try to recover it. Poland is pledged to help Roumania defend it. The little entente would be involved. France would probably be forced to take a hand, perhaps England, perhaps Italy or Germany, depending upon the gravity and extent of the complications.

This is typical of a general situation which the expedient and intensely selfish statecraft which controlled the so-called peace conference after the war created, and Americans should realize its bearing on American relations, not only our political relations but our economic. We hear a great deal about how necessary to our welfare is the restoration of the European markets. We are told we must lend liberally if we are to put Europe in a condition to buy our commodities. Within proper limits no one will deny this generality, but there are limits. A good many nationalist enterprises are a bad risk because of the instability not only of their own affairs but of the general structure of alliances and counteralliances which has grown out of the wreckage of pre-war Europe.

The writer quoted notes that "the war danger is increased by the growing up of those generations which have not fought in the world war but have experienced the war enthusiasm and which in an adventurous spirit would not hesitate to go to war that has been described to them in childhood and school days in ideal colors." That is the old story and we may add that, so far as we can see, there is among their elders who are governing or trying to govern Europe no change in the psychology in which the late war was made. In short, we in America are impressed with the fact that both as to rulers and peoples the Europe of 1926 is morally and mentally unchanged from the Europe of 1914. All cherish ends that are more desirable to them than peace. This is an essential consideration in our estimate of probabilities, and our financial policies and commitments should not fail to take it into account.

JUDGE AS PROSECUTOR.

THE TRIBUNE'S disclosure of the case of Editor Dale of Muncie, Ind., has brought to the country's attention another instance of the confusion the passion for censoring private morals brings to an otherwise sensible and amiable community. It has been pretty well proved that the Ku Klux is a fallible censor and falls quickly into the hands of gentlemen who are not so much interested in morals as in material benefits for themselves—i. e.: in political power and the profits that go with it directly and indirectly. But whatever the control is after, it would quickly lose its power if it did not pretend to be inspired by a moral and patriotic purpose, the admonishment of undesirables, the correction of morals, the maintenance of American influence, et cetera. The result is a violent scrambling of moral values, a ruthless trampling of real American principles, and a pretty thorough demoralization of the community.

It is significant of this confusion that the judge who held Dale guilty of contempt and stands to his guns on that issue, as of course he ought to do if he was sincere in his judgment, wishes the public to know that he was and is engaged in an effort to "clean up" Muncie as to booze, vice, and gambling. We have no knowledge of conditions in Muncie and no opinion as to whether Editor Dale was guilty of illicit activities. But we are interested in a judge's assumption of general police responsibilities. As a citizen the judge, of course, has a right and duty to report breaches of law within his knowledge. But if he assumes the function of a prosecutor and devotes himself to searching out evildoers, he is certainly in danger of compromising his official duty and abolishing the distinction between the judicial and executive functions of government.

It is a fundamental principle of our American system of government, both federal and state, that there be a separation of the powers of government into legislative, executive, and judicial, but if the zeal of a judge for righteousness is to justify him in assuming the duties of policeman and prosecutor, the separation of powers is an empty phrase. No man can retain the impartiality essential to his function as judge if he is also a prosecutor. No citizen brought before such a judge can hope for any recognition of his fundamental right to be held innocent until proved guilty.

A citizen who accepts the high and delicate duties and responsibilities of the judicial office should safeguard his impartiality as the highest of his duties and the chief of his responsibilities. That ought to be obvious. It may involve, it must involve, a relinquishment of other interests and activities commendable in the private citizen and other duties proper to the executive official.

But it seems to be characteristic of a great deal of the reforming enterprise of this democracy that it has no sense of the practical problems of free government and no respect for the principles which are the foundation of our system of ordered liberty. The passion of reformers for imposing their own sense of morality, their own special code of conduct, obscures every other consideration. Under this impulse the wise distribution of powers and responsibilities between the federal, state, and local agencies has been more and more confused, with the inevitable and increasing consequence of inefficiency for all. Under the same impulse the supposed inalienable and inherent rights of the individual have been more and more disregarded. That this tendency is undermining the whole structure of American civil order and individual liberty ought not to be hidden by its assumption of high moral motives. It is bringing about a kind of chaos in which neither the true morality of the individual nor the security of a civilized society can possibly be maintained. Compared to this tendency, the evils threatened by disunion through secession were mild, for secession meant only division, and this means disintegration.

WE MAY BE TAKING A CHANCE.

Plans of the Rockefeller Foundation for the control of malaria the world over have been outlined in New York. The news story said that 21,000,000 lives were taken annually by malaria and that this could be stopped by the worldwide work proposed. Something may have gone wrong with the ciphers in that roll of figures. Otherwise it would seem that malaria, undisturbed by the Rockefeller Foundation and aided by a few other diseases, might soon give a final settlement to the problems of the human race.

The Rockefeller money has done a great deal of good in this country in the study of diseases and in combating them. It is also international in its scope. It undertakes the cure of nations, races, and continents. In some of these regions the precariousness of life has been regarded as a pacific influence. If all of the vast populations were healthy and strong but hungry and desperate they might start moving to get what they needed and wanted where they could find it, as bison moving into better ranges. The white man's science of medicine, sanitation, and hygiene is being placed at the service of every continent and humane sentiment is pleased that human distress in jungles, plains, mountains, and deserts is being alleviated. Some realists are not so sure that by the time the Hottentot has been given the longevity of the Iowa farmer he won't want the Iowa farmer's land and start beating the tom-tom to get it.

PRESERVE THE RECORDS.

[Milwaukee Journal.]

The State Historical society calls attention to the importance of preserving records from which the history of Wisconsin must finally be written. We are a negligent people when it comes to keeping things of historic value.

There is no mystery about what history is. It is made up of the day by day doings of men and women. When moot points are being straightened out, often the apparently unimportant document becomes important for the evidence it can give. Historians depend largely on this material for checking.

Racine is taking the lead in having copies made of its old records and of keeping its present day records in such form that they will be preserved. Other cities might well follow the same plan. It would not be a bad idea to have a city historian, some one qualified and interested enough to do the work for the sake of history, in each community.

History, true history that is unbiased and unprejudiced, is assuming a larger place in American life. It is recognized as the lamp that throws light for the future. To preserve as many as possible of the facts of history is to provide guidance for the future.

THE COMEBACK OF THE ORIENT ON WESTERN CHRISTIANITY

BY THE REV. CHARLES W. GILKEY, D. D.
[Pastor Hyde Park Baptist church, Chicago, and Barrows lecturer to India, 1924-1925.]

In pursuance of my duty as lecturer to India it was my privilege last year to address many thousands of the best educated young men of that great empire. Following public speaking, I held personal interviews with groups of these young men, and in certain instances with individuals. I went to India as a teacher, but I probably learned more from those I met than I was able to impart to them. However that may be, I came away from India with certain profound convictions which I will try to share with my readers.

We Americans naturally take it for granted that the most significant happenings in the religious world of our own time are those of which we are ourselves most acutely aware. The vigorous and widespread controversies between fundamentalists and modernists within all the churches, the debates and decisions on the same familiar issues that recur year after year in our ecclesiastical assemblies, the new attendance records set by gatherings like the recent Eucharistic congress, the great sums given for new buildings and expanding work, matters that bulk so large in the newspaper and in church discussion and statistics seem to be the important religious events of our generation.

The observant traveler in the orient, especially if he has had contact with the religious currents which, in a country like India, run deeper and stronger than in our contemporary west, comes home wondering whether, after all, the most significant religious fact of our time may not finally prove to be something of which he has had abundant and impressive evidence on the other side of the earth but of which our western world has as yet very little realization. That fact is the sharp and cutting distinction which the whole orient, from Suez to Japan, has now begun to make between Jesus Christ on the one hand and our western churches, creeds, and civilization on the other; between Him and all those things—including ourselves—for which they feel we have rather prematurely borrowed the name "Christian."

This distinction is very hard for us of the west to grasp or realize. It has never occurred to us that any one could or would call in question the right of our church, our creed, our civilization, or our country to the Christian name, or challenge our claim thereto by an appeal to Jesus himself. But it is precisely that assumption of ours which half the world, and many more than half the people in the world, are beginning seriously to question. The consequences for both present and future of this attitude of theirs are so far-reaching that it is well for us Christians of the west to face them frankly.

It is easier to see how this distinction has come about if we recall the circumstances under which the Christian religion has entered the life of the orient during the last century. It has been carried in a western package, with western wrappings, strings, postage stamp, return address, and addressed in a western hand. It has been brought by the white race, carrying a cross in one hand, to be sure, but always a sword in the other, and relying on its sword in every emergency. More conspicuously close to its heart than either its sword or its cross, the white race has always carried its pocketbook. Small wonder that the observant orient has been genuinely perplexed, and now of late rather ironically incredulous, as to which of the three we westerners really care most about.

Small wonder, too, that so many orientals should have supposed that the Christ inside this western package would prove to be a western Christ; a blonde haired, blue eyed Nordic, doubtless, or even a 100 per cent American. But in the last few years, due to a combination of causes, large numbers of intelligent orientals have begun to investigate the contents of the package for themselves. Once well inside the western wrapper and labels, they have made a twofold discovery, the startling surprise and significance of which we of the west can hardly realize. They have found for one thing that Jesus Himself is not an occidental at all but an oriental who never traveled west of the Suez in his life; in His mode of life, manner of thought and speech, and perspective on life's values far more truly native to their world than to ours; explicitly indifferent to pocketbooks, and unimaginable with a sword in his hand. To realize all that this discovery of Him as a fellow oriental means to the east, one must have sensed the growing tension between occident and orient that is so large a factor in the psychological climate of the twentieth century. Doubtless we white skinned Anglo-Saxons, with our unconscious superiority complex, can hardly realize the electric thrill of the other discovery which the orient is making in these days of heightened racial feeling, that Jesus Christ Himself belongs to a despised race.

The causes of this new interest in and direct approach to the personality of Jesus, as the visitor to India observes them, are various and complicated. Greatest of all, in India at least, is perhaps the personal influence of Mahatma Gandhi, who, with characteristic magnanimity and humility has always frankly acknowledged his own great personal indebtedness to Jesus. It is a curious but significant paradox that a man who does not call himself a Christian at all should have done more to open the minds and hearts of his fellow countrymen to the influence of Jesus than any living Christian. There is food for much western thought in the remark to me of a prominent Indian Christian, professor of physics in a well known college, that men like Gandhi and Natarajan, who do not call themselves Christians at all, remind him oftener and more powerfully of Jesus than any living Christian that he knows. Some of us in the west would have to make the same admission also.

The influence of mission schools and colleges for more than half a century in bringing thousands of educated Indians into direct acquaintance and contact with the personality of Jesus has been another main factor in producing this result. But much more important than any analysis of the causes of this situation is some view of its great and growing consequences for the future.

It means, for one thing, that the native Christian church, which is now deeply and fruitfully planted in all the oriental lands, will henceforth take its direction and inspiration less and less by the roundabout routes of our western theological thinking and ecclesiastical organization and more and more from its own first hand contact with Jesus. Our creeds and churches are in large part the products of a western history and setting which the orient will never adopt and is increasingly unwilling to accept as determinative, because it has a history and culture of its own. Those of us who were in India when the United Church of India was born, or who have heard the Chinese talk frankly about our denominational distinctions that have neither meaning nor interest for them, look forward to the development of an indigenous Christianity in the orient that may yet have much to teach us.

This does not at all mean that the day of Christian missions is over in the orient, as far-sighted leaders of the native churches have been among the first to remind us. But it does mean that the missionary enterprise of the twentieth century must adjust its program and methods to the new spirit and the new conditions that are very much alive in the orient; and, above all, that it must regard the religion of Jesus not as a spiritual charity to be complacently doled out to the "poor heathen" but as a trust and an experience to be shared, and only thus to be more fully possessed. In such a world situation it is simply out of date to make any serious distinction longer, except purely for convenience, between "home" and "foreign" missions. The whole world's spiritual problems and tasks are henceforth one.

For the inescapable fact is that, having begun to discover Jesus for itself, the orient is now turning Him on us in the west; on our racial prejudices and arrogances, of which it is far more conscious than we are; on our obvious absorption in the external trappings of life and our equally obvious poverty in its deeper values; on our ultimate reliance on might to assert our right to what we want. Before the bar of conscience and of history the orient has begun to appeal from us to Him, and we can no longer take the outcome of that judgment for granted.

TO PREVENT IVY POISONING AFTER BEING EXPOSED.

McNAIR recommends washing with five per cent chloride of iron dissolved in a mixture of equal parts water and alcohol. The resinous poison is neutralized by the iron. If iron chloride is not available, any other salt of iron will do—even iron rust.

If a person is going on a camping, hunting, or fishing trip he might take along some of this solution. If a person is without it and has been exposed he can look around until he finds a piece of rusty iron and a little water. The rust can be washed from the iron and the watery suspension of iron used as a wash.

All exposed parts of the skin should be washed with some iron solution, after which plenty of soapsuds and water should be used. It is true that soap has some ability to neutralize the poison and more power to remove it, but the best practice consists in first neutralizing with iron and then washing with soap.

Garments, including gloves and shoes, that have been contaminated are to be removed and washed in the same way.

Even in the earlier stages of the eruption it is advisable to wash with this iron mixture in order to neutralize any poison that may be still in reach.

Zinc and lead salts have some power to neutralize the poison, but they rank below iron in this particular. Perhaps the practice of using lead and opium wash in the treatment of poison ivy eruption is based upon this limited power of lead to neutralize resin.

After the eruption is well established washing with iron has a limited value.

With rare exceptions nobody dies from poison ivy. The itching is so intolerable that the poor wretch may wish to die, but no such luck!

More than that, it is not a serious sickness. Then what is the objective of treatment? To stop the itching and let nature cure the disease.

The affected parts are washed with the iron solution, dried, and then covered with a layer of paraffin. This can be melted at a low temperature and poured on just before it cools, or it can be applied as a paraffin tissue. After being well covered with paraffin the itching is not very bad. In some very oozy cases the paraffin dressing needs to be changed daily.

All of this is from Dr. McNair, who knows more than any one else about poison ivy and its nefarious work.

MEASURING.

G. N. B. writes: How can you tell if you have high blood pressure?

REPLY.

The blood pressure is measured by a simple instrument with which nearly all physicians and hospitals are equipped.

This instrument is fastened around the arm. A hollow tube within the arm band is pumped up until the wrist pulse disappears. Whereupon the different pressures are read off on a gauge.

MUST CLIP HEDGE.

Chicago, July 16.—[Friend of the People.]—I should like to enter a complaint about a hedge growing along the front sidewalk in the 700 block of North Lotus avenue. It is almost five feet high and is not being trimmed and it leans about half way across the sidewalk. When it rains one cannot walk on that side of the street, to say nothing of what a fine place it is for holdups after dark. C.

Notice has been served on the occupant to trim hedges so that they will not extend over the sidewalk. Location will be kept under observation to see that notice is complied with without undue delay.

HOME MADE WINE.

Chicago, July 20. — [To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is one allowed to make wines in one's home for private use?

If so, how much is one allowed to make? E. W. W.

Not if it exceeds the alcoholic percentage.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

JUMPS HIS COURSE.

Chicago, July 17. — [To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Last winter I took up a course in plastering. The course was to cost $100 and I paid $25 the first week and $15 a week thereafter. I went for three weeks during which time I saw the instructor only a few times. I could not learn without an instructor so I quit. Yesterday I received a notice from an adjustment company that I must pay the balance of the course. Can they make me pay? P. V.

If you are a minor or if you can show that they did not do what they agreed to do, you would be entitled to recover.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UNDER THE VIADUCT.

Chicago, July 18.—[Friend of the People.]—I wish to report the condition underneath the viaduct of the Chicago and Northwestern railway at 4600 West Division street.

The sidewalks and street at this place are thick with dust and dirt. When an automobile passes it throws up big clouds of dust which does not settle for at least five minutes. I walk by this place four times each day and it is a detriment to my health [as well as to a number of other people] and ruins my clothes and shoes. C. D. C.

Viaduct has been cleaned and dirt removed. This viaduct is a very long one and ward superintendent reports he has a great deal of difficulty with irresponsible teamsters using space underneath as a dumping ground.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 25, 1861.

WASHINGTON.—The capital is reviving from the depression consequent upon the great disaster to the Union army at Manassas Junction. Order is rising out of chaos. Fifteen thousand troops, constituting the reserve, which were not brought upon the field, are in as good condition as possible after a long march on insufficient rations. Gen. McClellan, who is expected today, will be worth 10,000 men to the army and to the capital. Those who have been preparing lists of the killed and wounded believe that the whole will not be more than 1,000, of whom 200 or 300 only are killed. The commissary department is responsible in a great degree for the disaster. Hungry bellies are unhesitatingly pronounced to be at the bottom of it by field officers. A flag of truce has gone to the field of battle with a long train of ambulances for the wounded, and to bury the dead. The flag of truce that went out for the body of Col. James Cameron of the 79th [brother of Secretary of War Cameron] has not been able to recover it. The conduct of the rebels in disregarding our hospital flags—firing the hospital, killing wounded men, etc.—excites horror. The damning tale of their brutalities will not be half told.

LOUISVILLE.—A special to the Memphis Argus from Richmond says that Gen. Beauregard commanded the rebel right at Manassas Junction and Gen. Johnston the left. Beauregard's horse was carried from under him. Gens. Barlow of Georgia and Bee of South Carolina are killed.

NEW YORK.—A special to the Tribune says the report that the rebels shelled and burned Sudley church, used as a hospital by the Union troops, is confirmed, as also is the report that the wounded found on the road were bayoneted by the rebels.

EDITORIAL.—The federal scouts report that the rebels were seized with a little panic of their own, and retreated pell-mell inside their intrenchments at Manassas Junction while our forces were retiring from the field. This explains the astounding fact that they did not pursue Gen. McDowell's army and that Col. Einstein was enabled to go back to the field after the battle and bring off Burnside's Rhode Island battery. These wonders can hardly be explained in any other way. Misery loves company. We trust that the report of the scouts is true. It is observable that the confederates have not bragged much over their victory yet.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 25, 1901.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—An investigation of the most thorough character will be made into the facts of the Sampson-Schley controversy to be presided over by Admiral Dewey. This fact was announced today by Secretary Long when he replied to Rear Admiral Schley's appeal for a court of inquiry to look into the charges made in "Maclay's History of the Navy."

CHICAGO. — William Holabird Jr. was the star in the first day's play of the sixth annual golf tournament of the Onwentsia club which began at Lake Forest. In the qualifying round for the Rabinoak's cup he lead a field of 80 of the best golfers of the west with several crack eastern players included. Playing beautiful golf the young Glen View expert put the amateur record of the course at 78, one stroke lower than the record held by Walter D. Smith.

LONDON. — "Cash" Sloan, the American jockey who has been riding in Russia, had an exciting experience at the Moscow races where he narrowly escaped death at the hands of a furious mob. Sloan had been riding with such continuous success that his mounts were always favorites. On the occasion in question he rode a horse which had no chance of winning. The unsophisticated crowd, however, backed the American's mount as usual and when he was beaten a raging mob attacked the jockey who was rescued with difficulty.

CHICAGO. — Bishop-elect Peter J. Muldoon, pastor of St. Charles Borromeo's Roman Catholic church, this morning will be formally elevated to the bishopric of Chicago by Cardinal Sebastian Martinelli in Holy Name cathedral. The cathedral, illuminated and lavishly decorated, will be a brilliant spectacle. The new bishop's vesture and insignia consisting of eighteen separate pieces and valued at $10,000 has been received and last night a special guard kept watch over the precious articles.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 25, 1916.

CHICAGO.—Yesterday was the hottest day of the summer so far, the mercury touching 93 degrees at 11:30 a. m. Five deaths were attributed to the heat. A thunderstorm shortly before midnight brought relief and cooler weather is predicted for today.

CHICAGO.—Miss Marjorie Edwards of Midlothian won the low gross prize in the qualifying round of the Chicago woman's championship at Glen View with a score of 92. Miss Corella Lukens of Edgewater, Mrs. F. S. Colburn of Glen View, and Mrs. Melvin Jones of Glen Oak tied at 93 for second place.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Between 600 and 700 men of the First brigade, Illinois infantry, were bowled over from the line by the terrific heat on the hike to Ten Mile hill. Gen. Funston used the word "ghastly" in describing the maneuver.

CHICAGO.—William A. Ulrey, 15 years old, 4902 Kenmore avenue, died of lockjaw, the result of wounds he received when struck down with a pair of heavy grass shears in the hands of Nicholas Moga, a gardener of the Saddle and Cycle club, Sheridan road and Foster avenue. The boy, a Senn High school sophomore, was crossing the grounds of the club on his way from the beach with several other boys about a week ago, when the gardener threw the shears, according to their story. The club management says the boys threw rocks at the gardener and will finance his defense. Moga was ordered held to the grand jury.

CHICAGO.—Willie Rock, 8 years old, obtained permission from his grandmother to open a lemonade stand at 2 cents a glass in front of her home, 7245 Euclid avenue. It was hot, but the lemonade business was bad. Willie hauled out a case of real beer belonging to his father, Frank D. Rock, and put it on sale, two glasses for a nickel. Business was good. The whole case, that cost father $1.20, went for 80 cents. Grandma revoked Willie's license.

HUNDRED YEAR WAR FOR LEGAL REFORM

Laymen Supervise English Legal System.

This is the third weekly installment of an article by Prof. E. R. Sunderland of the law school of the University of Michigan, describing the history of the law reform movement in England and the remarkable system by which justice is administered in English courts. In today's chapter he shows how the lay public exercises a direct supervision and control of the procedure of the courts and compares the situation in the United States with that of England.

In 1850 the crown appointed a commission to inquire into the process, practice, and system of pleading of the Court of Chancery, the personnel consisting of the attorney general, four eminent queen's councilors learned in the law, and two barristers. This was unsatisfactory to parliament, and a parliamentary petition was presented to the queen asking that two or more persons not of the profession of the law be added to the commission, in accordance with which, on July 4, 1851, two men of business were appointed as additional commissioners. In subsequent commissions and committees the precedent was followed, and the proportion of laymen has increased in recent years.

A joint select committee was appointed by parliament in 1909 to consider the state of the business in the king's bench division and report thereon. Five members were from the house of lords and five from the house of commons. Only one of the ten was a lawyer. This committee of laymen called before it as witnesses the lord chancellor, the lord chief justice, two other judges, and one master of the king's bench division, the president of the law society, two barristers, and one layman.

Layman Investigator Irks Bar.

Mr. Justice Grantham was quite exercised over being investigated by laymen. The judicature act, he said, had made provision for just such an inquiry as this by means of a council of judges to be called by the lord chancellor; or, the lord chief justice might have called the common law judges together to discuss the situation. Instead of proceeding in one of these recognized and orderly ways, this public investigation had been ordered. "On behalf of the common law judges of England," he declared, "I most respectfully but seriously protest against these proceedings. Such proceedings are unheard of in the history of England or of English law."

The last royal commission on legal procedure, appointed as late as 1913 to investigate the causes of delay in the king's bench, was made up of one judge, one king's counsel, one bachelor of laws, and eight laymen. Sir A. Markham, who secured the appointment, stated in the house of commons that the attorney general had been asked, in choosing the members, not to permit lawyers to constitute a majority of the commission. [1913 parl. debates, commons, 67.] Even this meager representation of the legal profession was objected to by the opposition as discrediting its report.

Laymen Dominated Commission.

Mr. Morton, in the debate in the house of commons, said: "I am not complaining about the royal commission, except that I agree that there ought never to have been any lawyers put upon it. . . . You ought to take the lawyers as witnesses, but to make them the judges is ridiculous." [Ibid, 102.]

The laymen on the commission of 1913 completely dominated it. The chairman, Viscount St. Aldwyn, was a layman, and conducted most of the examinations of witnesses, among whom there were called thirteen judges, thirty-one lawyers, and fourteen laymen. The attitude of the commission, while friendly to the legal witnesses, was detached and objective, and was free from the inevitable limitations which legal preconceptions would have imposed on the scope and character of the investigation. The conclusions reflected rather severely on the council of judges, which had met but three times in thirty-seven years to inquire into the working of the rules, and charged the responsibility for delays in the administration of justice to the failure of the judges to use the power which parliament had conferred upon them by the judicature act of 1873.

Judges Unable to Reform Practice.

Assuming, says the commission, that the judges found themselves unable to accomplish anything in the way of improving the practice, "we cannot but regret that they have not asked parliament to relieve them from the duty imposed upon them by statute and to substitute some other method of considering from time to time and securing any necessary reforms in the administration of justice." [Report, 41-42.]

It seems fair to assume that the lessons of the long struggle with the bar have not been forgotten, and that the lay public will not relinquish the authority it has learned to exercise over the methods of judicial administration. It will be much easier to maintain that authority than it was to win it, but machinery for its exercise will doubtless have to be improved. The solution of that problem is, however, a task for the future.

At first view the experience of England in developing an effective judicial procedure is very depressing to Americans, for none of the conditions which determined its success are present in this country.

U. S. Bar Not Centralized.

We do not have a centralized bar nor a centralized court at Washington, upon which the attention of the nation can be focused; nor a press accustomed to deal with the administration of justice as a national problem of the first magnitude. Nor do we have even centralized state bars and state courts at our state capitals, operating under the strong light of an active public interest. Our trial courts are all local courts, and we have no bar at all in the English sense of the term, but only a vast number of individual lawyers having no collective legal or political status. For us "bench" and "bar" are abstract terms. When Chief Justice Taft says: "The administration of the criminal law is a disgrace to our civilization," the charge evokes no general response from the American people, because the term is an abstraction, and means a different thing to each of his hearers. Responsibility is scattered and dissipated among the thousands of judges and lawyers throughout the land. How different was it when the English reformer could point his accusing finger straight at Westminster hall!

The Problem in America.

If America cannot pursue the course taken by England, and avoid the exploitation of the public by the legal profession by means of direct public control of the methods of administering justice, can it pursue the alternative course, and develop a bar sufficiently enlightened and sensitive to the public needs to be a safe repository of the power of control?

One of the most promising developments in the United States is our unique system for organizing the legal profession, which is founded upon a principle radically different from that of the British bar. The basis of legal organization in England is ownership of property and control of the right to practice before the courts. Strictly speaking the bar in this country is not organized at all, for it holds no estates, and it enjoys no privileges. There is not one legal act which the bar as such is authorized to do. It is, in truth, nothing but a name.

Form Own Associations.

But community of interest stimulates association, and since lawyers in the United States have no hereditary estates to manage and enjoy, no traditional dinners to eat in their ancient halls, and no solemn and formal duties in calling neophytes to the bar, they have been forced to establish some other basis for professional fellowship. That basis has been mutual association for the discussion of the problems affecting the profession, and since all of its problems relate in some way to the administration of justice, the bar associations have become the recognized agencies for dealing with that subject. But they have not met the expectations of the public.

Coöperation has been cordial, but it has not been effective. There is too large a percentage of members who are unable to look at procedural problems with the detached view which the public interest demands. The leaders of the profession see the need for modernizing our methods. They suggest and encourage reforms. But the rank and file are still too heavily loaded with traditional ideas and too much blinded by preconceptions to give the support which is necessary for real progress.

Crippled by Technicalities.

In the case of the legal profession the habitual use of a fixed procedure has made the majority of American lawyers utterly incapable of appreciating how absurd are the technicalities which cripple its usefulness. No group of business men would ever voluntarily consent to use such awkward, slow, and ineffective methods in the conduct of their business. They would go bankrupt if they tried it. But the courts are established and supported by the state, and although litigants may become bankrupt in using them, the courts themselves are subjected to no economic test of their right to survive.

If they remain under the control of a profession which continues to value conventionality above efficiency as a standard for public service, there is no hope for an orderly evolution of remedial processes. In such case the courts will either be disrupted by the unskillful intervention of a sorely tried public, or their jurisdiction will be partitioned out among administrative commissions and arbitration tribunals. In their present form they have been weighed in the balance of popular judgment and found wanting.

Need Broader Education.

There is but one adequate solution of the difficulty, and that is a broadened and socialized legal education. The leaders of the profession in America have seen the imperative need for lawyers with deeper insight into the nature and the functions of modern society, and with a better equipment for wisely administering the rules which regulate the growing complexities of its organization.

In 1921 the American Bar association took a notable and impressive stand for elevating legal education. They proposed that every candidate for the bar should be given both an extensive and an intensive preparation for the duties which awaited him. His mind was to be opened and his judgment given poise and perspective by at least two years of college work. It was doubtless hoped that eventually a full college course would become the normal standard. Upon this foundation they proposed to erect a superstructure of professional training which would develop lawyers with a technical equipment adequate for the exacting demands of society.

Three years of intelligent study of the law, in a school provided with a sufficient full time teaching staff and reasonably extensive library facilities, was declared to be absolutely essential to qualify the student to present himself before an examining board for admission to the bar. Generous and enlightened coöperation by the courts and other examining agencies was confidently expected.

Law Schools Raise Standards.

This definite ideal for the elevation of the bar is being steadily proclaimed and defended by those who earnestly hope for the salvation of the legal profession. Three years after the adoption of the resolution setting forth this policy, the American Bar association was able to report that at least twenty-seven law schools, which had not previously met the Bar association standards, had either fully complied with them or had announced their intention to comply in the immediate future. At least eleven state bar associations had indorsed the American Bar association standards, and in some states, such as Illinois, the Supreme court had put into operation standards closely approximating them. [49 Am. Bar Assn., Rep. 395.]

Through coöperation of this kind between the colleges and universities, the law schools, the bar associations, and the courts and examining bodies, the United States seems to be seeking its solution of the great problem of the social adjustment of those who administer the law. The educational institutions are ready and willing to perform whatever service the profession is willing to approve and accept, and it is to them that we must look for the development of a broader spirit of social service among those who seek admission to the bar. England has solved the problem of professional service by public regulation; America is solving it by public education. To reorganize the bar by creating a new social outlook and a new estimate of administrative values is a task of no small magnitude. England went through almost a hundred years of struggle to accomplish her reforms. Who can tell what a hundred years of liberalizing education will do for the administration of American law?

Prof. Sunderland will continue his discussion in The Tribune next Sunday.

COUNCIL GROUP FINDS RAILROADS MUST ELECTRIFY

Hearings Adjourn; Plan of Action Being Formed.

Huge and expensive as the task may be, electrification of railroads in Chicago is both desirable and practical and must be carried to completion with all possible speed if the city is to keep pace with the progress of other transportation centers.

In substance, this was the feeling of the city council's special electrification subcommittee yesterday at the close of its five day series of conferences with rail officials, engineers, civic leaders, business men, and other persons representing all shades of opinion on the electrification problem.

Meet Again in Two Weeks.

For the purpose of collecting and digesting the data before it, the committee adjourned to meet again in about two weeks. It will then reconvene and continue the conferences with a view of drafting a definite plan of action before the next council meeting on Sept. 15.

"I believe that we have made encouraging progress," said Ald. Edward J. Kaindl (34th), acting chairman of the committee. "Although the immensity and difficulties of an electrification program have been brought home to us, we are also firmly convinced that something really worthwhile can and must be done in that direction and done quickly."

Two speakers appeared before the committee at its session yesterday. They were Charles Dillon, editor of the Railway Review, and R. H. Kilner, head of the electrical transportation department of the Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing company.

Seen Long Way Ahead.

In a general way the messages brought by these two speakers were considered perhaps the most discouraging that the committee heard during the week. Both said they felt that complete electrification is a long way in the future, although they admitted it to be desirable and eventually inevitable.

"I will tell you frankly that the railroads have done everything possible so far to avoid electrifying," declared Kilner. "They have done so in two ways, by buying plenty of real estate for future expansion, and by equipping their steam engines with anti-smoke devices.

"In my opinion, electrification will come only after congestion forces it. At the present, it is unfortunately true, the Chicago district is termed 'easy railroading.' There are few grades and tunnels and little congestion."

Oil-Electric Engines Praised.

Mr. Kilner said he believed development of the use of oil-electric engines was one of the best ways to aid an electrification program. The efficiency of these 600 to 700 horsepower locomotives has been proved, he said: whereas the construction of 1,000 to 1,500 horsepower road engines is still in the speculative stage.

In introducing his discussion Mr. Dillon explained that he had studied railway terminals in all parts of the United States, especially in Chicago, and had written numerous articles dealing specifically with the electrification problem. His magazine, the Railway Review, he said, has published scores of articles on the subject.

"There are many objections to electrification," he said. "Most of them are mechanical and financial. It must be kept in mind that many of the roads entering Chicago are small and financially weak. To force them to electrify would be confiscatory."

Force Would Be Confiscatory.

Mr. Dillon said he did not believe that the railroads caused 4 per cent of the smoke in Chicago's air, as has been claimed. And, even so, he said, talk of forcing electrification by police power is impractical, as the police cannot confiscate property.

"The cost of equipment is another factor that must be considered," he continued. "A steam engine costs about $60,000—an electric engine more than $100,000. It is this expense that you cannot expect the weak sister lines to bear all at once. It would ruin them."

Mr. Dillon offered two constructive policies which he said the railroads in Chicago need as much or more than electrification: 1. Removal of freight terminals from the business district. 2. Consolidation of passenger stations.

Freight Called Outrage.

"It is an outrage to have puffing engines hauling freight cars around, for example, on the near north side which is becoming the handsomest skyscraper district in the city. These cars should load and unload at the city's outskirts, with subways to bring the loads in.

"It is also foolish to have passenger stations spread out all over the city. The tendency to concentrate, as at the union station, will do more toward solving the railway problem than almost any other one thing."

As for the value of air rights, Mr. Dillon said he did not think "we should be too much excited over them." The construction of buildings over the Randolph street yards of the I. C. may take place some time, he said, but "we may be pretty shaky when that happens."

Nothing to Learn in N. Y.

"There has been much talk about Chicago emulating New York's program," said Mr. Dillon. "That's absurd. We have nothing to learn from that city. Our transportation situation, in general, is far superior to conditions there.

"Freight cars wander in and around our most beautiful skyscrapers, it is true, but in New York freight trains still puff and push through the most densely populated districts, a man on horseback riding ahead, waving a flag to warn the people off the tracks This was done when the first passenger train pulled out of Darlington, England, 100 years ago. Why quote New York?"

At the next meetings of the subcommittee two weeks hence, Ald. Kaindl said, the most important speakers will be Patrick Crowley, president of the New York Central lines, and Fred Sargent, president of the C. & N. W.

UNWRITTEN LAW RANCHER'S PLEA IN MURDER CASE

Alliance, Neb., July 24.—(AP)—Self-defense and the "unwritten law" will be the defense of Albert Hill, 45, rancher of near Gordon, who last Tuesday night shot and killed Neal Oblennis, 25, a farmhand on his ranch. Hill was brought to Alliance from Rushville last night because Sheridan county officials feared mob violence.

Hill said that last Tuesday morning he told his wife he was leaving for two days. Instead of leaving the ranch, Hill said he hid in the granary and surprised Oblennis and his wife.

"I knocked my wife down and then started to fight Oblennis," Hill related. "He got the worst of it and ran to the garage and got a repeating shotgun. I got my shotgun, too, and for my own protection shot and killed him as he came toward me, ready to shoot."

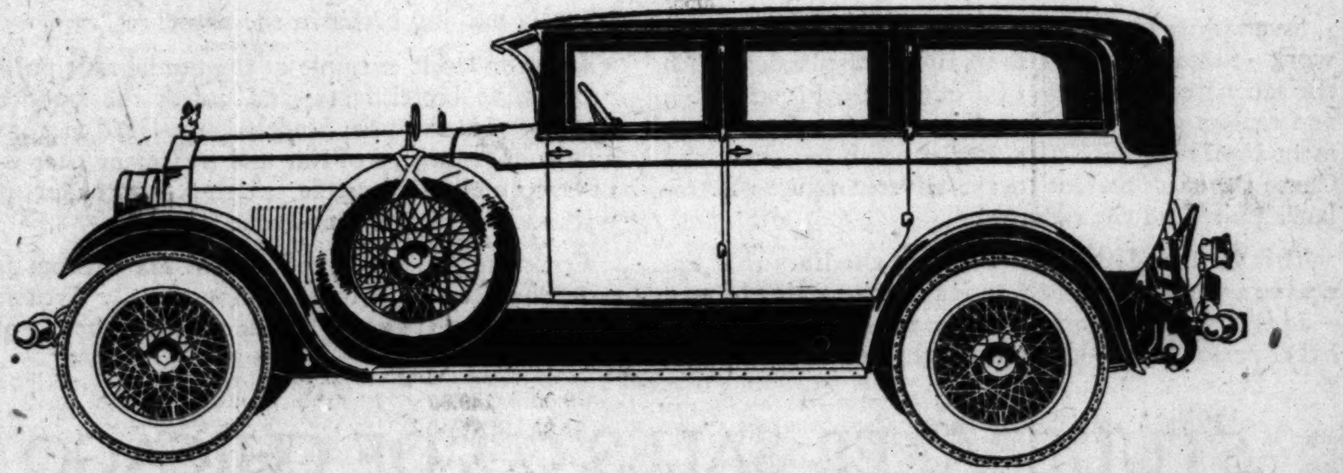
Never Lose Sight of Value
When You Buy a Car



The price of a car is only important if it makes the car a worth-while value. A $100 motor car would be startling, but a poor buy if owners could only get $50 or $75 worth of service and pleasure out of it. The price of the ELCAR 8-in-Line makes it the outstanding value of its class, as any ELCAR dealer will prove if you give him the opportunity.

ISSUE WARRANTS FOR TWO CANCER CURE "DOCTORS"

Both Missing; Investigate Deaths at Institute.

Taylorville, Ill., July 24.—[Special.]—As the first step in their expose of the National Cancer Research institute of this city, officials of the Illinois State Department of Registration and Education today had State's Attorney Carl H. Preihs procure warrants for "Dr." Harry M. Hoxsey, proprietor, and "Dr." Arold Persons, superintendent, charging them with practicing medicine without a license.

Sheriff Andrew Flesher, in possession of the warrants, has been unable to locate the "doctors."

Mrs. Mary Peck, 65, of Taylorville, is the original complainant. She told S. L. Antonow, the state department's assistant director in Chicago, that she had received 92 cancer treatments of the "hoxide," or arsenic paste, at $5.00 a treatment and that now her face was worse than ever. Scars and swelling have resulted from the application of the paste.

Investigate "Influenza" Deaths.

Following her testimony, the warrants were issued. Then the investigators began to delve into a new, and more serious report, that several deaths at the institute, reported on the death certificates as "from influenza," had been really due to irregularities at the hospital.

The pivot case in this connection is that of Bert Johnson, who came here from Indiana the 15th of last May.

Miss Opal Neehr, a nurse at the institute, testifying this afternoon, said that "Dr." Persons took the patient's history, but did not examine him. Persons, she said, then ordered her to give Johnson some allanol. Several hours later, Miss Neehr said she found Johnson on the floor, a cut in his head. A few hours later he died. Dr. W. T. Washburn signed the death certificate as "caused from influenza."

Sued A. M. A. for Libel.

It was just about six months ago that the "Hoxide Cancer institute" attracted attention when it brought a $100,000 libel suit against the American Medical association for an article which appeared in the Jan. 2, 1926, issue of the A. M. A. Journal, and which called the institution a "fake." At the time institute officials declared that Clarence Darrow was to be their counsel. Mr. Darrow denied the statement.

Released from Asylum, Cuts Off Wife's Head

Metropolis, Ill., July 24.—[Special.]—O. B. Logan of New Liberty, a retired farmer 53 years old, who recently was liberated from the state asylum at Anna, last night cut his wife's head off with a large pocket knife.

The man was captured by neighbors and held until the sheriff arrived.

The slaying was seen by an eight year old son of the couple.

WEDS TODAY

MRS. STANLEY DELL.

DAUGHTER OF CLEVELAND TO WED N. Y. LAWYER

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—The marriage of Mrs. Cleveland Dell, daughter of Mrs. Thomas J. Preston Jr., and the late President Grover Cleveland, to John Harlan Amen of this city will take place tomorrow at the summer home of the bride's mother at Tanworth, N. H. The wedding, which will be attended only by members of the immediate families, will be performed by the Rev. Pardee Erdman of Princeton, N. J.

Dr. Preston will give his stepdaughter in marriage and the bride's sister, Mrs. William S. B. Bosanquet of Gainsford, England, will be matron of honor. Richard F. Cleveland of Baltimore, a brother of the bride, will be best man.

Mrs. Dell and her first husband, William Stanley Dell, to whom she was married in 1917, were divorced last winter in Paris. They had one child, Frances Folsom Dell.

Mr. Amen is the son of the late Dr. Harlan Page Amen, for many years principal of Phillips-Exeter academy at Exeter, N. H. Mr. Amen is an attorney and is with the firm of Shearman & Sterling, New York. He was graduated from Princeton in 1919 and during the war he served as a lieutenant in the flying corps of the marines. He was also graduated from the Harvard Law school.

REPUBLICANS ASK ARMS TO CHECK GERMAN FASCISTI

Say 500,000 Opponents Carry Weapons.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 24.—The strongest republican organization in Germany, the Reichsbanner, is demanding permission from the government to provide its 600,000 members with small caliber arms.

The organization leaders assert that their opponents, the Nationalists and Fascisti, numbering 500,000, are equipped with small caliber weapons, which are used in attacks upon Republicans in street brawls throughout Germany.

Government Opposes Arming.

The government is not willing to grant the arming permit, because it fears that weapons in the hands of political organizations would lead to serious clashes and that the interallied military control commission would protest. Experts, however, say that the government has no legal right to forbid private clubs from training their members with small pistols.

The Reichstag is preparing a new law on the use of weapons and it is announced that if the republican associations respect the provisions of the newly devised law they will be allowed to provide their marksmen with small caliber weapons.

Nationalists Get Arms.

The Reichsbanner's call for arms originated in Thuringia, where the government was requested to disarm the Nationalist associations. The governor admitted that he is not strong enough to deprive the Nationalists of their training pistols and advised the Reichsbanner to provide its members with weapons which they are now trying to do with the permission of the government.

Hindenburg Sues Paper for Offensive Cartoon

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 24. — President Von Hindenburg, after ignoring the onslaughts of the communists during the last fifteen months, finally has started a libel action against the bolshevik Berlin organ, the Rote Fahne. The paper published a cartoon, showing the German president as a bull mastiff tearing the constitution in his fangs, together with a poem, which exceeded the cartoon in virulence.

As usual, we begin months in advance to prepare for this event; we buy when we see some special advantage in the market, with an eye on this sale. We take such merchandise as may be on hand and mark it down sharply. Most of the goods in the sale were bought new for it; the percentage of "goods on hand" is not large.

Every time we have such a sale, we think it's "the best we ever had"; we feel so about this one. It seems to us that never before has furniture been so beautiful. The designers have excelled their former efforts; the new decorative ideas have developed extraordinary beauties of color combinations. You may be prepared for a revelation of new charms in furniture.

The prices represent two things—one, our special efforts and market advantages in buying; two, our desire to produce selling activity during the midsummer months, when buyers are usually not buying. We offer exceptional reasons for your buying now.

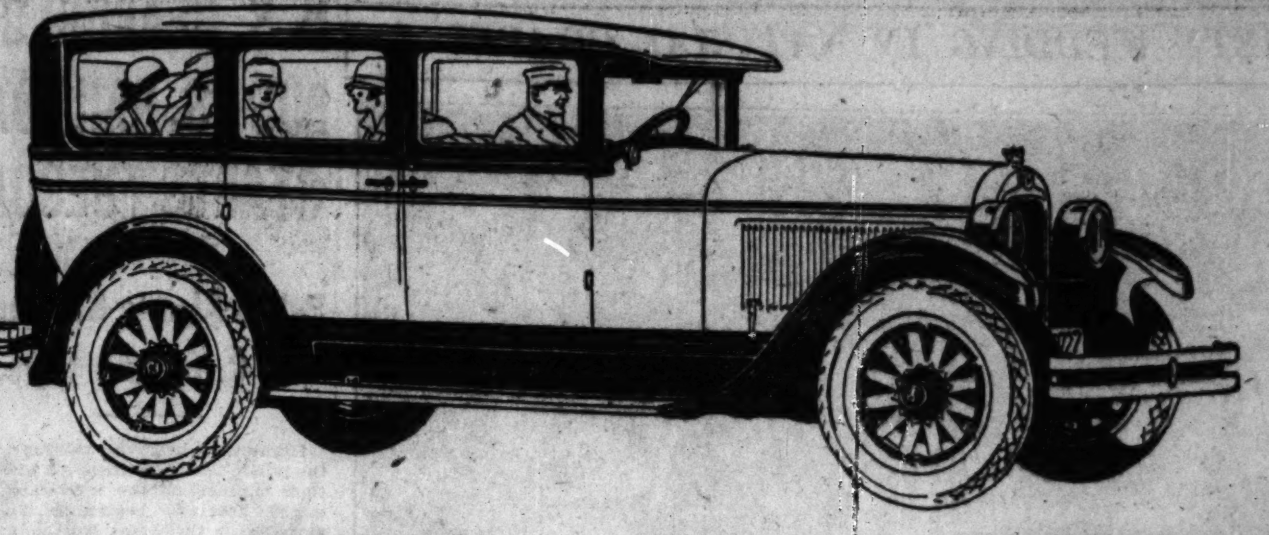
DEALERS' OPPORTUNITY Great results are being recorded by this organization with the Hupmobile 6, the greatest 6 cylinder value, and the Hupmobile 8, the world's leading fine car.



No Car But This

Can Satisfy Me Now in Beauty and Performance

The Beautiful Hupmobile Eight

It has just dawned on me that the best performance I have known from fine cars in the past, lies so far behind "eight" performance that nothing but sheer blindness could make a man willing to accept it in a car at $2000 and up.

There was a time when eight-cylinder cars were available only at prices that seemed unnecessarily high.

So the high-priced six came in to fill a definite niche between these and the average.

For years I have tried to content myself with a degree of performance that was admittedly good—yes, I might even say excellent—of its kind.

Nevertheless, I chafed under its limitations.

And then I found the Hupmobile Eight!

For more than two years now Hupmobile has gradually but surely wakened the automobile world to the realization of two startling facts:—

That straight-eight production need not be confined to massive motors; and that the right kind of straight-eight performance has no peer or precedent.

In the Hupmobile Eight I find a motor so compact that it takes up no more room than a six; with airplane type of valve mechanism, costliest and newest in motor cars; the sturdiest crankshaft ever designed; embellished with a body in which, very evidently, no cost nor effort was spared on beauty and luxury.

I am told that motor car authorities call it the highest expression of the straight-eight principle.

Be that as it may, I don't want anything finer than the performance this Eight is giving me—and I'd have to be shown to believe there could be any finer.

There's hardly a sound from that engine, save the sweet song of power without limit; and not a tremor that I can detect.

In second gear, I am away and looking back while the others are still fumbling for a pick-up—and most of us do our starting in "second" nowadays.

And the amazing thing to me is how a car can give such performance and use so little gasoline in doing it. I thought I knew something about high gas mileage, but I've learned it all new again with this Eight.

Always before, I've taken a new car with the hope that I wasn't starting on the same old round of shop-visits to keep it in tune; but with the uneasy suspicion that I was doing precisely that.

Hupmobile reputation for stay-put reliability reassured me when I took this Eight, and it's true; for I haven't been near a service station for anything in the eight months I've had it.

If all these things mean as much to every man and every family that motors, as they do to me—I can see that the Hupmobile Eight, even with the magnificent success coming to it now, is only just beginning its successful career.

MARTHA MORSE BECOMES BRIDE OF C. B. STIBOLT

Ceremony Takes Place in Sunken Garden.

A natural chapel, with all of its architectural appointments carried out in foliage and flowers, was the beauteous setting for Miss Martha Morse's wedding at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon to Carl B. Stibolt of Davenport, Ia. The ceremony was read in the sunken garden at the Lake Forest home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse. The bridal procession filed out of the north entrance of the house through an aisle outlined with cedar trees and garlands to a chancel formed by a great wall surmounted with stone work.

The sides of the garden were masses of blue larkspur and pink gladiolas, and the incline of the garden, at the edge of which stood the guests, was bordered solidly with madonna lilies. Great rounds of lilies and larkspur and gladioli stood at the end of the garden, where a white satin kneeling stool marked the altar.

The Wedding Gowns.

The bridal gown and those of her attendants were marvels of delicate color and design. Miss Morse wore heavy white satin and chiffon, with intricate embroidery and small pearls. Her voluminous veil or rich rosepoint lace covered her head and stretched away over a court train of the satin and chiffon. Her bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor, Mrs. William S. Covington, and the maid of honor, Miss Mary Ingersoll, wore gowns of deep pink chiffon and matching lace and large horsehair picture hats of orchid. The gowns were plaited and made with deep berthas, and there were small sprays of flowers decorating the hats.

Blue, Green, and Orchid.

The bridesmaids were attired, two in pale blue, two in green, and two in orchid. Their dresses were made in the same fashions as the maids and matron's, and their hats were of flesh color. All of the attendants' bouquets, great mammoth ones, were of pastel shaded flowers. Following the service was a reception which also took place in the garden. Just before the wedding processional Mme. Claire Dux, who is to be a bride herself within a fortnight, sang. An orchestra ensconced in the second floor porch of the residence played softly during the processional and service.

The guests included Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Wilhelm Ludwig Baum, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Hinde, Miss Sarah Hinde, Miss Hester White, Mrs. Edward Hines, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Don Murdock, Mrs. William C. Pullman, Miss Dorothy Marston, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Rend, Miss Helen Rend, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Warren.

Air Chief Commutes by Plane to N. Y. Home

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[Special.]—F. T. Rubee Davison, assistant secretary of the war for air, has commuted weekly to his home in New York by airplane since taking over his new position, it was disclosed today. On his trip last Saturday, and again today, he was piloted by regular army flyers. He is planning, however, to have a plane fitted so he can operate it himself.

FUR SHOW TO OPEN HERE AUG. 9; COATS SHORTER

Some half a million Chicago women will be able to view in advance the fur styles for the coming winter at the annual fur show, which is to open on Aug. 9 in the Balaban & Katz Chicago theater and run for four weeks, appearing in all the outlying neighborhoods.

Chosen by contest from all the city's leading fur manufacturers, 100 prize garments have been made up for the showing. They will be worn by as many mannequins and displayed with appropriate gowns, hats and shoes, in a three act stage show. Several hundred members of the Associated Fur Industries of Chicago as well as State street stores have contributed the show garments.

That coats will be shorter, modeled on straight lines, and the lighter weight furs much in favor is indicated by an advance glimpse of the show garments. Sports coats will be trimmed with fur scarfs and sashes.

U. S. HEARING ON BUS VS. RAILROAD STARTS TUESDAY

Public Also to Get Ear of I. C. C. Quiz Here.

Highways, byways, railways, and the public that uses them all will have their innings at the interstate commerce hearings beginning Tuesday morning at the Great Northern hotel on the common carrier relationship of motor busses and trucks to railroads.

The hearings, which will be held in thirteen major cities, St. Paul, Portland, Ore.; San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Detroit, Boston, New York, Asheville, Dallas, Kansas City, Washington, D. C., and Chicago, will be conducted by Commissioner Esch and Examiner Flynn. Three days will be devoted to each series of hearings, one each for railways, motor vehicles, and the public—the shipper and the traveler.

A Quest for Facts.

Purely a fact finding operation, the hearings are being held to get all sides of the problem that has been created by the existence in the United States of 20,000,000 motor vehicles, of which 2,500,000 are busses and trucks. Some observers regard these hearings as a skirmish preliminary to the pitched battle between the motor industry and the railroads which many believe to be imminent.

Others scoff at that idea because many railroads already are using motor busses and trucks to supplement their regular service, especially in the short haul of both freight and passengers. Being under federal regulation, however, the railroads must reply to the questionnaires that have been sent them for these hearings.

Since the hearings will cover every detail of all operations—cost, profit, investment, service rendered, competition, distances, organization and control—it is believed that they will give the public plenty of information on the problem. And public sentiment, it is admitted by both railroads and motor companies, sooner or later compels the service it wants.

Fifty-One Railroads Use Trucks.

According to government statistics, fifty-one railroads are now using motor trucks, and thirty-one are using motor busses, either to replace some form of rail service or to supplement existing service. It was said yesterday that the Chicago hearings will disclose the fact that to eliminate or considerably to decrease heavy losses per train mile on short hauls is declared the chief reason for the railroads motor auxiliary service.

Thirty-eight states already have enacted laws regulating motor busses, and twenty-eight regulating motor trucks. Each of these states has proved itself able to handle its own problems in this respect, so that interstate regulation of motor traffic is now the main issue.

HUCKSTERS MOB NEW MAXWELL MARKET MASTER

Special police patrolled the Maxwell street market yesterday following an assault upon Max Janowski, new market master, by a score of angry peddlers, said to have resented his attempt to eject a woman huckster from her stand.

It is alleged that Janowski, who was recently appointed by Mayor Dever to replace Harry Lapping after a graft scandal, tried to punish the woman for refusing to contribute to the $250,000 jackpot, said to be collected annually by overlords of Maxwell street.

When he started to yank the woman's cart away from the curb, according to Alderman Henry L. Fick [20th], his sponsor, a score of neighboring venders showered him with rocks and other missiles. As a result he is now on crutches with his head wreathed in bandages. The woman disappeared during the mêlée.

Considerable pressure is being brought upon the mayor and city council to close the market on the ground that graft is too widespread to check.

A Quaker Oil-Burning Furnace $425 and up

(Convenient terms over twelve month period may be arranged, with small carrying charge)

Complete new installation for 5-room bungalow

Replacements and other installations at equally low prices

Here is one of the most remarkable improvements ever made for heating homes! A complete oil-heating plant, which eliminates the objectionable features of the old, separately-constructed oil burner and meets the requirements of the man of moderate income who desires to use oil as a fuel.

The Quaker Oil-Burning Furnace is of a revolutionary new design. It is not a separate burner for use in coal burning furnaces, but a complete unit, designed to use oil efficiently as a fuel. It is economical, noiseless, odorless, clean, safe, simple, and without moving parts.

Costs less than many ordinary oil burner units!

The Quaker Oil Furnace, complete with built-in burner, costs you less than any reliable oil burner, without the furnace, now on the market. And remember that this is a complete installation—with burner, furnace, pipes, everything needed to heat your home—installed! The Quaker is economical to operate and it will heat your home with oil at approximately the same cost as coal! A complete warm air heating plant at far below the cost of any other reliable oil burning unit.

Quaker has many superior features

The burner construction is unique—it is in reality a gas burner. The radiant heat of the flame gasifies the oil which flows from the float valve chamber into the pan in the bottom of the furnace. As this gas rises, it is mixed with the air, which insures a clean, smokeless and intense flame. It is perfectly controlled — any desired temperature may be had. It is clean. It is safe. It is noiseless and odorless, operating without motors. We highly recommend the Quaker Oil Furnace for its many superior features.

LAW PRACTICE OF EKERN HERE CALLED NOMINAL

Wisconsin Official's Name Used in Chicago Firm.

Charges that Herman L. Ekern, attorney general of Wisconsin and La Follette candidate for governor, practises law privately in Chicago while other attorneys perform the work of his office, caused inquiries to be made here yesterday on whether there were any facts to support the accusations.

The charges were made by W. Stanley Smith, opponent of Ekern on a Progressive wet slate, in an address at La Crosse, Wis., Friday night. He declared that Ekern was trying to hold two jobs at once and challenged him to make a financial accounting of both.

It was revealed by inquiries here that Ekern is a partner in the firm of Ekern and Meyers with offices at 208 South La Salle street. The firm acts as special counsel in insurance cases. Erwin A. Meyers of Winnetka is the second partner.

Called Nominal Partnership.

The accusation that the Wisconsin attorney general spends a large part of his time at $100 a day handling cases for the firm, however, met with a vigorous denial. According to L. F. Binkley, an associate attorney in the office, Ekern's partnership is only nominal and he seldom takes part in its activities.

"Mr. Ekern has only visited Chicago three times this year," declared Binkley. "And each time he was here but a short time and on state business with other Wisconsin officials. The talk of him collecting two salaries is ridiculous."

With three exceptions, Binkley said, the firm has not dealt with any recent Wisconsin cases at all. One of those was a settlement of two replevin suits here for the Northwestern National bank, Milwaukee; another was an action to collect on reinsurance treaties for the General Insurance company, Madison; and the third a minor personal suit for H. W. Krueger, Green Bay, against the Builders' Mutual Casualty company.

Willing to Open Records.

Binkley said that he handled each of the cases personally and that Mr. Ekern had nothing to do with them.

"If Mr. Smith or anybody else doubts these facts our books and records are open to them," he said. "I am certain that there would be no objection to an investigation of this kind. We have nothing to conceal."

The Progressive candidate was quoted as saying: "I would be willing to stop my campaign now if Ekern will frankly, freely and fully open his books in Madison and Chicago for inspection by accountants as to his activities and profits."

The history of Ekern's Chicago associations, it was learned, dates back to 1913, when he was a member of the firm of Ekern, Meyers & Janisch. Later Harold P. Janisch, the third member, left the firm and established separate offices at 168 North Michigan avenue.

Listed among the regular clients of the Ekern-Meyers firm are the Illinois Agricultural association, the Illinois County and Township Mutual association, the State Fire Mutual Automobile Insurance company, and the Illinois Bankers' Mutual Casualty company. None of these are Wisconsin companies.

Keller deserted his wife and two children, took the $96 there was in the savings and left his wife with 12 cents. Since then the policemen and firemen have been helping out the family.

A feature of the celebration will be a "Forty-five" tournament, an ancient Irish card game participated in by players from all over the state. There will be Irish pipes and fiddlers and jig contests. John A. McGarry, chairman of the managing committee, announced that speakers of note will furnish the "come-all-ye." Capt. M. W. Delaney is president of the United Irish societies.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

BORI KEEPS HER TWO ROLES OF MANON DISTINCT

Artistic Interpretation at Ravinia.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Under ordinary circumstances it would be a risky experiment to cast the same artist as the two Manons, Puccini's and Massenet's, in the same season. Yet Lucrezia Bori sang the second of these at Ravinia last night, having opened the season with the first, and there is still occasion to wonder that two portraits, so different and yet each so complete, should have come out of her skillful brain.

Down at the bottom, of course, they are the same Manon, just as it is the same Bori who does them. But Massenet's opera, that takes its name from its leading character, is considerably lighter in treatment than Puccini's, with considerably more gay sparkle and less tragedy to it. This difference was expertly reflected in Miss Bori's Manon of last night over her Manon of June 26. It was a case where her acute stage sense resulted in perfectly good psychology. I hasten to add that it is hard to say which of her two portraits is the more charming.

Recalls Yvette Guilbert.

For some time I have been haunted by Miss Bori's resemblance to some one else without being able to identify that some one. Last night during her solo over the supper table in the second act it developed that the person was Yvette Guilbert, not at all in tone of voice and certainly not in figure, but in expression of face and fleet gesture of hand. It was part of a wholly exquisite performance.

Mario Chamlee appeared as Chevalier des Grieux and gave the best performance of his Ravinia career. Dramatically and vocally the part fits him to perfection. He has the youth, the impulsive ardor, and the good manners to carry off the visual side of the rôle, and his voice is light enough for the Dream Song in the second act and rich and vibrant enough for the impassioned Aria of the third. Wherefore, a first class Des Grieux went adventuring with a first class Manon.

Principals Set Pace.

With these two eminent and ingratiating principals, the pace was set for a large number of rôles of lesser length, Leon Rothier as the elder Des Grieux, a fine, if brief, impersonation; Desire Defrere as Lescaut, Louis D'Angelo, and several others. The first act was staged in a most lifelike manner, and Louis Hasselmans conducted with all the deftness that is in the music.

NEGRO IS SLAIN AFTER SHOOTING 2 GIRLS IN GARY

Gary, Ind., July 24.—[Special.]—After shooting two Negro girls and terrorizing Gary's south side for several hours today, Alex Trine, notorious colored gambler and gunman, was shot six times and killed by Detective Sergeant Oscar Salzman. Trine had been cornered in an old house at 17th and Monroe by several riot squads of police and it was while attempting to make his way to freedom through a window that he was spotted by Salzman and killed.

Trine, according to friends of his, became infuriated when Miss Georgia Johnson, colored, refused to sell him a pint of moonshine, shooting her twice. He turned and fled from the house, firing as he ran, and a bullet slightly wounded another Negro girl.

BILL FILED TO CLOSE DAYTONA SHORES AFFAIRS

Miami, Fla., July 24.(AP)—Suit for dissolution of Daytona Shores, Inc., and appointment of a receiver to assume management of the corporation was asked in a suit filed in Circuit court here today by Louis J. Hamel of Miami, secretary of the organization, and a number of stockholders. A receiver is needed, Mr. Hamel asserted in papers filed to prevent the company from becoming insolvent. Richard Enright, former police commissioner of New York City, and Carl Exselson of Chicago also were named as defendants.

Daytona Shores, Inc., was organized in July, 1925, for the sale and development of a tract of land at Daytona Beach, Fla.

WIFE LOCKS MAN IN CLOSET; COPS LOCK HIM IN JAIL

As Policemen Tierney and Petack of the Sheffield avenue station passed a house at 464 St. James place last night they heard loud cries and pleadings for release.

They investigated and found that John Hevers, 34 years old, had been locked in a clothes closet by his wife. They asked her why.

"He's full of moonshine," she said. "And every time he gets that way he sells some of my clothing to get more liquor. I caught him this time, so I just made a jail out of the closet. He'll not take any more of my dresses"

The policemen took Hevers to the station, charged him with disorderly conduct and gave him a real cell.

DONALD STEWART, NOVELIST, WEDS IN CALIFORNIA

Santa Barbara, Cal., July 24.—[Special.]—Donald Ogden Stewart, New York humorist and novelist, was married this afternoon to Miss Beatrice Ames on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Ames, the bride's parents, at Monticello. Dr. Samuel N. Walker read the service in the presence of 300 guests. The ceremony was in the little Episcopalian church of All Saints by the Sea.

Robert B. Benchley, dramatic editor of Life, was best man and the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Marjorie Ames.

The couple will leave tomorrow en route to New York and Europe. They plan to live in southern California on their return.

King Vidor, one of the guests, paid $1,100 to attend the wedding. Under his motion picture contract he was refused permission to neglect filming unless he paid his entire company for a day's work.

SOLDIER 'CAMPS' BY DOUG'S BED TO GET IN MOVIES

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

WARSAW, July 24.—Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, who returned from Moscow last night, were awakened early this morning to find an officer in full uniform and wearing a long saber standing in the middle of their salon in the Bristol hotel. Clad in pajamas, Fairbanks bounced out and demanded the reason for his presence, but received only responses in Polish. He gave up the task of understanding the officer, and plunged back into bed.

Three hours later the movie actor found the soldier still patiently waiting. By this time visitors were crashing the doors of the entire suite, and interpreters who were trying to separate 500 stagestruck Polish girls from the Warsaw journalists discovered the soldier had made up his mind to join the Fairbanks company at any cost. He was still in the apartment when the Fairbanks party, quietly eluding the crowds surrounding the hotel, reached the train for Carlsbad.

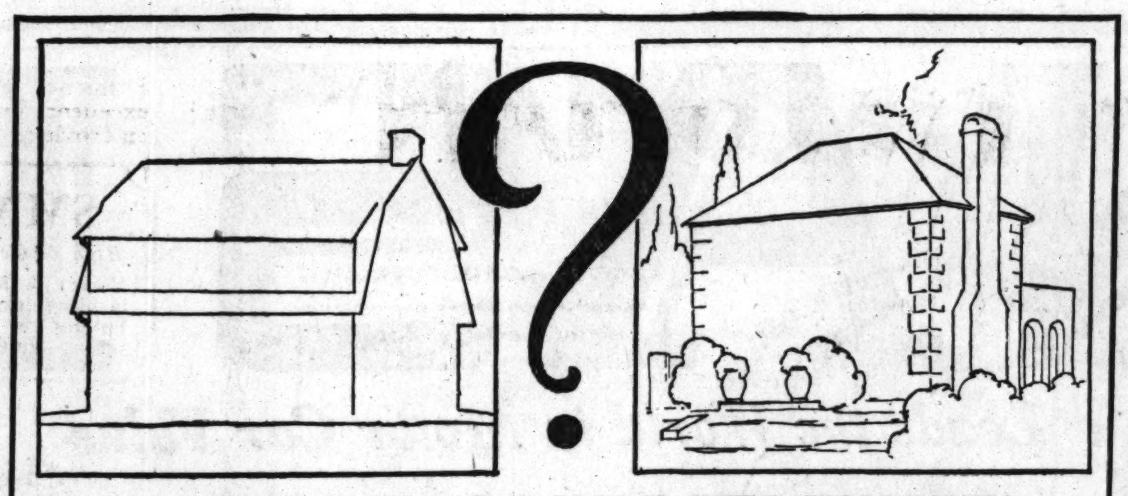
TODAY—the first Lehigh Prize Home . . .

OPENS for your inspection



IN WHAT KIND OF A HOME WILL YOU LIVE?

THE AVERAGE HOME: Moderate in Initial Cost only. Needs frequent painting and repair. Poorly arranged—inconvenient. Its value lessening through excessive depreciation. Always in danger of fire.

LEHIGH PRIZE HOME: Moderate in Cost—at first and forever. Repairs—needs almost none. The ultimate in the utilization of space. Permanent—depreciation is at a minimum. Fire hazard—you can forget it.

IN home construction, progress now demands a change. Yesterday's home cannot stand comparison with such a home as the one illustrated above.

This home—one of the 28 prize-winning homes in the Lehigh Prize Home Competition—was selected by a jury of eminent architects because it successfully combines the five essentials which today set a new standard in home building: Skilful planning; Moderate Cost; Permanence; Fire-safety; Attractive design.

The home illustrated has just been completed for your inspection.

What you will find in this home

Skilful Planning: Suppose now that you are going through the home. You enter the hallway—with service entry and lavatory close at hand. On the right a door leading to the large living room with its open fireplace and three sided exposure. A spacious porch and dining room are next—the dining room communicating directly with the kitchen.

Now upstairs. Three large bedrooms, each with ample closet space. Two bathrooms. It would be an easy matter to add a sleeping porch. A simple plan but decidedly original.

Moderate Cost: When you hear the actual cost of this house it may seem low, considering its beauty and size. The answer is in the ease with which it can be built and the comparatively moderate cost of its concrete masonry construction.* In this home repair expense and depreciation (rent in another form) are reduced to a minimum. There is only the trim to paint—concrete cannot rot, rust or decay.

Permanence: This home has durability. Its concrete masonry units, instead of lessening in strength and resistance as the years go by, actually grow stronger. Such homes maintain a high resale value at all times.

Fire-Safety: Walls of stucco—sills and lintels of concrete—chimneys of concrete block—are safeguards against the hazard of fire.

Attractive stucco finish

The unusually attractive texture and color of the stucco finish is only one of an infinite variety of colors and finishes obtainable through the use of portland cement stucco.

The Lehigh Dealer can help you

When you decide to build go to the dealer in your community who displays the Blue-and-White Lehigh Sign. He handles Lehigh cement because it is dependable. Is it not reasonable to expect such a dealer to protect your interests in other ways by handling a line of thoroughly Dependable Materials?

A competent contractor can save you money

Make sure to secure Competent Workmanship. A good contractor will save you money through skilful building economies. He will put quality both where it is seen at the start and where it will be noticed for its low repair expenses in the years to come.

An architect's supervision

This Lehigh prize home has been built under architectural supervision.

Do not under-estimate the assistance a good architect can give you.

With his help you are sure that plans are correctly drawn, estimates and specifications accurate, and that there will be no unnecessary extras once the home is started. He will invariably save you more than his fee.

*Concrete masonry calls for the use of concrete masonry units (block, brick or tile) for walls with an exterior finish of portland cement stucco.

COUNTY FOREST ACCUSERS TURN DOWN CERMAK

No Need to Look at Files, Citizens' Assn. Says.

The Citizens' association yesterday declined County President A. J. Cermak's offer to give the association access to the files of the forest preserve district. It has obtained all the information it wants from the published official record, it says, and, despite Mr. Cermak's recent arguments to the contrary, still believes that there has been a large waste of public funds and excessive profits to middlemen in the purchase of forest preserve lands by the county board.

No Need to Examine Files.

"As we have already obtained from the official record all important information that your files would be likely to show, we see no occasion at this time for examining those files," the association, through its acting president, L. F. Gates, and Secretary Shelby M. Singleton, said in a letter to Mr. Cermak.

"We have read with interest your statement outlining your supposed procedure in making purchases. This association has not laid stress on faults in that system, as we have learned in the investigation of many other public offices that petty systems do not of themselves protect public funds.

"Your records show conclusively that the distinguished citizen members of your plan commission, whose names you put at the head of your statement, have seldom attended meetings of that body in recent years, except a few called to consider important matters of policy, so that these persons, whose public spirit no one would question, have doubtless had no knowledge whatever of any of the transactions which we have criticized.

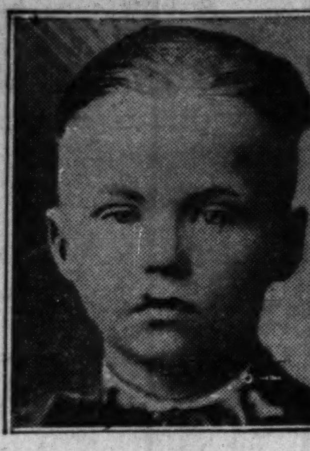
Insist Loss Is $1,000,000.

"Permit us to say in closing that no fact has been brought out in your statement which in any way changes our opinion, heretofore expressed, that by dealing with middlemen who were enabled to get options upon many tracts because of the failure of the Forest Preserve district to deal directly with the owners, the purchases investigated by us have cost the taxpayers at least $1,000,000 in excess of the sum for which those lands could have been acquired if the matter had been handled differently."

FIND AGED MAN KILLED SELF.

Suicide while temporarily despondent was the verdict returned by a coroner's jury yesterday investigating the death of A. C. Schmidt, 70 years old, 2456 Indiana avenue, who cut his throat with a razor Thursday in a washroom of the Municipal Pier.

BURNS FATAL



JOHN PLANTA.

John Planta, 11 years old, 1401 South Jefferson street, died yesterday at St. Luke's hospital from burns received in a gasoline explosion. While playing in the basement of a bakery at 1413 South Jefferson street Friday, a match he lit exploded a nearby can of gasoline and the boy ran screaming from the basement with his clothing afire. A group of boys playing ball on a vacant lot beat the flames out with their hands, but the burns were fatal.

UPHOLDS BLUE LAWS OF 1794, FINES HEAD OF CENTENNIAL $4

Philadelphia, Pa., July 24.—(AP)—E. L. Austin, director general of the sesquicentennial exposition, today was found guilty by Mrs. Violet E. Fahnestock, police magistrate, of violating Pennsylvania's blue laws of 1794 in operating the exposition on the Sabbath. Mrs. Fahnestock fined him the limit of $4 provided by the law, plus costs of $4.50.

Instead of paying the fine Mr. Austin put up a bond of $17 pending an appeal to the county courts.

The prosecution, as in former cases, was brought by members of the Methodist men's committee. It was testified by Thomas D. Taylor, chairman of the committee, that goods were sold in the exposition grounds last Sunday and that amusements were operated on the Gladway.

More warrants are to be issued for the arrest of employés working at the exposition on Sunday, it was stated.

Tomorrow the concessions on the Gladway, where all the amusements are concentrated, will be operated free of cost to the public. The only charge will be the usual fifty cents admission to the grounds. Nothing will be sold, under the orders of the management, except food and drink. The owners of the amusements will be reimbursed out of the general fund of the exposition to the amount of the cost of operating their concessions.

BELLWOOD NOW IN SPOTLIGHT OF SPEED TRAP QUIZ

Charge Graft in Collection of Cash Bonds.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

While forces under the direction of Assistant State's Attorney Charles Mueller and Joseph H. Braun of the Chicago Motor club were completing briefs of the voluminous evidence gathered against officials of the alleged Broadview and Markham speed traps yesterday for presentation to the grand jury on Tuesday, motorist reports of speed trap methods in new spots in the county continued to pour in to the state's attorney's office.

According to the prosecutor, the village of Bellwood came into the general investigation for the first time following a number of reports charging illegal fee collection and "family" control of the stretches of Butterfield and St. Charles roads in the village. They charge that John Fippinger, police magistrate of Bellwood, and his stepson, Officer Wolf, control these roads and that a $1 fee is levied in each case where a cash bond is collected, and placed in a "kitty" for the department.

Premium on Arrests.

"If these charges are found to be true," said Mueller, "the method places a premium on the number of arrests made by the officer. The more arrests, the more money piles up in the 'kitty.' One report is that this officer made 24 arrests on the first day he was assigned to a motorcycle in Bellwood, all between the hours of 2 and 8 p. m."

On the other hand the prosecutor and motor club received further proof that some village officials are coöperating voluntarily in the speed trap clean-up. Attorney Braun announced that Police Magistrate Paul R. Witt of Forest Park has drawn up a model receipt system to comply with state laws.

All Get Same Receipt.

Witt has ordered that all motorists arrested be given this form receipt, showing the exact amount and kind of bond taken following the arrest, and that they be given the second form of court receipt showing the exact amount of fines and costs assessed. Duplicate receipts will be filed by the court and the records will be available at any time.

Chief McGrath, veteran of the Oak Park police department, repeated his orders that streets shall be patrolled openly and vehicle laws enforced for safety.

36 MILLION ON VACATIONINCARS, AUTO CLUB SAYS

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[U.P.]—Thirty-six million persons are spending their vacations behind the steering wheels of 9,000,000 automobiles and are spending $3,000,000,000 on camping, hotel, gasoline, and other expenses, the national touring board of the American Automobile association announced today. The board's survey shows automobile vacationists this year exceed greatly all previous records.

MAN, WIFE, AND 2 CHILDREN DIE IN BURNING HOME

Muskegon, Mich., July 24.—[Special.]—Ralph Christie, 41; his wife, 37, and their two children, Marian, 6, and Charles, 2, lost their lives this morning when fire destroyed their cottage. The fire was discovered at 3 a. m. by neighbors awakened by the barking of two dogs belonging to Christie. Flames were shooting from the windows and doorways and it was impossible to enter the cottage. Officials said they believed all of the occupants of the house were dead before the fire was noticed.

"BOY NAPOLEON" VICTIM OF RED PLOT, CZECHS SAY

Moscow Feared Gaida as Dictator Force, Claim.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, July 24.—Instead of having betrayed his country to Russia, as was publicly charged, Gen. Gaida, the deposed young chief of staff of the Czecho-Slovak army, is said to be the victim of a fiendish bolshevik plot intended to destroy his reputation and the strength of the greatest military genius and war patriot of the republic.

Friends of the general from the ranks of the Fascist organizations, of which he is reported to have been the secret head, today advanced a startling new explanation in the earnest defense of the young general, who plays a stellar rôle in the greatest case of central European intrigue and counterplot revealed since the war. They maintain that the "boy general's" inborn military genius was recognized and he was feared for his Napoleonic qualities by the Reds, who endeavored to eliminate him by the old methods employed against Gen. Dreyfus.

Attacked by Reds.

The shift of European parliaments to the left and the consequential impasses between the Conservatives and Radicals has brought about a widely growing tendency toward military dictatorships and increased the national importance of army leaders of the various central European and Balkan nations, particularly in instances where such leaders are suspected by local communists and internationalists of having relations with the Fascist elements of the country.

General staff officers in a number of countries where inroads of bolshevist propaganda have been marked with increased communist representation in parliament fast are believing that the Gaida case reveals a new instrument Moscow has developed for the destruction of conservative nonpolitical army leaders having potentialities as possible dictators.

New Bolshevik Weapon.

They explain that the new Red weapon for the prevention of dictatorship is as follows:

The communist party politicians report to Moscow on the prospects of a national parliament breaking down. If such a development is imminent the attention of the Reds then is directed to the army. Efforts are made to convert agitators in the ranks and spread the seed of mutiny. Then investigations are made concerning army leaders, particular consideration being given to their popularity with the masses outside the army as well as the enlisted men and fellow officers.

Money then is made available in an attempt to corrupt or implicate the leaders in something with a treasonable interpretation. This material then is held in abeyance to be launched in the subsidized press to destroy the prestige of the officers under charges of treason and alienate any popular following he might have as a possible dictator.

A Fascist Leader.

Gen. Gaida had been generally recognized as the leader of the Czecho-Slovak Fascists, though his position as chief of staff of the army forced him to make frequent denials of this charge.

The communist deputies answered the Slovak cries with shouts of "It is not long since Gen. Gaida offered himself up!"

This constituted the first public suspicion directed against the general and released the storm which resulted in his curious dismissal shortly afterward under obscure circumstances, which are discovered by the statement that he has been given "a compulsory indefinite leave of absence."

Following this startling development, divergent sections of the Czecho-Slovak press published long articles accusing Gen. Gaida of having sold the French military secrets to the soviets in 1920, almost causing the capture of Warsaw by the Reds, and later having divulged secrets concerning the production processes of the Skoda war plant.

Plot for Revenge.

The deposed general's friends and supporters of the Czech Fascist movement now charge that their accusations were false and were framed up for the dual purpose of retaliation against Gen. Gaida for his execution of bolshevik prisoners when he was with Admiral Kolchak in Siberia and also to subject him to public disgrace, remove him as a national hero of the republic, and eliminate him as a popular leader in case a dictatorship succeeds the parliament of the Bohemian republic.

A Fascist newspaper today published an unconfirmed report that three generals composing the honor court have authorized Gen. Gaida to take direct action against his accusers.

British Schooner, Rum Laden, Seized with Crew

New York, July 24.—(AP)—The British auxiliary schooner Mulhall was seized off Fire Island today with a cargo of alleged whisky and malt valued at more than $90,000, and brought into port. The five members of the crew, including Capt. Chesley Anderson, were held on board ship.

BREWSTER, HERE, EXPLAINS POWER LAW OF MAINE

Gov. Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, in Chicago last night en route to Cheyenne, Wyo., for a conference of governors, discussed a law of Maine which prohibits the transmission out of the state of power produced in the state.

This law, Gov. Brewster said, has been in effect 18 years and its purpose was and is to prevent federal control of their power systems which might become possible if the power crossed a state line. Gov. Brewster said he was not at all certain such a law is constitutional and some time ago he was unopposed to a proposal to test its constitutionality by a friendly suit.

The Insull interests are now seeking to link up power systems in Maine, he said, and there might not be any opposition to a repeal of the law if it is proposed to link Maine's power systems with a national interconnected power system. Only in that event, the governor declared, the people of Maine might insist on a preferred rate in view of the great sources of power in Maine.

VIENNA DOCTOR USES DRUGS TO RESTORE YOUTH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 24.—A new rejuvenation process is announced by Dr. Doeppler of Vienna, who has applied it in numerous cases in the clinic of Prof. Lorenz.

While Prof. Steinach has been rejuvenating patients through operations Dr. Doeppler treats the vital arteries. These are brushed with a solution of phenol, which destroys the contracting nerves of the arteries, thus enlarging the latter and increasing the blood circulation. This restores youth without subjecting the patient to a dangerous operation.

The experiment has been carried out on men only so far but the Vienna clinic is preparing to experiment on women.

DETAILS.
Many details added together complete a task. These details, carefully combined and painstakingly accomplished, enable the finished product to be termed "genuine quality."
Masters of artistry—modern and old—many times took years to complete their works. No detail was overlooked.
The markets of the world are full of products just good enough, but no great thing has ever been accomplished—no permanent success achieved—without a determination to see that every detail, no matter how small, was well and honestly done. However mistaken the individual worker may be, it is well to have a final thought: "No one could do better."

FILIPINOS SHOW COOLIDGE ENVOY NEW SUGAR BIN

Secret Process Extracts Product from Palms.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LOS BANOS, P. I., July 24.—A new process for extracting sugar from nipa palm trees, which had been kept virtually a secret, was described by Col. Carmi Thompson, President Coolidge's emissary making an investigation here, as "the greatest discovery I have yet made in the Philippine islands."

Col. Thompson's find was made on a visit to the College of Agriculture at the University of the Philippines at Los Banos.

He was escorted to the chemical laboratory by Dean Charles Fuller Baker, where Dr. Manuel Roxas, professor of chemistry and speaker of the Philippine house, explained that it has been determined definitely that an excellent grade of sugar may be obtained through boiling down the sap of the nipa palm, the process being similar to that used in making maple sugar.

As Good as Cane Sugar.

Dr. Roxas pointed out that many thousands of nipa trees are growing along the Philippine coast and are now used by the natives almost solely to obtain leaves for thatching their houses. Nearly all these trees could be used regularly to produce enormous quantities of sugar which, when refined, would be practically as good as cane sugar.

Col. Thompson dipped his fingers in a glass filled with a sample and tasted it, after which he requested that a full and detailed report on nipa sugar experiments, together with all available data concerning its possibilities, be prepared for him as soon as possible.

College Is Self-Supporting.

Col. Thompson was highly interested in the rest of the college tour, particularly when informed that the college is forced to be self-supporting. Virtually the only source of college revenue is selling milk from the experimental cows, and meat from those that are through the experimenting stage, and by running a transportation line.

The attention of the colonel also was attracted by a newly invented copra drier, which can be made very cheaply for poor farmers to whom the cost of the present driers is prohibitive.

The university now has 600 students and was established in 1909 by the bureau of education.

On the way to Los Banos, Col. Thompson stopped at Calamba to visit the home of Jose Rizal, the great hero of the Filipinos, who was executed by the Spanish in 1896 in connection with insurrectionary activities. He also went to the Rizal Memorial school to hear the first grade pupils recite "Little Boy Blue." The colonel was as tickled by the experience as the pupils were awed by his presence.

MOTHER WINS BACK CHILDREN AFTER DIVORCE

Lucille and Margaretta Aghasian, 12 and 10 years old, respectively, yesterday were reunited with their mother after a separation of several years following the divorce of their parents six year ago. Drecka Aghasian, the father of the children, died five years ago, leaving an estate valued at $100,000, having previously placed the girls in an orphanage.

The mother, who is now Mrs. Anna Gauthier of Oxford, N. J., and who is amply able to care for them, came to Chicago three weeks ago to trace the children, with the aid of an attorney. Yesterday Judge Ryner in Circuit court legally awarded the girls to their mother, and they departed with her for their new home in the east.

SAM UNTERMYER TAKES HAND IN SUBWAY STRIKE

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—Acting for the striking Interborough subway motormen who had appealed to him, Samuel Untermyer tonight requested Police Commissioner McLaughlin to hold an investigation into the fight between the police and strikers in front of the Manhattan casino, 155th street and 8th avenue, late Friday night, giving the strikers the right to be represented by counsel, call witnesses, and cross-examine.

This request was made by Mr. Untermyer in the form of a letter from his home at Greystone after Edward P. Lavin, leader of the strikers, had gone there and told Mr. Untermyer his version of what occurred the night before.

TRIO ROBBED OF $3,000 FROM CUB PARK CONCESSION

Two women and a man, carrying with them $3,000 taken in by Fred Chamberlain yesterday through his concessions at the Cubs ball park, were robbed in a hallway of Chamberlains' home at 2611 North Albany avenue shortly after the double header was over.

Three armed men met Mrs. Fred Chamberlain, wife of the concessionaire: her sister-in-law, Mrs. George Chamberlain, and Phil West, who is employed at the ball park, and commanded them to hand over the money, which was in a leather bag. Much of it was in silver.

As soon as they obtained the bag the trio ran out of the house and stepped into a waiting automobile in a nearby alley. At the wheel as they drove away, according to witnesses, was a young woman. Mrs. Fred Chamberlain said she had noticed one of the men standing near a refreshment booth at the park during the games and that he seemed greatly interested in the amount of business being done.

Woman Yells "Liar" at Lawyer; Sent to Jail

Mrs. Delia Evans, 9713 Ewing avenue, was sentenced to serve one day in jail for contempt of court by Judge Jesse Holdom yesterday after she had called Attorney Walter J. Flens a liar. The lawyer charged that Mrs. Evans' daughter, Cora Schneider, was unfit to have custody of her 5 year old son because she was friendly with another man. Mrs. Evans shouted at the attorney and the judge declared that she must be punished for violating the dignity of the court.

VIOLENT STORM DOES DAMAGE ON N. JERSEY COAST

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—A violent gale which lasted only twenty minutes, swept the New Jersey coast this morning, uprooting trees and unroofing buildings at Sea Girt, Manasquan, and other New Jersey towns, and injuring several members of the New Jersey National Guard at the encampment at Camp Moore, where tents and temporary buildings were blown away.

The gale was a violent local wing of a storm which was accompanied by winds and heavy downpours in many parts of New England. The wind had died down by the time it reached New York City.

The storm hit New Jersey from the west. At certain places it attained a greater velocity than any on record. Countless windows were shattered, trees were stripped of limbs and torn from the ground, and garages and other small structures wrecked. Scores of light beach houses were blown from their foundations.

LIBERAL ATTACK ON BRITISH TRADE SUBSIDIES LOOMS

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 24.—Attacks in parliament on the board of trade for its aid to certain industries are likely to be launched soon by the Labor and Liberal groups, it is believed in parliamentary circles. The principal point of contention is the trade facilities act, passed in 1921 in order to help Britain regain trade supremacy, particularly in the colonies, where Britain's trade slump was greatest during the war.

The act provided for the government guaranteeing bond issues for new companies planning to engage in foreign and dominion trade, thus enabling them to raise capital for ventures which would be more or less speculative and which would have to wait a long time for profits.

In practice, in many instances at least, it has been taken advantage of to secure capital and sell shares in speculative ventures which now show little sign ever of proving profitable. One of the features is the provision for the compulsory use of British materials in the construction of plants abroad.

In last March, the last date for which the total figures are available, the total sum guaranteed was £64,191,000 [about $320,955,000]. In March, 1925, the total was £52,600,000 [about $263,000,000]; so in one year the total has increased nearly £11,500,000 [about $57,500,000].

A typical case is that of two paper and pulp enterprises in Newfoundland. The largest Newfoundland power and paper company is Cornerbrook, Newfoundland, which is controlled by the great armament combine of Armstrong-Whitworth. This combine now is in financial difficulties and it is reported the Newfoundland enterprise is near collapse, being unable, in spite of the government support, to compete in the market with the more efficient privately controlled competitors.

The company was organized in 1915 as the Newfoundland Products company, but was reorganized in 1922 under its present name, in which year it obtained, under the trade facilities act, a government guarantee of principal and interest on a £2,000,000 [about $10,000,000] mortgage debenture issue for twenty-five years and a guarantee of a similar amount from the government of Newfoundland.

Both issues were fully subscribed, as well as $5,000,000 worth of ordinary shares, $5,000,000 worth of deferred ordinary, and $10,000,000 worth of deferred preference shares at 6½ per cent. The British guaranteed bonds carry 4½ per cent interest and the Newfoundland 5½ per cent.

There was another smaller issue about the same time of £425 000 [about $2,225,000] worth of guaranteed bonds by Wayegemack News, Ltd.

The Laborites and Liberals take the view that the act permits an improper subsidy by the Conservative government to selected industries.

Boy Averts Panic of 150 Children in Theater Fire

Duluth, Minn., July 24.—(AP)—One hundred and fifty children attending a matinée in the Doric theater, West Duluth, this afternoon walked out in orderly fashion when an unknown boy shouted "Remember your school fire drill!" as a film broke and caught fire in the projection room.

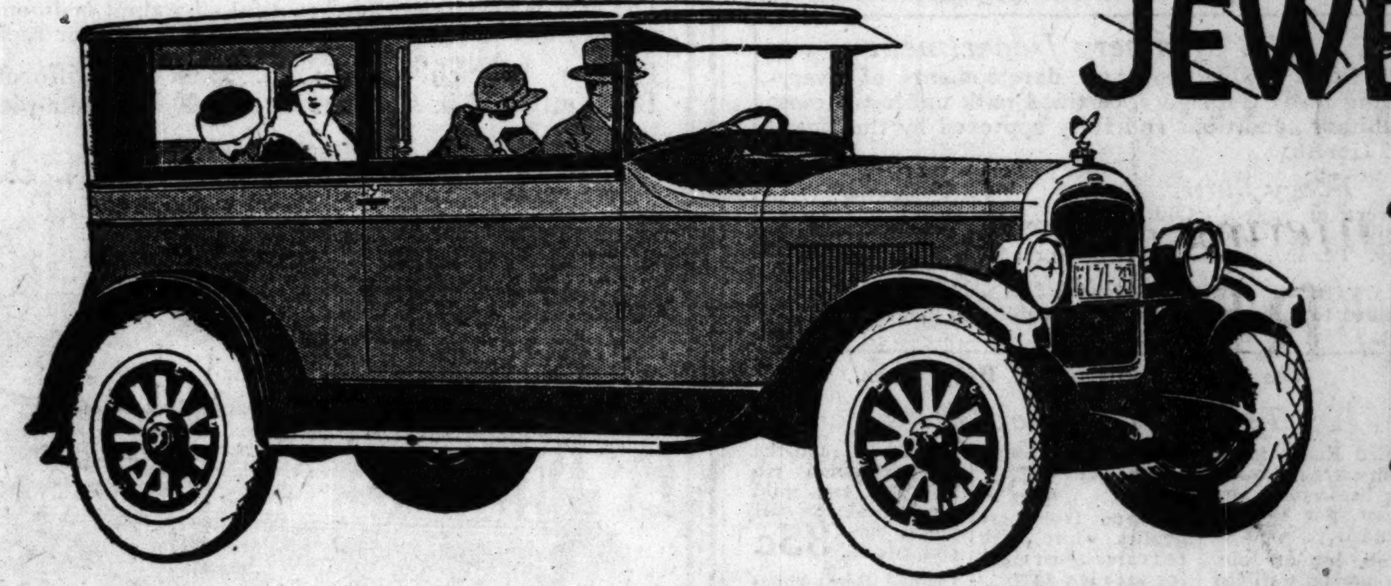
The New-Day
JEWETT SIX



$995
for the Standard Sedan; Deluxe Sedan, $1095; Deluxe Touring Car, $1095. All Paige-Jewett prices are f. o. b. Detroit, tax extra. Paige-Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes included.

1 Paige-Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes—the most expensive braking system on the market, but the best and surest and safest. Your New-Day Jewett stops instantly with the slightest foot pressure, and without jar or jolt.

2 Equally instant acceleration. A flashing pickup that carries you out and away from every traffic jam while the others are still changing gears. An ability to turn completely around in narrow streets, and to park in places unbelievably small.

3 Ultra-modern, highly perfected and wonderfully simplified engine. Ample power and speed for every driving need—and yet one of the most economical engines ever built. High pressure oiling prevents bearing wear and insures smoothness and long life. Full water jacketing maintains uniformly perfect cooling always. Silent chain driven timing mechanism, highly efficient and perfectly quiet.

4 An entirely new ease of handling. Ball bearing steel spindles and inclined king-pins enable you to guide the New-Day Jewett with your finger tips, effortlessly and with the greatest ease.

5 Oversize construction throughout. A frame 5½ inches deep where most others on cars in this field are 4½ or 5. Springs average from 1 to 4 inches longer. Clutch, transmission, axles and driveshaft are unusually rugged. Everywhere is evidence of extreme sturdiness—a car built to withstand the roughest treatment.

6 The widest vision of any motor car built. Slender pillars of sturdy steel completely eliminate the deadly "blind spot". Entering the New-Day Jewett is like going out on the porch—you can see everywhere—drive more safely always.

7 There is more interior room than in many cars of much longer wheelbase. The costliest cars have no more head room. There is more knee room between seats—more free passageway to the driver's seat or rear seat than in most other two-door closed cars. The leg room in front is 40 inches—48 inches in the rear.

8 Features and accessories are remarkably complete. The pedal pads are adjustable. Running boards are of steel. There is a cowl ventilator, dome light, door pockets, rotary window lifts. It has semi-automatic spark control. It is upholstered in beautiful, silky, long-wearing material; finished in two-tone lacquer, rubbed, waxed and polished. There is a co-incidental theft lock, an oversized battery, and many other equally necessary or desirable features.

SUSPEND CANTON CHIEF OF POLICE, FOE OF MELLETT

Mayor Dissatisfied with Enforcement Record.

Canton, O., July 24.—(AP)—As the unavailing search for the assassins of Don R. Mellett, crusading Canton publisher slain at the door of his garage July 16, lagged through the ninth day, Mayor S. M. Swartz, late today ordered the suspension of S. A. Lengel, chief of police.

Mayor Swartz said he suspended Lengel because the chief was lax in the enforcement of law and rendered his department inefficient because he had no control over his men. Safety Director Earl Hexamer was appointed acting head of the police department. Lengel's suspension was effective immediately. He will be given a hearing before the civil service commission.

Sued Mellett's Paper.

Lengel has been openly accused of being derelict in his search for the murderer and with failure to "clean up the city." Within the last few weeks he was reinstated as police chief, following a hearing before the civil service commission on charges of corruptness made largely by Mellett. The chief at present has a libel suit pending against the Canton Daily News, of which Mellett was resident publisher.

New Lead Reported.

J. D. Cleary, Columbus detective representing Gov. Vic Donahey, this afternoon had long distance telephone conversations with Warden P. E. Thomas of the Ohio state penitentiary and with officials of the Mansfield reformatory concerning "a new lead in the investigation."

It has been a constantly recurring theory that the plot may have originated behind the bars of the state institutions.

Irate Italians Kick Hole in Yank's Painting of Beggars

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 23.—A street crowd, watching an American artist, Donald B. Barton, painting a picture of a great cathedral in Venice, kicked a hole in the painting because the artist painted mendicants begging at the church entrance. The newspapers protest against American painting mendicants in Italian scenes. The American consul aided in smoothing over the dispute.

FLORIANOPOLIS, Brazil, July 24.—(AP)—Nearing the end of his long flight from New York to Buenos Aires, Bernardo Duggan, Argentine aviator, and his two companions in the seaplane Buenos Aires left today for Rio Grande, 400 miles down the coast. Rio Grande is only about 500 miles from Buenos Aires.

CALCUTTA, July 24.—[U. P.]—Alan Cobham, British airman making a round trip flight from England to Australia, hopped off today for Akyab, Burma.

"CUT OUT UNFAIR STATIONS," RADIO LISTENERS TOLD

Radio listeners were asked to refuse to listen to what is termed "unfair stations," also referred to as air pirates, in a strike call issued yesterday by the Broadcast Listeners Association of America. A list of the so-called unfair stations, those that jump their wave lengths or increase their power, will be furnished by the organization later.

The relinquishment of control over radio broadcast by the federal government is responsible for the association's action, the strike call said.

A strike fostered by the organization a year ago brought about an agreement by all Chicago broadcasters to observe "silent night" by remaining off the air each Monday night.

One station yesterday announced an increase in its power from 1,500 to 10,000 watts.

"At Your Door"

Standard equipment includes: Automatic Windshield Cleaner, Rear View Mirror, Transmission Lock (built-in), Radiator Shutters, Moto-Meter, Combination Stop and Tail Light.

Many of these advantages you will recognize at a glance. But you will have a higher appreciation of their meaning when you know that a plant of 18 acres which, with equipment, approximated a cost of $10,000,000, was first built and that special machinery had to be designed, to make possible this New Coach now on display.

Again Essex "6" offers in the design and construction of the New Coach as radical an improvement as was the original Coach itself.

It is all steel, bolted and riveted, and so rigid that squeaks, rattles and distortions, are as unlikely as in a steel building. Doors are so hung that a man may hang on an open door while the car is being driven over rough roads, without springing it out of true.

And it is so designed and constructed as to permit the use in a totally new manner of a high baked enamel, most lustrous and lasting finish. This has made possible new combinations in finish that will please your eye.

There has been constant improvement in the chassis from the first Essex shipped. Every week has seen some betterment. But only by the accumulation of the resources, the information, experience, and the skill that have resulted from the purchase of 350,000 Essex "Sixes" in a short period of time, was it possible to erect the plants, to perfect the machinery, to create the designs that have resulted in this car which we ask you to inspect and to drive as the best looking, best value, best Essex ever built.

WARM WEATHER SWELLS GIFTS TO ALGONQUIN FUND

One Woman Sends Check in Memory of Mother.

The second generation carries on.

Nothing in the history of Camp Algonquin has more touchingly demonstrated the place this charity holds in the affections of Chicagoans than the few lines received yesterday from Edna M. Leisley, who wrote:

"I am enclosing a shall check in memory or my mother, Kate L. Leisley, who always contributed to the Camp Algonquin fund."

And this tribute was but one among a shower of letters and gifts engendered by the torrid spell of last week—evidence extraordinary that the great majority of people, themselves suffering with the heat, were mindful of the luckless thousands who can only wait and endure, until a change of weather brings relief.

Get a Kick Out of It.

One among these was particularly interesting, although the writer requested that his anonymity be preserved. He writes:

"Enclosed is a check [$25] for your Camp Algonquin fund. You are doing a nice piece of work there. Several times we have passed the camp on various canoe trips. We always get a kick out of the way the little chaps nudge each other and ask: 'Are they real Indians?' We always stop a while and watch them play. The picture is well worth the enclosed price.

The thought occurred to me that there are many Chicago families with cars who don't feel able to contribute to the camp but who would be willing and glad to assist by carrying children and their mothers out there. It is a pleasant Sunday drive to Algonquin over splendid roads and each person so carried would save railroad fare."

RUM RUNNER'S DEATH UNSOLVED.

Unable to solve the mystery surrounding the murder of Jules Portugese, hijacker and gem thief, a coroner's jury yesterday closed an inquiry, recommending that the unknown killers be apprehended and prosecuted. Portugese's bullet riddled body was found on Milwaukee avenue, northwest of the city, July 12.

RED GRANGE'S ADMIRER

MRS. CLARICE TAYLOR.

In a cross complaint divorce bill filed by Charles E. Taylor, wealthy oil supply dealer at Los Angeles, he is said to have accused Mrs Taylor of being infatuated with Red Grange, football celebrity, who has just returned to Wheaton from Hollywood. He denies there is any ground for accusing him. Later reports indicate it is simply a case of hero worship on Mrs. Taylor's part.

NATIONAL CRIME BODY DEMANDS GUN TOTING BY CRIMINALS CEASE

New York, July 24.—(AP)—The national crime commission today turned its heavy artillery to the task of silencing the pistol of the criminal.

Representative Ogden L. Mills [Rep., N. Y.] led the attack, supported by other prominent speakers, who urged the imposition of high taxes on pistols, a system for registering their sale, and the restriction of sale to police, army and navy officers. Representative Mills' suggestions for checking crime were contained in a letter read to the national crime commission's special subcommittee which is studying the relation of the sale of small arms to crime.

Indorsing the views of Representative Mills, Commissioner of Police McLaughlin advised the committee that only the police should be allowed to sell pistols.

3 BOYS HELD IN THEFT MURDER OF WATCHMAN

Three boys, none more than 17 years old, were held by Warren avenue police yesterday on suspicion that they may have been involved in the murder of Harry King, 57, watchman for the Schwartz Picture Frame company, 2110 Walnut street. King was killed Thursday night by thieves.

The boys are George Williams, 15 years old, 1508 Fulton street; George Smith, 16, 1235 West Lake street, and George Carter, 17, 1522 West Lake street. They were arrested by Patrolmen Savage, Lackey and Sineson.

According to police, the robbery was the work of amateurs. King, apparently was killed by a glancing blow on the back of the head.

BOXER SOCIETY AGAIN APPEARS AMONG CHINESE

Danger Said to Depend on Type of Leaders.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, July 24.—In the wake of war in Shantung, Honan and some other provinces of eastern China has come a revival of the Boxer society. Unlike the organization of 1900, which was but the tool of the agents of the empress dowager, the present group of societies is not anti-foreign, but chiefly represents a form of local patriotism. It is fanatical and based on ignorance, and unless unscrupulous persons engage in the leadership it is likely to be nothing more than a series of more or less isolated bodies exercising only a local influence. However, the "Red Spears," "Hard Bellies" or "Righteous Fists" as the groups are variously and often interchangeably known, are more or less coming into public notice through conflicts with the riff-raff military in control of the regions where they are most numerous.

The name Boxer so generally applied since 1900 comes from the fact that the novitiates undergo a long series of training to fit them for their work. They are accustomed to withstanding severe physical punishment at the hands of their drillmasters and some can stand immovable against a rain of blows from fists or even clubs, while they are taught also something of the art of self-defense.

Carry Red Spears.

These so-called "Invulnerables" usually carry red spears, hence the name locally applied in most sections. They are in the hands of leaders who teach them that they can withstand even bullets after being endowed with the magic with which these leaders pretend to bestow upon them. They are mere dupes, all of them, for the drillmasters, using something akin to the magic of India, perform all sorts of feats that prove their invulnerabflity. Therefore, the recruits are cool against fire from modern weapons or against bayonet or spear attacks, believeing that their hardened bodies and the charm they possess are proof against any weapon that can be directed against them by an enemy.

Of course, the object of all this deception is to get men who can stand up under fire and not break when a comrade falls at their side, and often this results in the rout of a regularly armed body sent against them. But once in a while an entire company of them comes to grief.

One Case of Slaughter.

Nominally these "Red Spears" are the local defense society against the murderous, looting, ill disciplined troops that have been gathered together by leaders, which bodies have been broken up and scattered by recent military operations by the troops of Wu Pei-Fu. But all through western Shantung and eastern Honan the scattered remnants of the second Kuominchun remain, and it is in this section, an area as great as the state of Iowa and five times as populous, that the "Red Spears" are most numerous. Every day or two comes news of an encounter between the troops and the "Red Spears."

A notable case of wholesale slaughter of these fanatics was in the Suichow district of Honan, about midway between the important walled city of Kweiteh and the capital, Kaifeng. It was here that the "Red Spears" set out to capture Suichow, and they suffered a loss of 300 men killed. In this case it was a question of revenge upon the military, and the farmers arose against the ill treatment they had suffered. When the fighting occurred in that section this spring carts and men were conscripted without mercy, and as many as 700 carts and their horses never came back. Few of the men have returned, either, and these with a thirst for vengeance. All the grain and fuel also were carried off by the military, which left a trail of rape and rapine.

Used No Weapons.

It was about this time that the fanaticism of the "Read Spears" came into evidence, according to an American missionary who viewed some of the operations from the Suichow wall. Two of the "Red Spears" came within hailing distance of the walls and invited the soldiers to fire upon them to their hearts' content, crying that they were invulnerable and possessed of a magic charm. These men had Buddhist insignia in a circle on their bare chests. One of them held in his hand only a small Buddha; the other a simple fan. Weapons they had none. With his fan one man nonchalantly waved aside the bullets that came from the wall; the other smiled and pointed to the painted chest or waved the Buddha he held.

Owing to poor marksmanship neither man was hit. This demonstration encouraged the rest of the "Red Spears" and they prepared to assault the city. On the third day of the siege a regiment of soldiers arrived from Chihsien, twenty-three miles distant, to reinforce the Suichow garrison. On their arrival the soldiers sallied out of the city gate and fell upon the company of "Red Spears."

The fanatics, believing themselves invulnerable, held their ground, and more than 300 fell dead of bullet wounds. The others, in the belief that the magic charm was lost, fled.

Then followed a cleanup of the villages at the hands of the soldiers, many of the "Red Spears" having remained at their homes. The slaughter included women and children as well. One man of 70 was shot while on his knees in supplication on the mere charge that two of his sons were among the "Red Spears."

CHICAGO'S NEWEST HOTEL
Overlooking the Lake—Lobby an Innovation
BY IRVIN CLAY LAMBERT

Much has been written about the competition of hotel builders, but perhaps the most unique and most popular place in the public mind is the Hotel Eastgate, located at the corner of Ontario and St. Clair Streets, just one block east of North Michigan Avenue and nine minutes' walk from the loop, or as happily expressed, "just a whisper from the loop—and just outside its noise, heat and grime."

The permanent guests at Hotel Eastgate have been living at hotels for many years and as one matron expressed it—

"We have lived in most of the better hotels in Chicago, but the Eastgate comes nearest to the ideal home we have found. First, because it is entirely new. The furnishings and decorations are exquisite, comfortable and luxurious. The service compares favorably with the best hotels of New York and Europe. The Aposento Lobby is a revelation in beauty and comfort. Here guests assemble in homey friendliness that eliminates the usual cold hotel attitude. The management evidently knows what is required to make people comfortable and happy. The maid and room service, telephone service, valet service, the front office attention, is unusually efficient. The newest things in plumbing fixtures, the latest ideas in elevators, most recent innovations in lamps, lighting fixtures, furniture and furnishings, are here in profusion."

The rates are surprisingly low, $2.50 to $4.00 per day for transients—and special rates for permanent guests. These low rates for a high grade hotel are possible because it is already about 75% rented.

The Eastgate is furniture men headquarters and is only three blocks from the Furniture Mart and three blocks from the new Northwestern University Medical School.

Ample parking space and garage in connection.

G. O. P. ACCEPTS CHALLENGE OF TARIFF ISSUE

Farmer to Get Special Campaign Attention.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[Special.]—Accepting the challenge of the Democrats to make the tariff an issue, the Republican congressional and senatorial campaign committees propose to demonstrate to the farmer that the present protective tariff law is of actual benefit to him.

The complaint of the corn belt farmer that he makes his purchases in a protected market but sells his products in a market controlled by world prices has no real basis in fact, the Republican campaign managers contend, and they are arming their orators with all sorts of statistics and arguments to prove it.

That the Democrats will succeed in making the tariff a major issue in the congressional elections is conceded by the Republicans. The invitation extended by Senator Robinson [Dem., Ark.], minority leader of the senate, to Republicans from agricultural states to join with the Democrats in a movement for a lowering of the tariff has sounded alluring to voters in some middle western areas, it is recognized.

See Corn Belt Danger.

Failure of the type of farm relief legislation demanded by the corn belt is admitted to have made the perennial tariff issue more dangerous to the Republicans than at any time since the revolt against the Payne-Aldrich tariff law.

What makes the situation all the more critical, the Republican regulars realize, is that farm groups within the Republican ranks are in an angry frame of mind and threaten to retaliate against the administration by supporting the movement for a revision of the tariff downward.

Expect to Be Prepared.

The Republicans expect to be fully prepared to meet the tariff issue by the time the joint headquarters of the senatorial and congressional campaign committees are opened in Chicago next month. Tons of literature on the subject will be ready for distribution.

Senator Phipps [Rep., Col.], chairman of the senatorial campaign committee, and Representative Wood [Rep., Ind.], chairman of the congressional commitete, have both recognized the importance of the tariff issue by preparing speeches which will serve as guides for the Republican campaign orators.

Wage Earner the Pawn.

"The American farmer can reduce the American wage earner to the level of the European if he so desires by assisting those who would tear down our tariff walls, and he should do this if he figures that by so doing he will be the gainer in the transaction," said Representative Wood in hitting at the theory that the tariff is of no benefit to agriculture. "Any time the American farmer desires to exchange the American wage earner, who eats beef and veal and pork and mutton, and consumes 154 pounds of it a year, for the European workingman. with his poverty stricken standard of living;any time the American farmer desires to exchange the American industrial worker, who eats white bread three times a day, for the European laborer, who eats it not at all, he can take a long step in that direction by assisting the enemies of the protective taric system tear down the tariff walls.

High Living Standard.

"It is not a one-sided arrangement wherein the farmer, to use a deceptive catch phrase which has become current, "buys in a protected market and sells in an open market.' Under the present protective tariff system the farmer sells in a protected market and he buys in a protected market. The American wage earner buys in a protected market and he sells in a protected market. By reason of this exchange of commodities between the protected farmer and the protected wage earner the living standards of the farmer are maintained at a level to the astonishment and the admiration of the civilized world.

Call Argument Not Valid.

"The Republicans contend that there is no validity to the argument that agricultural sections are being injured by the lack of a proper market in Europe for American farm products, and that this lack of market is due to the fact that European nations cannot sell us goods and take American farm products in return because the present tariff is so high that it prevents the exchange of European goods for American farm products."

AS SHEATHING
Celotex supplies the insulation needed back of brick, wood or stucco exteriors. Here it replaces the rough boards formerly used, gives greater strength to the house walls and makes building paper unnecessary.

UNDER PLASTER
On inside walls and ceilings, plaster is applied directly to the surface of Celotex. This eliminates the use of lath and gives stronger, insulated walls: less apt to crack and free from lath-marks.

IN THE ROOF
Most heat beats into houses through roofs in summer, causing hot attics. Most heat leaks out through roofs in winter, causing high fuel bills. Celotex applied over or under roof rafters gives the needed protection. Both uses are recommended.

FOR OLD HOUSES
In homes already built, a big measure of Celotex comfort and economy may be secured by lining attics and basements with it. In the attic an extra finished room can be made by nailing Celotex to the roof rafters. In the basement line the ceiling with Celotex.

FOR GARAGES
The heat of your car itself, after running, will keep a Celotex garage warm unless the weather is way below zero. It costs but little to build a garage of Celotex; and anyone can line a garage already built, quickly and easily, as shown here.

Amazing Lumber

sets new standards of home comfort and economy

No one can afford to build or buy a home today without full knowledge of an amazing heat-stopping lumber.

Leading architects and other building authorities consider it as one of the most important contributions ever made to American home building practice.

This amazing lumber, Celotex, was produced to meet the great need for a building material that would resist the passage of heat and cold better than wood lumber, masonry and other wall and roof materials.

It does what none of the ordinary building materials, alone, can do . . . keeps sun heat from beating in and furnace heat from leaking out.

Celotex Insulating Lumber is not cut from trees. It is manufactured from the long, tough fibres of cane. It is enduring . . . scientifically sterilized and waterproofed. Celotex is stronger in walls than wood lumber and many times better as insulation. Wind and moisture can not penetrate it. It quiets noise.

In five years more than 90,000 families have built with Celotex and are enjoying a wholly new degree of home comfort and economy.

It is available for every home, new or old, right now!

ACTUALLY saves money. Another reason for the tremendous success of Celotex is the economy it brings. Unlike ordinary insulation, Celotex is not an extra item in building.

It replaces wood lumber as sheathing, (see the illustrations), eliminates building paper. It builds a more rigid wall than wood, because of the greater bracing strength of these broad Celotex boards. It adds the insulation needed back of wood, brick or stucco exteriors at no extra cost.

Under plaster, replacing lath, Celotex costs a few cents more per yard at first, but is a great economy. It means less upkeep expense because of no lath-marks . . . fewer cracks. With Celotex in the walls and in the ceilings or roof of your house a smaller, less expensive heating plant and smaller radiators will keep you comfortable.

And year after year, Celotex will save from 25% to 35% of your fuel bill!

NEW COMFORT for old houses. In houses already built, a big measure of this comfort and economy is being secured by lining attics and basements with Celotex. That helps a lot and costs but little.

There are also dozens of other places where Celotex is the ideal material for building and remodeling.

IF YOU are going to build, talk with your architect, contractor or lumber dealer about Celotex. Leaders in these lines advise its use. All lumber dealers can supply it.

IF YOU are going to buy see that Celotex is used before you put any money into a house. Now that Celotex has made insulation practical, heat-leaking houses are a poor investment. The authorities say that such houses are becoming obsolete; harder to sell, rent or borrow money on.

Meanwhile, send for the free Celotex Building Book. It explains fully this great improvement in building. Just mail the coupon below.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Paul, Minn., July 24.—Frank Dolp, the man who sinks 'em from all over the green, won the western amateur golf championship at the White Bear Yacht club golf course this afternoon and started home to Portland, Ore., with the silver trophy tonight. Dolp defeated Bon Stein, Seattle, 6 and 5, in the final match of the most upsetting tournament the W. G. A. has ever staged.

The tournament was upsetting, the dopesters going awry at all times, but when the final analysis is made and the figures are studied it is plain to see that Dolp was the champion from qualifying round to final. The only time the Portland lad—he's 23—played the fatiguing White Bear course over par was in the qualifying round, and in thirty-six holes in that part of the tournament he took 149 strokes. Par for the double round is 144.

Putting Wins Tourney.

During the tournament Dolp, aided by that miraculous putter, defeated Harry Legg, Harrison Johnston, Chick Hunter, Hisert, and Stein, all of them good golfers, and he beat them all with decision. His putter is the secret of the victories.

The battle today was without especial thrill. It was Dolp from the time he won the first hole. The ninth hole saw him 2 up. At the eighteenth he was ahead by 4 holes. When they rounded the twenty-seventh after luncheon the Portland boy had a lead of 7 holes, and the battle, if such it may be called, ended on the thirteenth green, Dolp winning, 6 and 5.

None of the favorites who were entered saw the finish or even the semifinals. Chick Evans, eight times winner of the western amateur title; Keefe Carter, last year's winner; and Harrison Johnston, who won in 1924, were all eliminated in the first round.

Nineteenth Hole Halved.

At the nineteenth Dolp and Stein were both on in 2 and down in 2. The twentieth was also halved. On the short third of the course, the twenty-first of the match, Dolp got on the green in 1 and down in 2 putts for a par 3 and a win. Stein was to the right on his tee shot and took a 4.

They halved the fourth and the fifth resulted in a win for Dolp, who played that 441 yard hole in a par 4. Stein missed a putt for a half and was 6 down. The short sixth was halved in par threes.

The seventh measures 452 yards an easy birdie 4 hole and Dolp was a trifle short on his second and got a par 5. Stein missed a putt for a half and was seven down. The ninth and tenth were halved and they made the turn with Dolp 7 up and a sure winner.

Stein Wins Tenth.

On the tenth, a 330 yard hole, Stein got a par 4 and won it. He was on in 1 and took 2 putts. Dolp was in the trees with his second shot and got a 5. On the 188 yard eleventh Dolp's tee shot went into a trap short of the green and Stein was on, winning the hole with a par 3. Stein was 5 down.

The next hole, the twelfth, has 393 yards between tee and cup, and Stein tossed his tee shot into the rough, while Dolp went down the center. Dolp won the hole with a par 4, and the thirteenth, a 538 yard par 5 hole, was halved in par figures and the match was over.

Crusader Wins $25,000 Race at Cincinnati

Cincinnati, O., July 24.—[U. P.]—Crusader, son of Man o' War, owned by Samuel D. Riddle, continued his triumphant march to the three year old championship of the year when he won the $25,000 Cincinnati Derby at the Coney Island race track this afternoon.

Walter J. Salmon's Display, winner of the Preakness, was second, and E. R. Bradley's Boot to Boot grabbed the short end of the purse.

Calaris Is Also Ran.

W. T. Anderson's highly touted English colt Calaris, after making most of the early pace, tired after a mile and a furlong and finished fourth.

Crusader established himself as one of the greatest distance runners in recent years when he ran the mile and a quarter in the sizzling time of 2:02, a new record for this track.

One surprise of the race was the splendid showing of Display, which had shown little in subsequent races to justify his victory in the Preakness. The Salmon colt was right up behind the pace throughout and hung on with real courage in the stretch to place.

Crusader the Favorite.

The winner was installed odds on favorite and paid $3.60, $2.60, and $2.40. Display returned $6.60 and $4. Boot to Boot was $2.80 for show.

Until this Derby Carlaris was the leading money winner of the year, with $99,325. Fourth money today raised his total to $100,325, but Crusader, with the $20,150 winner's purse, boosted his total to $113,860.

George Conway, trainer of Crusader, received a telegram today from Owner Riddle to use his own judgment about shipping the horse to Chicago to run in the $100,000 American Derby at Washington Park Saturday. This, of course, was contingent on Crusader coming out of the Derby in first class condition. This is an unusual concession to midwestern racing, as Mr. Riddle in past years has confined his racing efforts to New York and Maryland tracks.

Black Maria and Capt. Hal Romp to Wins

BY FRENCH LANE.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Black Maria, coal black daughter of Black Toney-Bird Loose, came out of the east yesterday and galloped to the easiest kind of a victory in the first running of the $10,000. Illinois Oaks at Washington Park. Only three started and she beat the Kentucky filly In Bounds by six lengths, with Spanish Star from Louisiana a distant third.

It was hardly a good workout for the filly which carried W. R. Coe's silks to victory. Her presence frightened out the westerners in the original field of eight until she had the contest at her mercy. The crowd of 15,000 backed her with confidence until she went to the post at 1 to 10, the shortest priced favorite of the season.

Toys with Track Record.

Under a strong pull by Jockey Benny Bruening, Black Maria galloped the mile and an eighth in 1:54, a fraction of a second slower than the record, and never at any time was her lead threatened or her supremacy challenged. She could have ripped the track record wide open had Jockey Bruening at any time given the fleet Miss her head, and she could have won by a dozen lengths or more had it been necessary for her to turn into high speed in the stretch.

Playing a more important rôle on the day's program than even Black Maria, was a thoroughbred several miles away from Washington park, down in Kentucky on the Idle Hour farm where Black Toney grazes and sleeps away the hot summer days. For Capt. Hal, his son, even more famous than the daughter, Black Maria, was again in the spotlight, when he tied the track record racing to a brilliant victory in the six furlong Sterling purse, the secondary feature.

Capt. Hal Romps Home.

Capt. Hal carried another crusher of 130 pounds, but once Jockey Kurtsinger got him into full motion at the head of the stretch the result was never in doubt. The Captain toyed with Bulletin from H. G. Bedwell's stable, letting him race into a good early lead before he got down to business. It flattered the backers of Bulletin, but their cheers were drowned in a mighty shout for Capt. Hal as the big black fellow, in a dozen strides, conquered Bulletin and then came on to win as he pleased.

Bulletin was so thoroughly whipped he stopped completely in the last half, giving up second money to the fast finishing Child's Play.

Paying $140 for each $2 ticket, Rib Grass got up in the last strides and won the first race from the favorite Sarko, it being the highest price any horse has paid at the course.

PETROLLE K. O.'S ADAMS IN 8TH CYCLONE ROUND

Lightweights Fight Whirlwind Battle.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

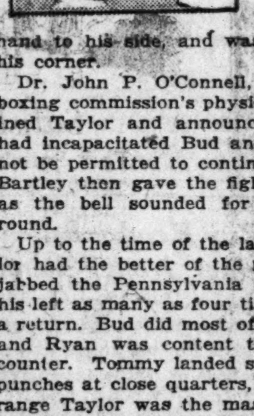
Bud Taylor, hard hitting bantamweight, won over Tommy Ryan in the fourth round of the feature bout of the boxing show at the White Sox ball park yesterday afternoon. Taylor was given the decision after Ryan had hit him low four times.

It was the second big Chicago boxing show since boxing was legalized. While the card did not boast of a champion, it was strong enough to attract 8,000 fans.

As early as the first round Ryan hit Taylor belowe the waist and was cautioned by Referee Mike Bartley. Mike started to give the fight to Taylor as soon as the blow was delivered, but Taylor waved him away and continued.

Bud Fouled Twice in Second.

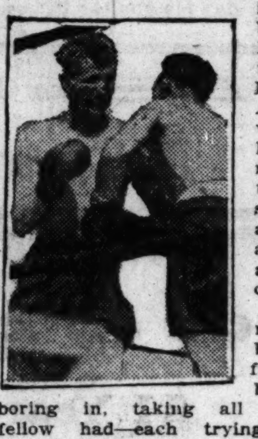


In the second round, Tommy let go two more illegal punches, but as they two more illegal punches, but as they landed on Bud's legs Taylor paid no attention to them. Again in the third, just before the bell, Ryan sunk a long left hook into Bud's groin. Taylor slumped to his knees, holding his hand to his side, and was carried to his corner.

Dr. John P. O'Connell, one of the boxing commission's physicians, examined Taylor and announced the foul had incapacitated Bud and he should not be permitted to continue. Referee Bartley then gave the fight to Taylor as the bell sounded for the fourth round.

Up to the time of the last foul Taylor had the better of the milling. Bud jabbed the Pennsylvania fighter with his left as many as four times without a return. Bud did most of the leading and Ryan was content to duck and counter. Tommy landed some scoring punches at close quarters, but at long range Taylor was the master. Ryan and Taylor each scaled 119½ pounds.

Adams-Petrolle Whirlwinds.



Although the fans were disappointed in the ending of the Ryan-Taylor bout, in the battle between Billy Petrolle and Johnny Adams, which followed the main event, the crowd saw as tense and furious a fight as any one could ask.

Seven rounds they battled at a furious pace, both game, boring in, taking all the other fellow had—each trying to beat the other in leading, both slashing and swinging viciously with both hands. Almost immediately after the gong for the eighth round Petrolle let go with a long right swing which connected squarely on Adams' jaw. Johnny went down and was counted out. The time of the eighth round was 27 seconds.

It was one of the greatest fights seen around Chicago in years. They stood toe to toe or leaped at each other like panthers, whaling away with both hands. At times the fighters' heads bobbed like punching bags from the impacts.

Start at Tap of Bell.

At the first tap of the bell they turned loose with all the speed of four round fighters. The round was not a minute old before the crowd was in a frenzy. Fans stood on their seats, waved their hats and yelled, and the fighters kept up this amazing pace for seven rounds. Though both showed its effect in their punches losing steam, they kept pounding away, keeping the fans on their feet to the finish.

The eighth round had scarcely started when Petrolle landed a right on Adams' jaw and he fell on his back near the ropes. He tried to get up at the seventh count, but fell back with his head under the ropes as the final three seconds were tolled off by Referee Bennie Yanger. Adams scaled 134¾ pounds and Petrolle 132¾.

In the opening bout Jack McVey and Wolcott Langford, Negro welterweights, went ten rounds to a draw. Langford led in the early rounds, but was unable to stave off McVey's fast finish.

McVey staggered Langford in the ninth round with a left hook and in the final session nearly upset Wolcott with a right cross. Jack had a clear advantage in these rounds, and

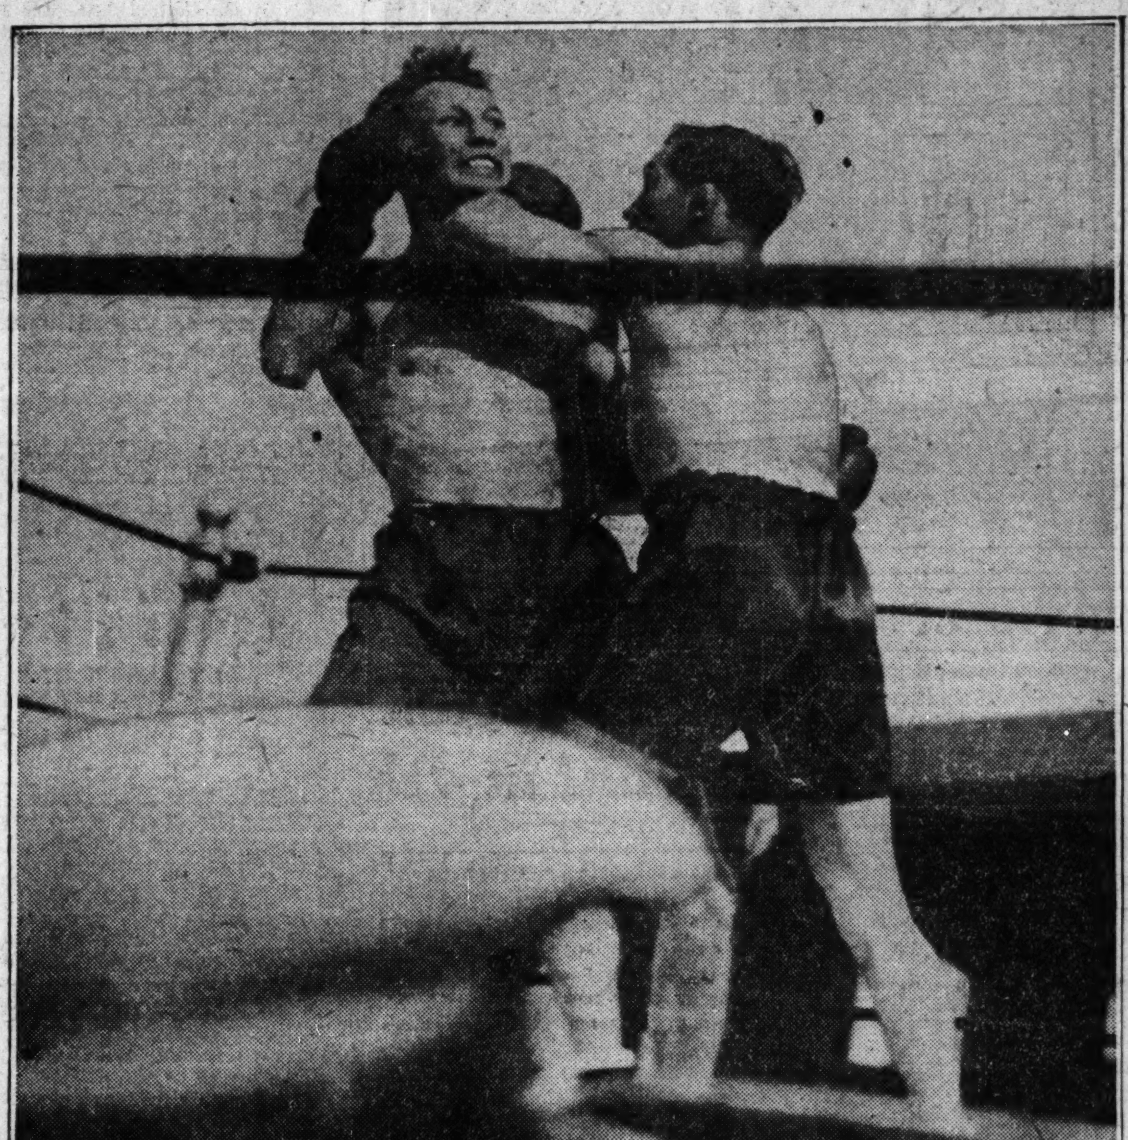
MIXING AT CLOSE QUARTERS

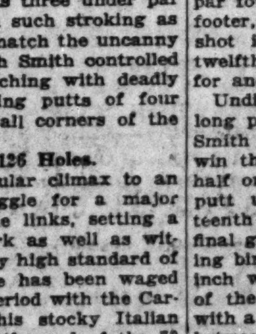


Tommy Ryan (right) misses left hook, but the force of the swing jolted Taylor's head. Immediately afterward the fighters clinched. Throughout most of the three rounds Taylor carried the attack to Ryan.

Bud Taylor, surrounded by his seconds, and Eddie Long (left), his manager, after third round of his battle with Tommy Ryan, in which Taylor was fouled four times by Ryan's low punches. The last blow so injured Taylor that he was unable to continue, and Referee Mike Bartley gave him the decision over the Pennsylvania fighter.

Smith's Record Golf Wins Metro Title From Sarazen

Garden City, N. Y., July 24.—(AP)—The magic touch in MacDonald Smith's putter today carried the Lakeville professional to a sensational and record breaking victory over Gene Sarazen, the defending title holder, in their playoff for the 1926 Metropolitan open golf, championship.



MAC DONALD SMITH

Shooting a 66, seven under par, that clipped a stroke from his own record for the number 3 course of the Salisbury Country club, Smith emerged triumphant by a four stroke margin. Sarazen himself was three under par with a 70, but even such stroking as this was unable to match the uncanny accuracy with which Smith controlled his short game, pitching with deadly precision and sinking putts of four to forty feet from all corners of the greens.

Play Goes 126 Holes.

It was a spectacular climax to an unprecedented struggle for a major championship of the links, setting a new endurance mark as well as witnessing an unusually high standard of scoring. The battle has been waged over a fortnight's period with the Carnoustie Scot and his stocky Italian rival deadlocked at the end of the 72 holes of championship play proper with scores of 286, and tied again at the end of each of two 18 hole playoff rounds last Sunday with 70 and 72 apiece.

Smith, with his record-breaking round today—which beat his own tournament round of 67—finished with a grand total of 494 strokes to his rival's 498 for the seven complete rounds or 126 holes of play. Some idea of the victor's brilliancy is shown by the fact that his total is seventeen shots under par or ten under "even fours." His average for each round was 70 4-7.

Smith Leads by Two Strokes.

Smith was two strokes in the lead at the turn, adding to his margin at the seventh with a fine pitch and six foot putt for a birdie. He settled the issue by adding a stroke to his advantage on each of the next three holes, sinking a 15 foot putt for a birdie two on the tenth, getting his par four on the eleventh with a four footer, while Sarazen was wasting a shot in the rough, and taking the twelfth with a curling 20 foot putt for another birdie.

Undismayed, Sarazen himself sank a long putt to win the fourteenth, but Smith came back with a birdie two to win the short fifteenth. He saved a half on the next hole with a 40 foot putt uphill and squared the seventeenth with a six foot putt. On the final green Smith's bid for a concluding birdie missed by a fraction of an inch when his putt hung on the lip of the cup, Sarazen taking the hole with a four to reduce the final margin between them to four strokes.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

TITLE BOUTS.

THERE'S difference of opinion whether it is for the best interests of Illinois boxing for a heavyweight championship bout to be held in Chicago at this time.

When Tex Rickard was in Chicago shortly after the boxing law was approved by referendum he advised Chicago promoters against such a venture. Then he expected to hold the affair in New York or New Jersey. Now he is quoted as thinking Chicago an ideal spot. Which simply shows that one may change one's opinion if it is to one's interest to do so.

Isn't there considerable hoakum to this "welfare of boxing" stuff? What could make a title bout undesirable at one time and desirable at another? We can think of only one answer. That is, experience in conducting such affairs. Otherwise, what's the difference, so far as boxing itself is concerned?

Let us assume that Dempsey's contest with whatever opponent is selected is on the "up and up." There is no reason to think otherwise. It may prove a good contest or it may prove one sided. That cannot be determined in advance. The cash customer takes that chance when he buys his ticket.

What the cash customer expects in return is the seat for which he pays. That involves proper policing and ushering. Experience in promotion there comes into play.

What other factors could enter the situation? Well, a financial flop, involving failure of the promoters to pay off the purse and other obligations. But even if that could or did happen, the public would not sit up nights wailing over the misfortune of what it considers overpaid gladiators.

Chicago and tributary territory may not yet be ready to pay $2,000,000 to see Dempsey defend his title. But the gate, as we see it, does not directly concern the welfare of boxing in Illinois.

Golf Remedies.

Dear Harvey: Try this remedy. I've seen it work. Park your clubs at the clubhouse, slip over to your Jonah hole, and take a rest. Watch a few foursomes go through. Count the number of dub shots that are made and the number of shots that go into the drink. Average this with your own score and find that yours is not so worse. Enjoy a good laugh at some other fellow's expense and pat yourself on the back. This worked for me. Now retrieve your clubs and carry on.

URBAN FABER.

New York, July 24.—Those Lambasting Yankees might have had trouble winning a ball game today if the White Sox infield hadn't had a butter fingered infield. As it was, the Huggins sluggers breezed through by a count of 7 to 4. Four of their seven runs were given to them through fumbling of the Chicago players.

Old Red Faber was on the slab and he was fit for a fight, too, but he could not win when the boys behind him were kicking the ball all over the place. Red stuck in the combat for six innings and then, with the count 4 to 1 against him, gave way to a pinch hitter, who did his stuff in a seventh inning rally in which the Sox tied the count.

Freak Hits Score Three.

That made it look rosy for the Collins crew, but with Jim John Edwards on the rubber, the Yankees scored three runs in a jiffy, not in their usual manner of knocking the cover off the ball, but because lady luck stepped right in at that time and became one of them.

Three hits were made off Jim John in that seventh and all three were shameful affairs. Herr Koenig, late of St. Paul, bounced an ordinary single into the left stand seats for a homer after a base on balls. The mighty G. Herman Ruth got a two bagger on a pop fly because the wind carried the ball away from Morehart. Paschal hit a Texas leaguer off the handle of his bat and drove the Babe home. Three awful hits, but they scored three runs.

Give Yanks Four Runs.

However, those three runs wouldn't have beaten the Sox if they hadn't given the Yanks those first four while Old Red was laboring on the rubber. Boss Collins took himself out of the game and sent Morehart to second base today because Boss Eddie hasn't been sleeping well these hot nights. Apparently Morehart hadn't slept at all. Everything that came his way was fumbled but he recovered some of them in time to nail his man so he was charged with only two errors.

Hunnefield, too, fumbled one and it was costly, and Willie Kamm let one sift through him and it was costly. Consequently the Yanks had four runs handed them while Faber was hurtling a superb spitter and curve at them they couldn't hit worth shucks.

Sox Cut Loose in Seventh.

The veteran Bob Shawkey was on the rubber for the Yanks, and in six innings held the Sox to three safe hits. A double by Mostil and a single by Morehart in the fourth produced one run in that period of time but there were a half dozen line drives hit right at some fielder. They were drives which would have wrecked any game if hit in the proper direction.

Shawkey was doubtless uneasy but he wasn't in any trouble until the seventh inning. After Falk had died on a vicious line drive to Ruth and Sheely had died the same way, Old Bob lost control and walked Harris and Kamm. McCurdy went up as pinch hitter for Schalk and caromed a single off Bob's toes. That filled the bases and it was Faber's turn to bat. Bill Barrett went up for him and hit a long single to right center that scored Harris and Kamm and sent McCurdy to third. Then Johnny Mostil crashed a two base drive to right center, putting McCurdy home with the tying run. Barrett attempted to leg it home from first base but was relayed out.

There was nothing flukey about the way the Sox got their four runs. But it was an awful way the Yanks got their three after having been handed four.

HEINIE SAND IS GROUND GLASS TO BEAR TASTE

21,000 Turn Out and Razz Bruins.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

HEINIE SAND.

The gay Cubs received a swift kick in the neighborhood of their first division hopes yesterday and it was administered by none other than the sometimes humble Phillies.

First thing the usually meek visitors accomplished was a 2 to 0 victory in the front portion of a double header. Evidently some of the whitewash splashed into the Cubs' eyes, for they were even weaker during eight rounds of the nightcap and managed to dodge the humiliation of a second shutout only by making a dying gasp and scoring two runs in the ninth. This affair ended with a 3 to 2 count.

The double trimming would have been bad enough even before an ordinary turnout, but this thing came over before a healthy collection of about 21,000 folks, who got so steamed up over what was happening that they felt it necessary to give the home boys the razz.

They're Not Hittin.'

The entire trouble, and it was enough, was that the McCarthys lacked their usual timely hits. They had any number of changes but could make no headway, first against Harold Carlson and then against Clarence Mitchell, the spitballing left hander, who worked in the nightcap. Given a few blows at the right time they probably could have battered down both these fellows, because the Phils weren't exactly rough with the Cub flingers, as the low count indicates. But the Philse hit a few in the pinches.

A prominent workman, from the Quaker standpoint, was Heine Sand, who delivered the famous bribery message in 1924. In the first affair Heinie worked Percy Jones for a pass that was converted into a run and later drove in the second tally, which occurred with Huntzinger on the slab. Then, in the afterpiece, Heinie started a two run rally with a single off Bob Osborn. The third run of this game also scored while Osborn was toiling, but Sand had nothing to do with it.

Phils Fill Bases.

The Phils threatened a bit without getting anywhere in the first couple innings of the opening game but in the third managed to shove over one of the two runs on which they copped the decision. Sand led off in the inning with a walk and Leach came through with a single. Then Mokan drew a pass and the sacks were populated to capacity with none out. Grimes hoisted a long fly to left and Sand scored after the catch.

For the first five chapters Carlson was so stingy with his hits that the Cubs didn't have a Chinaman's chance to go anywhere. Then they came through with three blows in the sixth without results. Heathcote started with a hit and Freigau flied out. Heathcote tried to steal but Ump Reardon called him out in a questionable play. Hack Wilson and Stephenson hit, but Grimm, who then had two hits to his credit, died swinging.

Cubs Have Chance in Ninth.

Jones was removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh so in the next frame Huntzinger took up the pitching burden. He got by despite a couple passes in the eighth but in the ninth the Quakers managed to hop on him for their second run. Friberg led off with a single and continued to second on Heathcote's fumble. Carlson did nothing except fly out but Sand produced a low fly that came down close to the right field line for a single and Friberg scored on it.

It wouldn't have taken much to put Carlson completely out of business in the ninth. Sand started the round by booting Cooney's grounder. Gonzales walked. Tolson was brought out to bat for Huntzinger and he popped a bunt into Grimes' mitt. Then Adams walked to load the corners but Heathcote tapped to Carlson for a force out at the plate and Freigau forced Heathcote at second to end the battle.

Stage Double Steal.

With one out in the third inning of the second game Sand singled to right and Leach did the same, putting Sand on third. Then the two fellows brazenly worked a double steal, Sand crossing the plate. Later in the inning Dixon scratched a hit through Cooney and Leach went home.

The run in the fifth was due principally to Mokan who slammed the ball into left center for three sacks. Grimes hit a slow bounder at Adams and Ump Reardon decided the runner had beaten the throw to first so that let Mokan score.

Until the ninth the Cubs hadn't done enough with Mitchell to be worthy of mention. Then they cut loose and filled the bases with one out on a hit by Stephenson, pass to Grimm and infield hit by Cooney. Gonzales forced Cooney and Stephenson tallied. Scott batted for Bush and singled to right, Grimm scoring. Then Adams ended it with a fly to Nixon.

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[Special.]—The Tigers made it three out of five from the Senators today when they defeated them 3 to 2 in a closely fought battle. Alvin Crowder, the recruit pitcher obtained from Birmingham of the Southern league, made an auspicious showing for the Griffs. The Tigers made three runs off him in the first inning on three hits and an error by Peck, after that he was invincible. White Sox Notes

NEW YORK, July 24.—[Special.]—One more combat here and the Sox will start homeward. Ted Blankenship is slated to do the slabbing in the final fight and may be opposed by Hyatt or Pennock.

A squad of Sox regulars and second string men will stop at Auburn, N. Y., for an exhibition game on Monday, then catch the Century for Chicago, arriving Tuesday morning. Another squad will go home direct from here.

Johnny Mostil declared this morning that hereafter when playing against these Yanks he would be away out in deep center. Johnny was wise, by so doing he captured two long drives in the first inning, one from Combs and one from Gehrig.

Bib Falk hasn't maintained his usual batting pace while here. Bib says that chasing Yanks' drives in the outfield and getting little sleep in a sweltering room at night has taken the punch out of him.

The Yankees not only have batted and fielded in great style in this series but have enjoyed most unusual luck in the breaks of the game. If this luck continues with them they'll win the pennant without a struggle. If the luck does not stick they are likely to win it anyway with their bats.

Taylor Wins Over Ryan on Foul in 4th

his finish undoubtedly was responsible for the draw decision of Referee Joe Hess. Langford scaled 156 pounds and McVey 150¾ pounds.

Spug Myers of California stopped Billy Bortfeld of Milwaukee in the fifth round of the other ten round contest. Spug nailed the Cream city battler with a right hook in the fourth round and Billy took a nine count. After he had regained his feet he was sent to the canvas again by the same blow. At the count of eight the bell rang for the end of the round.

When the gong was struck for the beginning of the fifth session Bortfeld was unable to respond and the decision went to Myers as a technical knockout. Joe Herrick was the referee. Myers weighed 138¾ pounds at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and Bortfeld 140.

Medill Stops Frager.

In an extra bout added to the card by Jim Mullen, the promoter of the show, after Ryan's fouling of Taylor, Joe Medill scored a technical knockout over Sammy Frager in the third round. Referee Ernie Zanders stopped the uneven contest when Sammy was unable to defend himself. Medill and Frager are local 128 pounders.

Paid attendance was 7,477 and gate receipts $26,685.95.

Notes of the Cubs

THE Cubs close their at home stay this afternoon with one game against the Phils and then hop a train for Boston, where they open their second eastern tour Tuesday.

Joe Bush, who has been warming up in the bull pen for about two weeks, finally got a chance. He was permitted to fling the last two innings of the second game after Osborn had been removed for a pinch hitter and he turned out a neat job.

The crowd was forced to say a few unkind things to Ump Reardon, who was transferred here after a Pittsburgh fan had bounced a bottle off his feet. Reardon called Heathcote out on a steal in the sixth inning of the first game and it looked very much as if the runner had beaten the throw. Hack Wilson and Stephenson followed with hits, so the decision was costly.

Tolson was employed as a pinch hitter in both games, but he was all out of luck. With two on base and none out in the ninth of the opener he tried to sacrifice and flied into Grimes' hands. With two on and one out in the same inning of the second game he bounced into a double play.

The Phils did a lot of high class fielding around second base, where Sand and Friberg work. Cooney also pulled some of his customary thrillers in behalf of the Cubs.

PIRATES DEFEAT ROBINS TWICE TO LEAD FLAG RACE

Champions Win First by 12-8, Second 3-2.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 24.—(AP)—Pittsburgh ousted the Reds from first place in the National league race today by wining both games of a double header from Brooklyn, 12 to 8, and 3 to 2, while the Braves defeated Cincinnati. The Reds now trail the champions by five points.

The initial fracas was a free hitting affair. In the closing battle, the Pirates' winning run came in the ninth, when Wright's single scored Waner. McWeeny was forced to retire when hit by a batted ball in the sixth inning. Score:

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 24.—(AP)—Wilbert Robinson, president and manager of the Brooklyn Robins, announced today the purchase of Outfielder Harvey Hendricks, former Cleveland and New York American leaguer, from the New Orleans club of the Southern association. Delivery will be made at the close of the season. The Dodgers paid $15,000 in cash for the outfielder and sent Pitcher Ray Moss to the Pelicans on option.

INDIANS GET OUT TOMAHAWKS FOR WESTERN FOEMEN

Speaker's New System Brings Results.

Cleveland, O., July 24.—[Special.]—Tris Speaker's tribe of Indians are homeward bound from a scalping expedition to the east. New York, Boston, Washington, and Philadelphia were brushed aside during the invasion of the Cleveland warriors, the tribe winning eleven of the seventeen games played. Resting in second place, the Indians are planning an attack on the pennant during their twenty-two game stay on the home lot.

Prior to the opening of the season talk of a possible flag for Cleveland would have been branded as foolhardy. The club had not been strengthened to any extent and was relegated to the second division by pre-season dope critics.

Fans' Tongues Wag.

What occasioned the complete rejuvenation of the Indians? How did the Cleveland baseball club officials convert an "outsider" into a hustling, pennant seeking aggregation in a few short months? These and other questions are being asked as the Indians continue their march toward top berth in the American league.

A blanket of secrecy has been thrown over the activities of the club's management. But certain incidents have tended to enlighten Cleveland fans.

The first inkling that all was not right came when President E. S. Barnard asked the county to reduce the taxes on the baseball park and grounds. He claimed the profits last year dwindled to a few thousand dollars, which should entitle the club to a tax reduction. His claim was thrown out by the county auditor, who ruled that the failure of the team to make money did not lessen the value of the buildings or grounds.

Cleveland Wants Winner.

It is well known that Cleveland fans will not support a losing team. Officials of the club held a conference. Shortly afterward reports were circulated that Pitchers George Uhle and Joe Shaute had received salary cuts, but would receive a bonus for every game they won. In addition they were to receive an extra bonus for winning twenty or more games. Club officials refused to deny or confirm the reports.

Other members of the team, it was reported, were promised salary increases if the team held its own in the circuit race and retained the interest of the fans. On the other hand, if the club fell down salaries of some of the players were to be reduced, while other members of the club, according to reports emanating from reliable sources, were to be released.

Under the terms of the new policy, inaugurated by Manager Tris Speaker, no player had a monopoly on any position. Early in the season Speaker benched himself and Charley Jamieson. Other members of the team also have drawn vacations at various intervals.

Speaker's System Works.

And the profit sharing plan has brought results. Attendance this season has been considerably above the average. Each player is giving his best, knowing he has everything to gain or everything to lose hanging in the balance.

Uhle has won fifteen games, Shaute eight, and Levsen ten. Spurgeon, Joe Sewell, Speaker, Summa, and Burns are hitting .300 or better. The cases of these players are noteworthy. Summa, a mediocre fielder and unreliable hitter, is playing brilliantly in the field and hitting timely. Burns is clouting the ball at a lively clip and is also after the record for two base hits. The first baseman has forty-three and needs only seventeen more to break the record of fifty-nine now held by Tris Speaker.

SIXTEEN YACHTS GET AWAY ON 331 MILE SAIL FOR MACKINAC ISLE WITH RAINBOW LEADING SCHOONERS, FREYA HEADING YAWLS, AND DORELLO LEADING THE SLOOPS. Five minutes separated the start of the schooners, yawls and sloops from the Van Buren street gap yesterday, but before the craft were out of sight the leads were changing so rapidly that one of the closest races in history was predicted. Before the Chicago light was reached Privateer was leading the schooners, and Intrepid jumped into the sloop lead. The yachts headed north by northeast for the 201 mile journey to Point Betsy and the Manitou passage, the first leg of the race. (Story on page 4, Sports.)

SIXTEEN YACHTS START RACE TO MACKINAC ISLE

Rainbow Leads Schooners Across Line.

With a light southeasterly breeze filling all available sail, sixteen yachts, entries in the annual Chicago Yacht club race to Mackinac island, slipped swiftly through the waters of Lake Michigan off Van Buren street gap at four o'clock yesterday afternoon and headed north by northeast for the 201 mile journey to Point Betsy and the Manitou passage, the first leg of the 331 mile sail.

The race was made in three classes, schooners, yawls and sloops, five minutes separating the start of each class.

Rainbow Leads Schooners.

Rainbow was the first of the schooners to cross the line after the starting gun, and was followed closely by Gaviota, Privateer, Alana, Elizabeth, and Wendameen. Gesine and Nakomis were five minutes late in starting. Privateer went into the lead before the Chicago light was reached.

Freya led the start of the yawls, followed by Vanadis, Jeanette, and Sunshine. Dorello led the sloops, trailed by Joyant, Intrepid, and Celeritas. All were away within a minute after the gun. Before the sloops were out of sight Intrepid had taken the lead.

Ten Race at Sturgeon Bay.

Shortly after the start of the big fellows, ten smaller yachts left for Milwaukee on the first leg of their race to Sturgeon Bay. They are expected to arrive at Milwaukee this morning. The yachts starting were: Rogue, Vandal, Mildred II., Chaperone, Siren, Yank, Tom Boy, Calypso, Nancy, and Santome.

Gray skies, threatening gusty squalls, may shorten the time of the race. Should present progress be continued, it is expected that the yachts in the Mackinac race will finish tomorrow night or Tuesday morning.

35 DRIVERS TO RACE TODAY AT ROBY TRACK

Thirty-five drivers will face the starter in the 75 mile national dirt track championship auto race at Roby speedway, 108th street and Indianapolis avenue, today.

Car No. 500, an exact duplicate of the car in which Sonny Talamont was killed last Sunday, will be driven by Dr. E. A. McIntyre of Chicago and D. D. Morris, present pilot for Cliff Woodbury.

22 Chicago Pilots Enter.

Chicago, with twenty-two pilots entered, stands a good chance of winning some of the prize money. From Indianapolis will come the "Big Four"—Dutch Baumann, Louis Schneider, Wilbur Shaw, and Ralph Ormsby, four of the best dirt track drivers in the country.

Ormsby was the outstanding performer on local tracks during the last two years. He will drive a Goldblatt Brothers Special and will be the second Indianapolis pilot to represent a Chicago firm. The other is Louis Schneider.

List of Entries.

The complete list of entries is as follows:

B. Clauss, Roy Ketcham, Walter Martins, Jean Mendeloff, Ralph Eckstrom, C. E. Curry, L. O. Delancey, Leo Krasick, Eddie Burbach, Cliff Henderson, Joe Russo, Carl Adams, W. Mohr, J. S. Smith, L. Racine charged on Dolly Gray in the eighth inning yesterday at the Logan Square park and pounded in five runs for an 8 to 6 victory over the Squares. The Squares had gained a two run advantage in the fifth on Frank Knybl's double with the sacks loaded. The Callahan clan held this margin until the eighth.

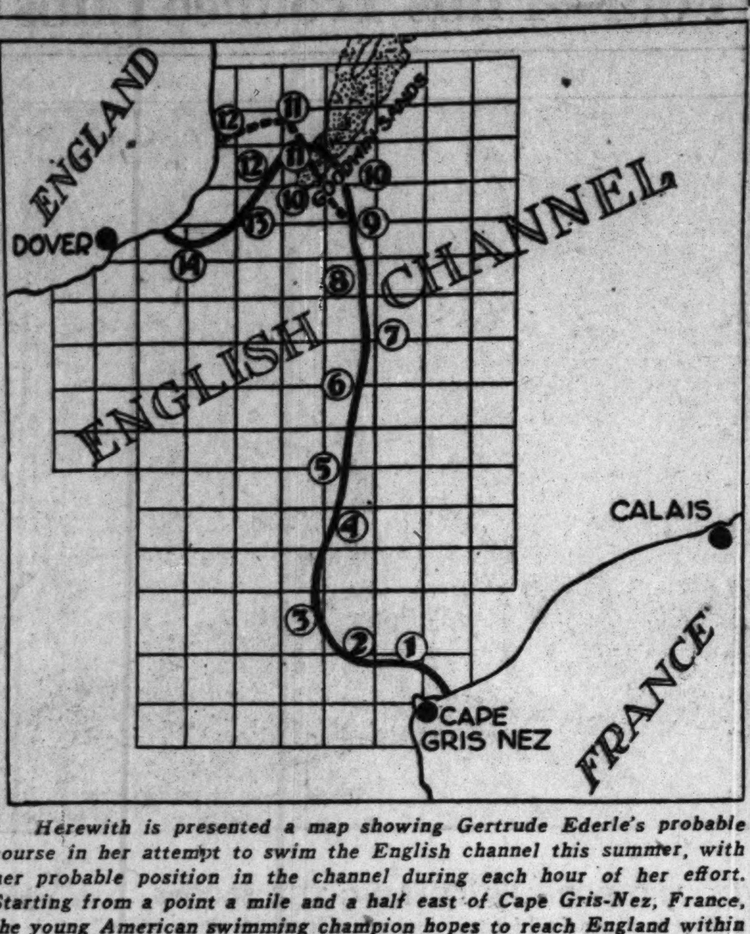
EDERLE'S CHANNEL COURSE



Herewith is presented a map showing Gertrude Ederle's probable course in her attempt to swim the English channel this summer, with her probable position in the channel during each hour of her effort. Starting from a point a mile and a half east of Cape Gris-Nez, France, the young American swimming champion hopes to reach England within from twelve to fourteen and a half hours, which would be a time record for the crossing. Miss Ederle plans to take the water four hours before high tide at Dover. After the ninth hour of her swim's theoretical course there is a fork in the route, as indicated by the continuation of the solid line and by the dotted line. This means that somewhere about the end of the ninth hour Gertrude hopes to reach a point where the tide divides into two streams to go around the famous Goodwin sands, a shoal region where scores of ships have come to grief. It is her aim to catch this latter stream of the tide, because when the tide turns at the end of her eleventh hour in the water it would leave her in slack water, probably not more than one and one-half miles from England.

EDERLE GAINS SEVEN POUNDS; SHE'S HAPPY

Ready to Attempt Channel-Swim.

BY GERTRUDE EDERLE.

[Copyright: 1926: By Trib-News Service.]

CAPE GRIS NEZ, France, July 24.—Now I'm perfectly satisfied with myself!

That sounds conceited, but I don't mean it that way. I weighed today at an English pharmacy in Boulogne, and found that I tipped 156 pounds, which was exactly what I weighed when I made my attempt to swim the English channel last year. This is a poundage which my trainer, Will Burgess, thinks is indicative of splendid condition.

And here's a funny thing; while I am joyful because of gaining seven pounds my sister Margaret, who eats at the same table with me, is happy because she has lost two pounds.

I think I am ready to take the plunge for the Dover side of the channel, and I'm so anxious to go that I can't think of anything else. I'm only waiting for a good tide, favorable wind and weather. We have had none of the latter for several days.

LONDON GIRL ON WAY

FOLKESTONE, England, July 24.—(AP)—Miss Mercedes Gleitzer, young London typist, who already has made two unsuccessful attempts to swim the English channel, started on her third attempt today. She is the first of this season's women aspirants to challenge the channel.

Miss Gleitzer entered the water about noon and was followed by a motor boat. Latest reports indicate that conditions were unfavorable and that the water was choppy. Despite this, the swimmer was going well after making about five miles.

Miss Gleitzer failed in one attempt last year and in another in 1922.

HELMY STARTS TODAY

BOULOGNE, France, July 24.—(AP)—Ishak Helmy, Egyptian swimmer, who postponed the start of his channel swim last night because of a sudden change in the weather, now plans to enter the water tomorrow morning.

England Brings 75 Polo Ponies for U. S. Invasion

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—A string of polo ponies valued at upwards of $250,000 is now en route to this country for the big polo matches in the next few months. At the United States Polo association, where the announcement was made that seventy-five mounts were coming on the Minnewaska, it was called the greatest shipment of polo ponies in sporting history. The Minnewaska sailed from England on July 17. Many of the ponies are the property of Stephen Sanford and Lewis Lacey.

Helen Wills Advises U. S. Girls to Play More Tennis

KITTY McKANE.

New York, July 24.—(AP)—Helen Wills of California and more recently color bearer of the United States in the tennis invasion of Europe, believes that the sport in which she has reigned supreme for three years in this country should have a more prominent place in the recreation of the women of America. She says she has always played the game "for fun," but that the beneficial effects are so great that no one can afford to omit tennis from a sport program.

Her story is one of encouragement to young players who hate the discipline of instruction for, like Topsy, she believes she "just growed" into a tennis player.

Serve Hard to Acquire.

"I played for fun. I practiced by playing games, not by drilling on strokes," she said. "I never bounced the ball against a barnyard door. I played against those who could show me the simple principles of position and strokes and then I worked out my own technique. I found that my serve was about the hardest thing for me and I worked quite hard trying to perfect it. But I did not do this by serving a lot of balls over the net at once. I did it in games as I went along. The result was that I never noticed any sudden mastery of a special stroke but I found my game improving gradually. From the time I was fifteen I have played at least four times a week or oftener."

Tourneys Develop Play.

Her story of her development in tennis, she believes, can become the story of any American girl who will combine "fun" with earnestness in playing the game. Her story continues:

"All young tennis players should quickly get into tournament playing, no matter how modest the tournament. My first year in the Berkeley Tennis club brought me my first tournament at the age of 15. I was defeated, but I remember the big thrill that first tournament gave me. Mrs. Marjorie Wale Kress beat me in the first round, but I was pleased with myself because I took a set."

When Helen went to college, she continued to play almost daily after she finished her classes. The fact that she did not enter into college athletics was probably responsible, she admits, for the fact that she continued to win tennis tournaments and still was able, by her junior year, to win a Phi Beta Kappa key.

Helen's Decalogue.

Before she discussed how she played in her championship matches, she gave ten points for the use of would-be champions of the court, as follows:

"First, get plenty of practice.
"Second, choose a variety of opponents.
"Third, get fun out of your playing.
"Fourth, have good equipment—this means a good racquet, well-strung, good balls, a decent court and comfortable clothes.
"Fifth, watch good players, and tournament matches, not to copy but to unconsciously absorb the rhythm of the game.
"Sixth, play with players better than yourself.
"Seventh, develop your footwork on the court.
"Eighth, don't fool on the court; concentrate on doing your best.
"Ninth, relax completely before and after games.
"Tenth, and most important, never give up."

Miss Wills continued: "I never plan ahead for matches and I never remember them afterwards. I play all my tennis on the court. While I am playing I am enjoying the fun of the game and the excitement of the match, and I am looking no further ahead than the next point.

"Neither do I make a fetich of training. I merely go to bed early during tournament weeks, eat simple food, and take care not to catch cold. That's about all."

Endurance Most Important.

Miss Wills admits, however, that there are some matches that she remembers because of thrilling play involved.

"I was beaten by Mrs. Kitty McKane Godfree, but it was close and very exciting to me. The whole day stands out, and has ever since, much more than later matches in this country in which I beat her."

HARVARD'S LONG DISTANCE ROWERS GOING STRONG

Wilmington, Del., July 24.—(AP)—Dr. Thomas K. Richards and Edward A. Wachter, Harvard university athletic officials, were headed up the Delaware river today in their 25 foot wherry on a 500 mile row from Norfolk to Boston. They passed out of the Chesapeake and Delaware canal this afternoon and set out for Philadelphia, 28 miles away. Both appeared to be in good spirits and enjoying their experience. They have rowed steadily since leaving Chesapeake City, Md., early today.

GLICK BEATS RAY MILLER

New York, July 24.—(AP)—Joe Glick, New York junior lightweight, outpointed Ray Miller of Chicago in a ten round match at the Coney Island stadium tonight. Miller weighed 130¼, Glick one pound less. Glick outgeneraled and outpunched the Chicago boxer in six of the ten rounds. Glick opened a cut over Miller's right eye in the ninth round with a straight left.

Eddie Anderson, Wyoming "cowboy," won a judges' decision over Arnold Ryan of Brooklyn in a ten round semi-final staged after the main go. Anderson weighed 130¾, Ryan 129¾.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question The Tribune fund was awarded $5.

The Question.

What would you consider a fair price for tickets to the Dempsey-Tunney bout?

Where Asked.

At Michigan avenue bridge.

The Answers.

Marie Thompson, 1211 Addison street, manager—I think $25 is plenty for a ringside seat. The fighters in a heavyweight championship match demand big purses, so the public must be willing to pay if it wants the bout. I'll be there if the match is arranged.

J. D. Hough, 1415 Tribune Tower, salesman—A top price of $15 would be fair. I believe that would please everybody, and it should leave a reasonable profit for the promoter. Chicago will will be lucky if it lands the match.

Jessilyn Wilt, 701 North Michigan avenue, saleswoman—I would be willing to pay $10 to see Dempsey fight Tunney. That seems a fair top price to me, but, of course, Mr. Rickard has the promotional end to look after, and he must set his scale so as to make sure he will come out with something to spare. He has the worry and should receive fair compensation.

A. S. Johnson, Lincoln park police officer—Five dollars would be the right price. I hope the boxing commission will fix the admission fee so that every one interested in boxing can have a chance to see the match.

Arthur Proteau, Oak Park, student—That's a hard question to answer. Fifteen dollars for ringside seems fair to me. The promoter has tremendous expenses and he isn't in the game for the fun alone. I believe, in a scale of prices that will give everybody connected with the show compensation for their efforts.

GIBSON TO MANAGE MURRAY.

San Francisco, Cal., July 24.—(AP)—Lee Murray, claimant of the lightweight championship of New Zealand, has joined the stable of fighters managed by Billy Gibson and which includes Gene Tunney, heavyweight contender. The New Zealander arrived here two weeks ago and is expected to go east shortly.

Are Automobiles Over Advertised?

People have told us that after reading glowing advertisements of new automobiles that claim to revolutionize industry, they were greatly disappointed after seeing and riding in the car.

We have been criticized also.

Auburn owners tell us that we under-state the many wonderful things about the new Auburn cars.

But that, frankly, is a part of the Auburn policy.

Perhaps you have noticed in every Auburn automobile advertisement we have a unique way of proving all our claims.

We simply say — See the new Auburn, test it, compare it with any other car, drive it and if the Auburn does not sell itself, you will not be asked to buy.

Our aim at the Auburn factory is to build the very best automobile in every way possible. We let experienced motorists decide for themselves. This policy has increased our sales at the factory over 200%.

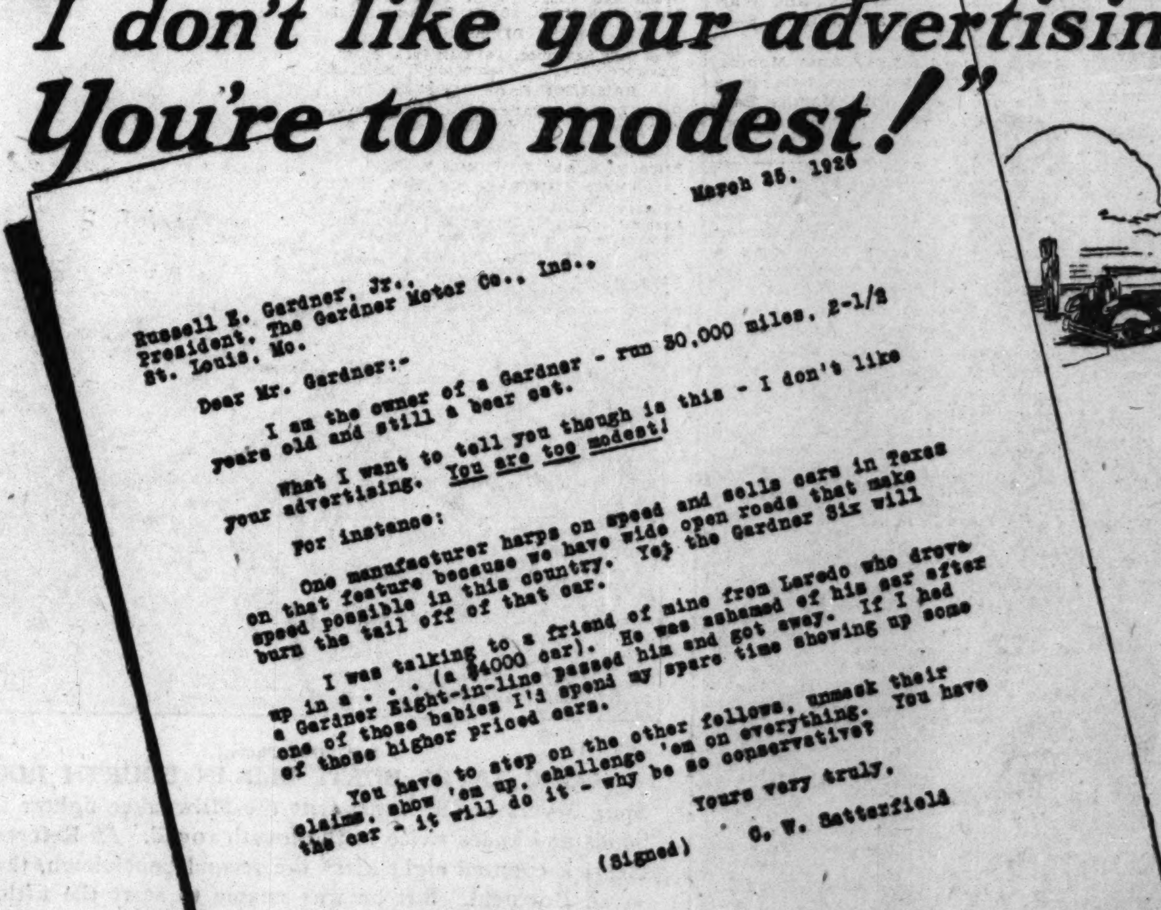
"I don't like your advertising You're too modest!"



March 25, 1926

Russell E. Gardner, Jr.,
President, The Gardner Motor Co., Inc.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Mr. Gardner:-

I am the owner of a Gardner - run 30,000 miles, 2-1/2 years old and still a bear cat.

What I want to tell you though is this - I don't like your advertising. You are too modest!

For instance:

One manufacturer harps on speed and sells cars in Texas on that feature because we have wide open roads that make speed possible in this country. Yet the Gardner Six will burn the tail off of that car.

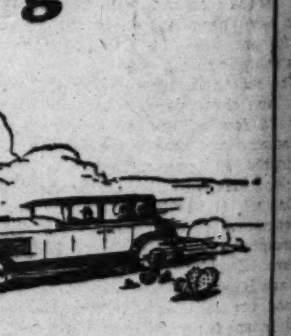
I was talking to a friend of mine from Laredo who drove up in a . . . (a $4000 car). He was ashamed of his car after a Gardner Eight-in-line passed him and got away. If I had one of those babies I'd spend my spare time showing up some of those higher priced cars.

You have to step on the other fellows, unmask their claims, show 'em up, challenge 'em on everything. You have the car - it will do it - why be so conservative?

Yours very truly,

(Signed) C. W. Satterfield

366 Hicks Avenue
San Antonio, Texas.



As a Gardner owner, Mr. Satterfield, you can tell the world things we can't. That's why we simply ask car owners to check Gardner performance against that of the finest American and European cars—on their own favorite grounds. To check the speed—better than 70 miles an hour—the unobstructed vision—the flash get-away—the trigger-quick pick-up—the instant stop. When a man does that he knows why Gardner keeps rising higher and higher in public esteem.

GARDNER HAS BEEN BUILDING WELL FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

ICKARD SAYS HE SOON WILL SAY SOMETHING

Promises Definite Announcement Tomorrow.

Tex Rickard once more has postponed his "definite announcement" on the heavyweight bout between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney, once "definitely" scheduled for Chicago, Sept. [illegible]. Last night Tex was as doubtful as he has been since the staging of the match became uncertain several days ago. However, he again promised a "definite announcement"—tomorrow.

Since R. C. Clements, president of the Coliseum club of Chicago, delivered the knockout to Rickard's plans to bring the heavyweight championship match to Chicago by showing a contract signed by Dempsey, Rickard has been employing other tactics to clinch the match.

Jack Kearns Enters.

Jack Kearns, former manager of the champion, has been drawn into the controversy. Kearns still is friendly with Rickard and in the last two days the pair have held several conferences. If Dempsey will permit Kearns to be brought into the proceedings the controversy between Rickard and Clements can be settled almost immediately, Kearns says.

Kearns' contract with Dempsey does not expire until Aug. 3. He previously had signed with Rickard for Dempsey to meet both Gene Tunney and Harry Wills. Jack claims his contracts with Rickard take priority over those of Clements and Fitzsimmons.

Rickard had nothing to add to the complicated situation yesterday. He said he was unable to hold a conference with Chicago business men because of their absence from the city. This conference will be held tomorrow morning, Tex said.

Clements Plans Wills Bout.

Meanwhile, Clements, who apparently is holding the upper hand, is going ahead with his plans to promote a Dempsey-Wills match on Soldiers' field in September. Paddy Mullins, manager of Wills, will arrive in Chicago today, while the colored challenger will be here tomorrow. Clements has notified Dempsey to be in Chicago by Aug. 6.

The president of the Coliseum club also announced that he will be prepared to turn over to Dempsey $300,000 on Aug. 5 and that the remaining $100,000 will be paid on or before the day of the fight.

13 Letter Men on Illinois U. Grid Club

Urbana, Ill., July 24.—[Special.]—The nucleus of the University of Illinois football squad will be 55 players who have been asked to report Sept. for practice. A list of these men was compiled this week.

The roster includes thirteen players who won their varsity letters last season. A few of the prospective candidates who are listed are scholastically ineligible at present, but they are working hard to clean off their slate. One of the most encouraging developments is the eligibility of the sophomore backs, Lanum, Timm, and Peters. Zuppke used these three players and Russell Daugherity all through spring practice as the first backfield, and most fans believe that he will give this combination a good trial.

University instruction will begin Sept. 22, so the Illini squad will have [illegible] days of uninterrupted practice, with the exception of the time necessary for registration.

The list of men who will comprise the squad at the start follows:

iness Forces Kinsey to Quit Tennis This Year

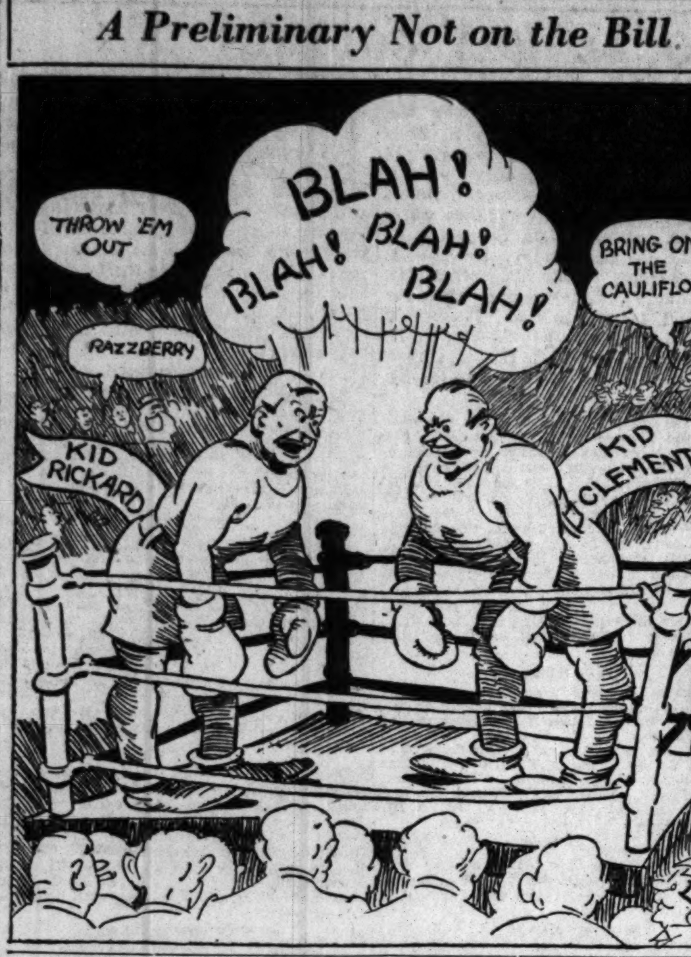
York, July 24.—(AP)—Howard Kinsey of San Francisco, sixth ranking tennis player in the country and a candidate for the American Davis cup team, has elected to abandon tennis competition for the balance of the season owing to the demands of business.

Kinsey made known this decision on his arrival from abroad where, in company with Vincent Richards, he made an extended tour of European countries.

WINS IOWA NET CROWN.

Des Moines, Ia., July 24.—(AP)—Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines, retained his state tennis title today when he defeated Gordon Diesing of Omaha, 6—0, 6—1, 6—1, in the men's final of the state tennis tournament here.

A Preliminary Not on the Bill



Tilden Wins Tennis Title at Brookline

Brookline, Mass., July 24.—(AP)—William T. Tilden II., of Philadelphia, national tennis champion, won his second leg on the eighth Longwood bowl today by defeating Lewis N. White of Austin, Tex., 6—3, 6—4, 6—3, on the grass courts of the Longwood Cricket club.

The match was the climax of the 34th Longwood bowl singles tournament. The courts were damp after a heavy morning rain and White slipped repeatedly and had difficulty in keeping his feet. Tilden solved the problem by removing his shoes and donning a pair of extra heavy socks.

Bill Loses in Doubles.

The national champion had little difficulty in disposing of his opponent, the match lasting an even fifty minutes. Tilden appeared to be at top form, and his volleys kept White running to all corners of the court.

Tilden went down to defeat with his partner, A. L. Wiener, in the doubles when White and Louis Thalheimer, both of Texas, took straight sets 7—5, 6—0, 6—2.

John Doeg, Santa Monica, won the Massachusetts junior singles title by defeating Berkeley Bell, Austin, Tex., in the finals, 6—4, 3—6, 6—1, 3—6, 9—7.

Miss Ryan Wins.

Malcolm Thill and Henry Johnson, Jr., Waban, won the state junior doubles championship by defeating Berkeley Bell, Austin, Tex., and Warren F. Coen Jr., Kansas City, 6—4, 6—2, 6—8, 6—2.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan, Santa Monica, Calif., won the women's title in a through set match with Martha Bayard, Short Hills, N. J. The scores were 6—0, 3—6, 6—3.

RICHARDS OFF FORM

New York, July 24.—(AP)—Vincent Richards was welcomed home from a European tour of few notable triumphs with unexpectedly vigorous opposition by Sekio Tawara, Japan Davis cup player, in the first round of the Metropolitan championship today.

America's No. 3 ranking veteran gave only brief flashes of the form he displayed against William T. Tilden early in the season and was compelled to bring off a sensational rally to score in straight sets at 6—3, 7—5.

SHENECOSSETT GOLF TOURNEY TO OPEN TOMORROW

New London, Conn., July 24.—[Special.]—Decks are being cleared here for the opening of what is predicted will be the largest and most important gathering of women golfers ever held in this country, the eighth annual women's invitation tournament for the Shenecossett trophy, which will be played July 26 to 30 on the links of the Shenecossett Country club.

More than 300 entries have already been recorded and more are expected in the next few days.

Miss Glenna Collett, present United States champion and holder of the Shenecossett trophy, was at the Griswold last Friday and Saturday and engaged in a little preliminary practice on the course. Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, former American, British, and Canadian champion, is also here, and is playing consistent golf.

RHODES MAKES GOOD PITCHING FOR DES MOINES

Lincoln, Neb., July 24.—[Special.]—John (Choppy) Rhoades, former University of Nebraska all-around athlete, is taking a fling at Western league baseball. The ex-Husker signed with Des Moines, league-leaders, recently and received his first trial against Omaha on Wednesday, hurling great ball against Omaha after relieving Stokes in the third inning and not allowing the Burch Rods an earned run in the remaining frames.

Choppy is a southpaw. He started in football, baseball and track at Nebraska and will return there at the close of the season to act as assistant football coach.

BOSSES OF PIRATES WON'T PLAY HOME GAMES ON SUNDAY

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 24.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Nationals will make no effort to play Sunday games at home until such contests are legalized or until an overwhelming sentiment favors them, Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss said today in commenting on a movement to inaugurate major league baseball on Sunday at Philadelphia.

Johnson Orders Curb on Cobb's Dilatory Tactics

Washington, D. C., July 24.—(AP)—Orders have been issued to American league Umpires McGowan and Connolly, now in Washington, to call a check on Ty Cobb, fiery manager of the Detroit Tigers, when he indulges in tactics which delay games. The instructions, from Ban Johnson, president of the league, followed a protest telegram from Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, over Cobb's activities of yesterday, which featured the two hours and forty minutes it took to play a nine inning game.

The umpires did not disclose the exact nature of their orders, but a telegram from Johnson to Griffith assured the club president that the arbiters had been directed to see that Cobb's outbursts were restricted.

The fighting spirit of the Tigers was in evidence again today, but Cobb's part largely was that of peacemaker. He ended a wordy battle between Pitcher Earl Whitehill and McGowan over ball and strike decisions, and later again ran to the plate from the dugout to separate Outfielder Fothergill and McGowan.

JOHNNY DUNDEE TO CLAIM WORLD FEATHER CROWN

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—The world's featherweight championship, recently vacated by Louis (Kid) Kaplan on the plea that he could not make the weight, has been claimed by Johnny Dundee, veteran of fifteen years, who also once held the title and relinquished it in 1924 for the same reason.

He will appear today before the state athletic commission accompanied by his new manager, Joe Jacobs, with the request that he again be recognized as the title holder. Dundee always insisted his withdrawal was without his approval, at the insistence of his former manager, Jimmy Johnston. Dundee and Johnston soon split after this incident.

A. SCHUTTINGER, FORMER JOCKEY, TURNS TRAINER

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—Andy Schuttinger now is a full fledged trainer with ten horses in his care. When he turned in his jockey license following a bad fall at the Empire City track at the opening day of the current meeting he made application for a trainer's license and began looking around for some horses to train.

It did not take him long to find them. "Fatty" Anderson, owner of Carlaris, alway has liked Schuttinger and so he is shipping ten horses to Saratoga Springs, where the former jockey will make his bow, without the colors up.

Schuttinger has suffered a number of falls when riding and finally decided that enough was enough. He is one of many jockeys who have turned to training.

Garden Matchmaker Wants Featherweight Tournament

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—With two of the outstanding fighters in the class, Benny Bass of Philadelphia and Johnny Farr, signed up to meet in the feature bout in Madison Square Garden next Thursday night, Matchmaker Jess McMahon is now planning to go before the state athletic commission to obtain sanction for a featherweight championship tournament to bring forth an undisputed title holder to fill the place vacated by Louis (Kid) Kaplan.

Borg, Skelton Smash World Swim Marks

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—Two world's swim records were sunk without trace at Coney Island this afternoon when four stars of the Illinois A. C. gave exhibitions against time under official A. A. U. supervision. Arne Borg, formerly of Sweden, but now sporting the colors of the Chicago club, lowered his own record of 400 yards free style by covering the distance in 4:31. His old mark was 4:34¾.

Robert Skelton also lowered a record that he himself had set when he lopped six and one-quarter seconds off the 400 yard breast stroke mark. Skelton covered the distance in 5:48 4-5. The old mark was 5:55.

Only Johnny Weissmuller and Ethel Lackie failed to set new records. Weissmuller failed by one-fifth of a second of equalling his own mark for the 100 free style swim. It was remarked that Weissmuller has so often shaved this record that it is approaching the irreducible minimum. Miss Lackie made an attempt on the 100 yard free style record for women. This record is 1:00 9-10. The Illinois A. C. star swam the distance in one minue four and one-fifth seconds.

Borg and Skelton were applauded warmly when it was announced that they not only had lowered their own records, but had done so by phenomenal margins. Both men took the water in perfect form and it was apparent to those who held watches on both the races that exceptionally fast time was being made. Even without the use of a stop watch an appreciable difference could be noticed on each turn, so far were the men ahead of the times now on the record books.

The races also were regarded as preparation for the national championships, which will be held in conjunction with the sesquicentennial exposition at Philadelphia at the end of this month.

COLLEGE ALUMNI ATHLETIC BODY FIGHTS PRO EVIL

Hill, Knox track star of 1924, is to promote athletic competition by offering trophies and for scholastic and athletic proficiency where a sufficient percentage of alumni are members.

The society is to provide a fund for college athletes not financially independent. Stars of five national meets are to receive honorary membership. A lapel emblem will denote membership. The society is sworn to protect college sports from commercialism and professional menace.

EASTERN GOLFER, 18, NEW MENACE TO PROFESSIONAL

Youngster Stars to Delaware Water Gap.

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—Hardly two weeks have elapsed since Bobby Jones, like Alexander, sighed for some new world to conquer when up jumped a young Flatbush boy to dry the Jonesian tears and offer him something worth while.

Maurice J. McCarthy Jr., 19, came home to Amherst place, Brooklyn, the other day from Delaware Water Gap with the scalps of a score of the nation's leading golf professionals at his belt and a record of having placed fourth is the Eastern open championship.

Only Walter Hagen, breaking a world record for two rounds, Johnny Farrell, and Wild Bill Mehlhorn topped the modest youngster who in a month jumped into the position of being the most formidable prospect for the future national crown that has been developed since Bobby Jones.

Emmet French, holder of the world's record for four games; Cyril Walker, former open champion; Willie Klein, golfer extraordinary; Joe Turnesa, who ran second to Bobby Jones in the recent open, and a host of others of note trailed this schoolboy from Brooklyn in his last event.

He had made his debut in big society the week before at Joseph J. Lannin's layout at Salisbury, L. I. There he had topped a lot of good ones, leading all amateurs in the event until he was merely an amateur island entirely surrounded by professionals. In these two events, playing under the highest strain known to the game, the boy made these scores:

Salisbury	77	75	73	74—299
Delaware Water Gap	73	73	71	78—295

They welcomed him at the McCarthy home at the old Flatbush club. There was Maurice McCarthy, his mother, Helen, 17, a regular homemaker who can swing a wicked club; Chubby, 4½, who already is hitting 'em out in sturdy fashion; Johanna, 14; Janet, 11—and one might include Papa Maurice J., who is a professional of note.

PLAY was well divided over the four courses. On No. 1 course, C. C. Davis, 88—15—73, won the low net eighteen hole medal play. J. H. Walden, 90—16—74, was second. The qualifying round of the Army and Navy trophy play occupied course No. 2. H. T. White, 90—19—71, was the lowest of the sixteen to qualify and got the special prize. The southpaw tournament was held over the third course. Low net for the sixteen qualifying scores was that of E. Wynheim, who had an 83—10—73. Low gross went to R. C. Wilson for his 80. The prize for the least number of putts went to J. M. Davis, with 30. Second low net prize went to R. C. Ackley, 83—8—75, and second low gross went to L. M. Walter, who shot a 93. No. 4 course had busy day. Match play against par, with full handicap counting, was won by R. J. Watt, 1 down. H. T. Rainey took the award for the least number of putts, with 30 on the eighteen holtes. Some of the final matches of the June class tournament were also decided on course No. 4. L. R. Taylor defeated A. FANS BOO AS BOU CHAIB WINS EMPIRE FEATURE

Singlefoot's Jockey Says He Was Fouled.

New York, July 24.—[Special.]—Singlefoot, crack Maryland bred colt flying the colors of J. E. Griffith, bowed in unexpected defeat to C. R. Fleischmann's imported French horse, Bou Chaib, in the eighteenth running of the Yonkers handicap at the Empire City track today.

Fans Stampede to Stand.

A crowd of 16,000 saw the French invader finish a half a length ahead of Singlefoot, but the victory was not a clean cut one. On the home turn Catrone, on Bou Chaib, bumped the on-rushing Singlefoot and carried the Griffith colt far out. It looked like a certain foul and the lawn men surged around the judges' stand, sending up an anthem of boos as Catrone, on Bou Chaib, came back.

Clarence Turner, who guided the destinies of Singlefoot couldn't weigh in quick enough so that he could get up in the stand and plead his case. He argued his side o fthe affair earnestly and at length, but Bou Chaib was not disqualified.

Official Adds to Confusion.

The backers of Singlefoot were plunged from hope into the bluest of blues when the man on the result board, through some mistake, started removing Bou Chaib's number from the winner's niche, only to put it back in place, and put up the red board, making the result official.

The victory of Bou Chaib was worth $5,010 to his owner.

Child's Play was outrun to stretch but, closing with a great rush in the final eighth, outgamed the tiring Bulletin. Latter tired from his early efforts at setting the pace. Magic Wand and Russell Gardner were always outpaced.

Arabian, suddenly and vastly improved, raced under steady restraint early, then, saving ground, luckily slipped through on inside in the stretch and just got up in the final stride. Ocean Current raced prominently, took the lead in the stretch, but could not stall off the winner. Hopeless raced well and finished close up under the furious drive. Prince Hamlet also raced close up and forced the pace, but tired slightly near the end. Fabian had no mishaps and was outrun. Orpheus showed early speed and tired.

Went to post at 4:45. At post 1 minute. Winner Mrs. W. J. Howard's br. c., 4, by Wrack-Star Lady. Trained by W. J. Howard. Chink began well and, enjoying a clear passage throughout, drew into a good lead, but had to be shaken up a few yards out to hold Hourmore safe. The latter showed good speed but lost ground in racing trifle wide, then finished going gamely. Massillon, keen factor the entire trip, only gave way right at the end. Washington Park Racing Notes

W. J. SALMON'S Display and W. T. Anderson's Carlaris will arrive from the Coney Island track in Cincinnati Monday morning, Track Superintendent Billy Myers was advised yesterday. They are to start in the American Derby Saturday. While efforts were being made to get Samuel D. Riddle to ship Crusader here, the last word from the eastern sportsman was that the son of Man o' War will be returned to the Empire track in New York to fill a stake engagement Saturday.

Trainer B. B. Williams will arrive today with 20 horses belonging to the Bloomfield stable. The Bloomfield string is owned by a group of Detroit millionaires. Jockey D. Dubois will be here to do the riding for the stable.

Dr. E. Watson arrived yesterday from the Raceland track in Kentucky with 11 horses including Time Exposure, Chop Sticks, Firth of Tay, Good Times, Holly Boy and others. Jockey Sylvia is the stable rider and was granted a license yesterday.

Goldie Johnson all but stole victory in the Emmerson claiming handicap, which was fourth on yesterday's card, by making his mount, Arabian, hug the rail from the turn to the finish line. He easily outrode L. Simon on Ocean Current, as the latter horse was probably best.

FLOWERS, DOWN FOR SIX COUNT, BEATS HUFFMAN

Los Angeles, Cal., July 24.—[Special.]—Tiger Flowers, world's middleweight boxing champion, defeated Eddie Huffman, Los Angeles light heavyweight, in a ten round fight before 12,000 spectators this afternoon at Ascot Park.

The Negro got off to a poor start, being floored in the third round by a right hand wallop. Coming back in the latter rounds the title holder gave Huffman a boxing lesson, beating him about the face and body and skillfully evading the rushes of the local battler.

Huffman's big moment came in the third round when he dropped the middleweight champion with a terrific right to the jaw. Flowers had started a right to the body and it landed on the former sailor's midsection. While leading to Eddie's tummy, Tiger forgot to cover his jaw and Huffman uncorked a right hand that sent the champion to the canvass.

Referee Abe Roth counted six over Flowers and then the title holder arose, went into a clinch and by some skillful covering up managed to weather the round.

Miss Cansfield won over Mrs. L. E. Bailey, also of the South Side Tennis club, 6—2, 6—3. Mrs. Bailey's forehand drive, her long suit, was not as effective against the Detroiter as it was in her victory over Mrs. Ruth Riese, Michigan state singles champion.

SCANTLEBURY NAMED COACH AT FINDLAY, O.

Iowa City, July 24.—[Special.]—Wilbur E. Scantlebury, Iowa football and baseball star a few years ago, has accepted a position as athletic coach at Findlay, O., high school.

Scantlebury was a letter man in baseball in 1923, 1924, and 1925, captaining the nine in his final year. He won football letters in 1923 and 1924, in the latter year playing as a regular at full back. His sensational plunging was a main factor in several Old Gold victories that year.

Champion Three Year Olds in Ohio $10,000 Derby

Cleveland, O., July 24.—(AP)—Some of the best three year olds in training are entered in the Ohio Derby, $10,000 added, at Maple Heights July 28. Two handicaps also are on the getaway card. Those named to start in the Derby, over a mile and a quarter, include Boot to Boot, Carlaris, Display, Cartoon, and Brazen. More than sixty were nominated. At the conclusion of the Maple Heights meeting, many of the stables will move to the Thistledown track here, where a fifteen day meeting opens July 29.

BREWERS' BOSS BUYS PLAYERS LOW, SELLS HIGH

Milwaukee, Wis., July 24.—(AP)—The luck of Otto Borchert, president of the Milwaukee American association club, in developing young ball players and selling them to the major leagues at a fancy price, again is illustrated in the trade yesterday with the St. Louis Browns involving Fred Shult, and a consideration in cash and players reported around six figures. Borchert has sold the majors more stars who have made good than perhaps any other minor league magnate.

As a sample of the net profit to the Milwaukee club in these deals, Borchert obtained Shult in 1924 from Waterloo of the Mississippi Valley league for $1,700.

Hoppe Beats Solomon in Handicap Match

COOLIDGE'S DRY PLEDGE IS CITED BY M. E. BISHOP

Anti-Saloon Man Assails Brennan at Des Plaines

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

A heavy thunderstorm at the Desplaines camp ground last evening did not prevent Bishop Charles E. Locke of St. Paul from preaching on the subject, "Doing the Impossible."

Bishop Locke was formerly bishop of the Manila area, Philippine Islands, and was well acquainted with Gen. Wood. He preached the funeral sermon of President William McKinley. While resident in Manila Bishop Locke visited China and became acquainted with Gen. Feng, the Christian general. He will preach the sermon at the camp meeting this afternoon at 8 o'clock.

"Doing the impossible is the glory of life," said Bishop Locke. "Doing the impossible is necessary to regenerate society. Christ came to cast out devils and the liquor traffic is one of them. I heard President Coolidge say he would use his best endeavor to enforce prohibition. That is a good example of doing what some people think is impossible."

Brennan Candidacy Attacked.

The Rev. Henry E. Rompel of Springfield, an Anti-Saloon league official, assailed the candidacy of George Brennan on a wet ticket in a serman at the camp yesterday.

"Why doesn't Brennan tell the truth and play fair?" demanded Mr. Rompel. "Why doesn't he admit he is really against the constitution of the United States? No wonder he has every bolshevik and radical with him."

"The wets say prohibition was put over when the soldier boys were fighting in France," he said. "There were only 300,000 men in France when the vote was taken and if every one of them had been in this country and voted wet, it would not have changed the result.

"The most common argument is the law cannot be enforced. Some of the reasons why the law is not enforced are, the cowardice and unfitness of public officials, or their crookedness in accepting bribes, or their domination by political factions which favor law evasion."

Bull Run Is Recalled.

The editorial in THE TRIBUNE Saturday calling attention to the 65th anniversary of the battle of Bull Run in 1861 brought out interesting reminiscences of what happened on Des Plaines campground when the news arrived of the battle at the time it was fought. W. S. Verity, 94 years old, is the only one on the campground now who was present on the eventful day. The Rev. James O'May, pastor of Sheridan road church, in his afternoon sermon yesterday on the text, "More than Conquerors," told the story.

"The religious service then being held at the camp was broken up for a patriotic rally," said Mr. O'May. "Dr. O. H. Tiffany, pastor of the then influential Wabash Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, 14th street and Wabash avenue, mounted the platform and delivered a fervid appeal for the support of the government. Many enlisted from the camp ground as a result."

ROCKFORD CATHOLICS HAPPY AT RECOVERY OF BISHOP MULDOON

Rockford, Ill., July 24.—[Special.]—Thankfulness of the Catholics of Rockford diocese for the recovery of their spiritual leader, Bishop P. J. Muldoon, from an illness which threatened his life, will be expressed in prayers and holy communion tomorrow in all the churches of the diocese.

Telegrams of greeting also will go to the bishop from every parish. This feature is to be a surprise to the prelate, who is in St. John's hospital, St. Louis, where on June 3 be underwent an operation.

Sunday is the silver anniversary of Bishop Muldoon's appointment as bishop. He was then pastor of St. Charles Borromeo's church, Chicago, and a prominent figure of the archdiocese, where he had served as chancellor and as secretary to the late Archbishop Feehan. He was appointed bishop of Rockford when the diocese was formed eighteen years ago.

The bishop's silver jubilee was to have been celebrated with three days of religious services and a civic demonstration. This was postponed because of his illness and probably will be held next October, when the program originally planned will be carried out.

SEEK 600 AUTOS TO TAKE ORPHANS TO PARK PICNIC

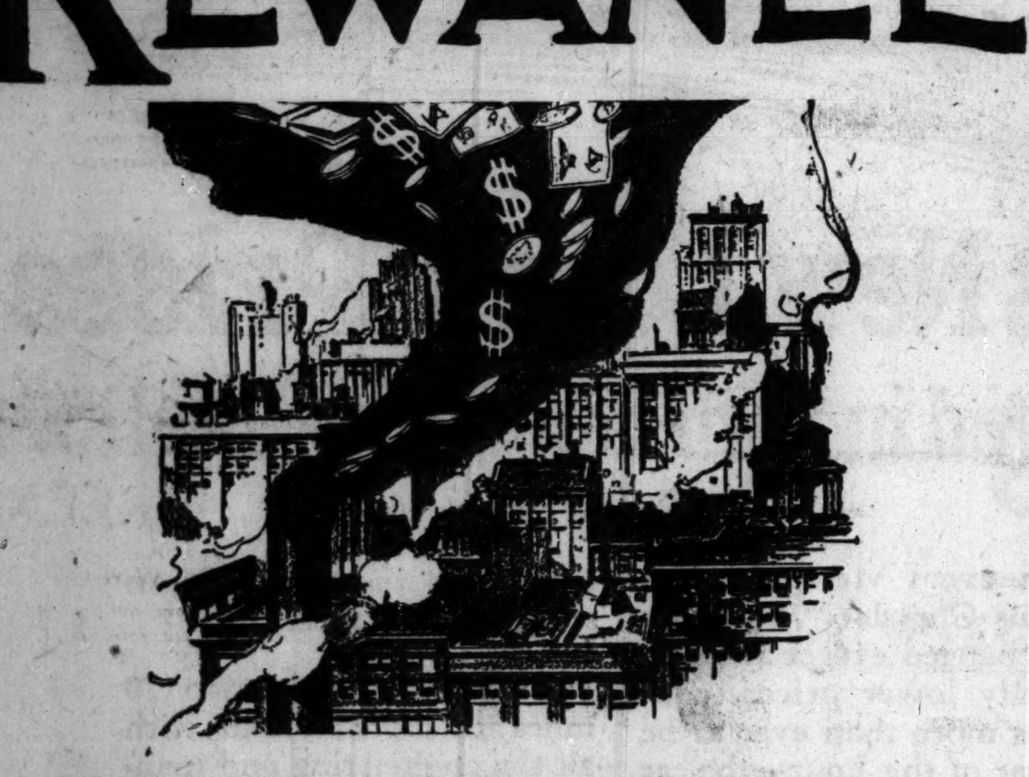
Every make and every capacity of automobile is being sought by the Orphans' Auto Outing association for the twenty-second annual picnic of the organization on Aug. 18. The organization is anxious to mobilize the needed 600 machines to convey the orphans and old people who will be their guests to the picnic grounds in Lincoln park.

To eliminate the confusion resulting from last minute offerings of cars, owners are asked to communicate with Robert K. Sloan, 326 West Madison street, telephone State 4852, chairman of transportation, before the end of July. Charles E. Gregory, 2257 South Michigan avenue, president of the association, is receiving the contributions needed to furnish refreshments for the day.

McCarl Orders Inquiry on Big Fees Paid Dry Agent

Washington, D. C., July 24.—[United Press.]—A general investigation into fees and salaries paid Bruce Bielaski, under-cover agent for the prohibition unit, who testified in the Dwyer conspiracy case at New York that he received the high pay of $1,100 monthly from the government, was ordered today by Comptroller General McCarl. The investigation started after McCarl received a telegram from Representative Sellers of New York saying that Bielaski was also receiving money as a bankruptcy expert for the government.

KEWANEE



Save Coal and Increase Your Profits

The use of the Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler will save you from 25 to 30 per cent of your coal cost. This statement will likely surprise you so much that you'll begin to investigate. And that's the purpose of this advertisement.

Big users of coal can't afford to overlook it because it represents the difference between useless waste and desirable economy.

This saving is absolute—in no sense theoretical. The Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler, with its down-draft device (built in at the factory) thoroughly consumes every fraction of coal and its gases. Other boilers which are not smokeless, only partially consume the gases, so that from a quarter to a third of their valuable fuel goes up the chimney in smoke. For smoke is nothing but unconsumed fuel.

Moreover—and be sure to read this—the Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler will burn any grade of coal, even the meanest, cheapest grades. Just think what this means to men who spend many thousands a year in fuel and who are now obliged to buy the expensive smokeless coal because their boilers can't burn any other kind.

A demonstration of this boiler's action can be had by calling up our local representatives. They'll take you to fine buildings which are now practicing what we preach, and which are adding to their profits because of the savings we have shown them.

GUM-DIPPED BALLOON PRICES

20% less than year ago!

Never before in our history as tire dealers have we been able to offer our customers such wonderful tire "buys" as right now. Due to the great volume of tire business coming direct from car owners throughout the country—the great Firestone factories have been, and are now, working at top speed building Gum-Dipped Tires in tremendous quantities. Manufacturing costs have been lowered—crude rubber prices have been reduced—and the savings passed on to car owners.

Firestone Gum-Dipped Balloon Tires are now 20 percent less than they were a year ago this time.

Take advantage of this exceptional opportunity to equip your car—right at the height of the summer season—with these long-mileage Gum-Dipped Tires at our new low prices. Buy your tires from us and you'll be sure of complete satisfaction—with the comfort, safety and long mileage that only Gum-Dipping can give.

Come in today. Don't take chances with your old tires.

Motor Mills Open Throttles Ahead of Usual Season

Ford Reported Quiet, but Others Add Many Workmen.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, July 24.—[Special.]—The end of the mid-summer inventory period is marked by practically full time activities in the automotive plants throughout Michigan. This especially is true in the great plants of Detroit where operations eased up considerably during the last half of June and the first two weeks of July. But for this decrease in production there was a reason—inventories and readjustment of production facilities for many new models, several of which have already been announced, with many more to follow.

All the major units of the industry are heading into the second half of 1926 with a greater amount of optimism than ever before reflected in mid summer. Every plant, with but two or three exceptions, has started on schedules that mean capacity output for many of them, and near capacity for others.

Probably the only large producer that is not sharing in the general increase is the Ford Motor company. From an unofficial source it is announced that the recent decreased output at the great Highland Park and River Rouge plants has been checked, and an increase is now noticed. But, whatever the increase is, the plants are working at nowhere near capacity. What caused the slump is an unanswered question, but that something is liable to happen at any time is the talk in automobile circles. Ford dealers have been ordered to clear their floors of both new and used car stock as rapidly as possible. This, according to similar conditions in past years, means but one thing—something new. However, the Ford official family "Knows its stuff" and every member of it is blind, deaf, and dumb when questioned as to what is liable to occur.

For the next few months manufacturers and dealers will be "feeling the pulse of the public" in an endeavor to ascertain what's wanted in the way of a car for 1927. In years not far behind the producer built a car, and the prospective purchaser took it or left it. But competition and an educated public has changed all this, and made the late summer months periods of anxiety to manufacturers. Another anxious month is January, the month of national automobile shows when the big drives for the year's business is made.

Although improvement will be general in the new models, there will be nothing of a radical nature, and prices will be changed but little, if any, before the final quarter of the year. Two companies will increase prices of their various models, but added equipment will fully compensate the purchaser.

The dream of manufacturers is an automobile that can be produced with but few inexpensive changes from present models that will attract the public eye. But the public's idea of what its next year's car should be is as changeable as the weather—just cause for perpetual worry on the part of manufacturers.

An outstanding feature in the automobile industry is a decided change in continuity. In past years the demand for cars has been unseasonal, and production has closely followed that demand to the extent that many plants closed down the midsummer and midwinter "quiet" season. This worked to a disadvantage and resulted in increased cost of cars. Now a more productive year is being obtained by carefully regulating factory output, and by stimulating public interest during the so-called "slow" period, by the introduction of new models.

A striking example of the new order is to be seen at the present time, and in the midst of a fairly active season, manufacturers are introducing their 1927 models, which are being shown earlier this year than ever before.

East Dixie Route Ready for Flood of Southern Tourists

THE Lexington Automobile club furnishes the following report. The East Dixie highway, between Berea and Mount Vegnon, which has been operating on an hourly schedule of opening and closing, has been opened and the work has been completed.

The Kentucky highway department has marked the route of the East Dixie highway—Covington, Independence, Falmouth, Cynthiana, Paris, Lexington, Richmond, Berea, Corbin, Barbourville, Pineville, Middlesboro through Cumberland Gap with the new U. S. No. 25 government shield sign, and southbound tourists may now pick up the sign at the Covington end of the Cincinnati-Covington bridge and follow it over this route.

Feature Roads of Michigan Offer Dustless Trips

DUSTLESS motor car travel on the two great trunk lines of Michigan, the West Michigan pike and the Mackinac trail, has become a fact.

The Michigan state highway department yesterday announced that all gravel and roads of other than hard surface construction on the two main trunk highways of Michigan, M-11 and M-13, have been treated either with chloride or tar, making these two touring avenues entirely dustless.

Hugh J. Gray of the Michigan Tourist and Resort association, returned from a trip over these two roads and reports that the gravel sections of the Mackinac trail, which is concrete, macadam and gravel, have been treated and are hard and entirely dustless. The routes are in finer condition than ever in the history of the state of Michigan and with the exception of one detour similarly treated on the Mackinac trail, there are no other detours on either of the two main trunk highways. The West Michigan pike is the great avenue of travel for "around-Lake-Michigan" trips which have become the vogue this year with motorists.

Loose on Trigger.

Mexico City newspapers complain that the city's traffic police are too loose on the trigger. They urge the police to quit shooting at violators of traffic laws.

The objection is that the public is doubly imperiled. The pedestrian is not only apt to be run down by automobiles, but he also hazards being killed by a police bullet intended for a motorist.

The newspapers say several persons have been killed in recent weeks by shots directed by police at traffic law violators.

Move Faster.

John N. Mackall, chairman of Maryland state roads commission, advises substitution of the maximum speed limit with a minimum speed limit to speed up traffic. He also suggests that slow moving vehicles be barred from main traveled roads during peak hours.

Big Increase.

Rail shipments of motor vehicles handled 70.5 per cent of the automobile business in 1925; 2½ per cent of the automobiles and truck were shipped by boat, while 27 per cent were driven to destination under their own power.

Tourist Logs New Beauties in Trip to Grant's Home

Ancient Illinois Town a Feature of State Highway.

BY ALLEN BROPHY.

ACCESS to one of the most attractive beauty spots in Illinois and to a too unfrequented patriotic shrine as well is made easy for Chicago motorists by the recent completion of the paving on the Grant highway, route 5, to Galena, a town that flourished when Chicago was a trading post.

Over the last 30 miles of the concrete trail the route takes the prairie jaded view hunter across that partially glaciated corner of the state where Illinois is not like the Illinois he has seen before, and lands him at the old home of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, ever the first citizen of Galena.

The way to this totally different section of the state lies out Lake street and through Elgin, Marengo, Belvidere, Rockford and Freeport. Freeport logs at 124 miles from Michigan avenue and can be made at legitimate speeds in less than four hours.

Except for a half mile at the entrance of Galena and a short gap at the western outskirts of Freeport the route is paved all the way, though Belvidere has a bad stretch within its city limits.

The ride is interesting all the way but half way between Freeport and Stockton, 22 miles beyond, the motorist finds himself getting a sample of the roller coaster highway which is characteristic of the trail to Grant's old home town.

Beyond Stockton the views begin to unfold themselves. The road stays mainly on the high points of the hills, taking dips into the hollows only for variety's sake. Green hills clad with thousands of trees and their valleys between stretch away for miles on both sides. Rugged knolls with outcroppings of stone jut up to intrigue the eye and far ridges in purple haze invite the cramped gaze of the city dweller. Infrequent farm houses and fields, fitted into the valleys and hillsides, appear much as if seen from the cockpit of an airplane.

The motometer leads the way down a long, curving, steep grade into the village of Elizabeth, through that sleepy little place, and out toward Galena. Along the spine of a ridge of high hills goes the cement ribbon, with some of the fairest, if not the most arable, land in the state on each side.

The car passes through the "forest," a dense woods where rattlesnakes abound. Coming out of this tangle of trees and undergrowth, where boughs form an arch over the bread highway, the bent tree is passed. It buries its roots beneath the concrete of the road and bends back for the companionship of its straight trunked neighbors. The right of way in the neighborhood is said to have been given the state, providing the twisted trunk, a land mark, was allowed to stand unmolested.

Down a mile-long hill to the end of the concrete a half mile out of Galena, over a fair, partly graveled road, and two bridges—a high one and a low one—and the tourist is in Galena.

Shifting gears in this old city is no disgrace, no matter what you drive. Streets there are built on the vertical plane. Some, in fact, though paved with brick, make no pretense of being for wheeled vehicles, for they have flights of steps squarely up the center.

Turning off the main street to the left, the seeker for Grant's home crosses the little river and finds well placed signs directing him to it. It is a square, red brick house, a mansion in its day, and it perches atop a hill, overlooking the town. The way up is steep, and once arrived it is well to find a friendly stone to block a wheel rather than depend too much upon the questionable functioning of the emergency brake.

Grant's home not only is a charming example of the dwellings of his time, furnished as it is with many pieces of furniture that delight the lovers of old and beautiful things, but it contains many mementoes of the rough and ready little fighter to whom Lee surrendered, but did not have to relinquish his sword.

There is no charge for visiting the house, but a register is kept and opportunity given to contribute to the upkeep of the old place.

Two blocks to the right from the bottom of the hill is Grant park, where a statue of the general dominates from a central knoll.

Returning to Chicago one may abandon the Grant highway at Freeport, taking route 26 to Dixon and then traverse the Lincoln highway back home.

The trip is longer that way, but if an early start is made and plans are made for returning to Chicago after the peak of the traffic jam, it is a pleasant variation.

More Trucks.

Demand for motor trucks in prosperous farming sections is indicated by the commercial vehicle registration in the six corn belt states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota and Nebraska which have a total motor vehicle registration (excluding Chicago figures) of 382,501. This is more than twice the number operated in these states in 1920 when the total was 168,185.

New Fuel.

A new German fuel, known as B. V. monopolin, is being introduced on the German market by the Benzol-Verband of Bochum, Trade Commissioner Daugherty at Berlin cables the department of commerce. It is said to be a mixture of ethyl-alcohol with light gasoline and motor benzol.

Urge Title Law.

Believing that the certificate of title law for motor vehicles, now enforced in 24 states to prevent sale of stolen cars, will lower the cost of theft insurance and is a public protection, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce is renewing its efforts in support of this measure.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to the Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune. For today's question Ruth Runyon, 10331 S. Leavitt street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

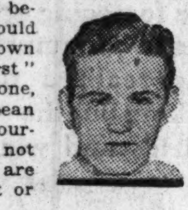
For a good summer vacation would you prefer touring in Europe or in the United States?

Where Asked.

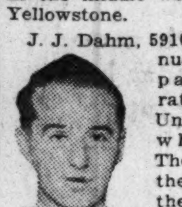
Diversey parkway and Clybourn avenue.

The Answers.

Lillian Dieshulski, 2508 North Kildare, stenographer—My vacation is too short to permit of a tour in Europe, although I would certainly enjoy it. I think that a tour of the good old U. S. would benefit me more, as I would like to be able to talk about my own country first. There is enough of this country to keep the average tourist busy on most vacations of his life.

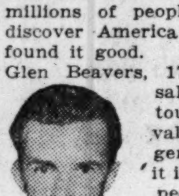


J. M. Olesen, 1712 Wilson avenue, advertising man—I believe everyone should follow the well known "see America first" and, when that is done, plan their European tour. Just now tourists in France are not as welcome as they are in the middle west or Yellowstone.



J. J. Dahm, 5916 North Talman avenue, purchasing department—I would rather tour in the United States than anywhere in Europe. They're still fighting the war over there and they certainly have nothing in the way of scenery or comforts than can compare with this country. The fact that strange languages are spoken there too is a drawback to European touring.

Natalie Giddings, 1542 North State street, publicity—The United States should always come first in any touring plans, and then Europe can be tackled for its broadening influence. The automobile has allowed millions of people to discover America and they have all found it good.



Glen Beavers, 1714 Wilson avenue, salesman—I think that touring in Europe is valuable for anyone's general education, but it is too costly for most people here and it should come second to trips into the thousands of interesting places offered in America.

Remember Number.

Some motorists experienced considerable delay in receiving emergency service and cause a great deal of annoyance to repair men by failing to remember their tag numbers. Service stations report that they are prevented frequently from responding immediately to distress calls because car owners are unable to give the numbers when they summon the repair man. Repair men say they often go to the scene of the trouble, but are unable to identify the car they have been called to rescue because they have been given the wrong number or the owner does not know the number at all. Knowing the tag numbers also is a protection against theft.

Brake Lore.

The variation in the efficiency of the brakes when on a long trip is due to several things, but the condition of the brake lining is perhaps most important. Sometimes the lining will become polished, in which case the brakes will not be very efficient. In other instances the lining may be "roughed up," in which case the brakes will suddenly begin to be more effective. Generally speaking, the dragging of the brakes or long application of them down long grades will cause the lining to become polished, whereas a few sudden applications of the brakes will rough up the linings. Road dust and water will alter these conditions.

Paved Links in Illinois Trails Aid Motor Fans

MOST unimproved roads have been dragged in the sections of recent rainfall and now are reported in good condition. Many sections where no moisture has fallen are dusty. Considerable construction work and oiling remains in progress.

New pavement connecting Fox Lake and the road leading into Lake Villa is completed except 700 feet, where there is a maintained run-around. This provides pavement from Chicago to Lake Villa over Ill-21 and on the county road west to Fox Lake with the exception of the 700 foot gap, according to motor club reports.

Ill-2 is reported under construction from Wapella to Clinton.

On Ill-3 the detour from Rushville to Industy is now open to touring cars. The break between Shiloh Church and Virginia is in good condition. There is one mile of oiled dirt in White Hall and one mile of oiled dirt in Roodhouse. A speed trap is reported at Columbia. Speed limit of 15 miles per hour is being strictly enforced at National City.

On Ill-4 there are two short run-arounds between Springfield and Lincoln on account of bridge construction.

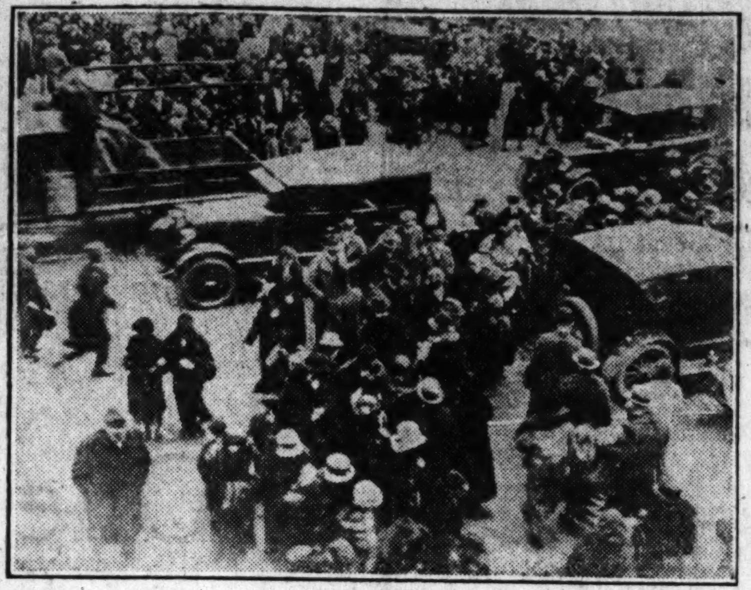
The detour in De Kalb on the Lincoln highway was eliminated July 17.

On Ill-7 the right of way into Ottawa from the east now settled. This road will parallel the railroad on the north side of the tracks, with a new bridge over Fox river. Improvement work will begin immediately. In the meantime the old road into town will be used. Work of paving the 2.8 mile stretch through Marseilles is now under way and will be completed early in the fall.

On Ill-19 contracts have been awarded for a new bridge over the Fox river east of Cary. The old bridge is to be moved and used while the new bridge is constructed. In the meantime the detour is south and west from Barrington to Ill-22 at Algonquin.

Illinois route 23 was opened between Harvard and Marengo on July 17. It is now open from the state line to the La Salle county line.

TRAFFIC MELTING POT.



Viewers with alarm would have found sufficient cause for their attitude at State and Madison streets recently, when this traffic picture was snapped. Sidewalk elevation, the subway, smaller automobiles, and better pedestrian control are all indicated as improvement needs by the picture.

Northwest Makes Highway Bid for Motor Caravans

TACOMA, Wash.—[Special Correspondence.]—The lure of the scenic west is calling the easterner stronger year by year, which naturally necessitates great expenditures annually to keep pace with this great increase of traffic. The matter is being handled successfully and each year new areas of scenic beauty are being made accessible to the sightseer by the extension of excellent highways penetrating the rugged, mountainous districts while many grades are being almost obliterated and immense touring camps with all modern conveniences are being enlarged all over the northwest.

As an indication of this remarkable increase of sightseers, during the year of 1915, but 15,000 visitors entered the Rainier National park, while in 1925 over 173,000 people viewed this scenic area, an increase of eleven times as many tourists in ten years, while the attendance so far this year is far in excess of the high water mark last year at this period.

Last year many improvements were made on the Yellowstone trail, especially from St. Paul west. There is today 1,558 miles of hard surfaced road on this highway and many of the grades through the mountains have been cut to the standard of federal aid specifications, with no grade exceeding five per cent. This eliminates "Camel's Hump" in western Montana and "Ford hill" on the western slope of the Bitter Root mountains. A large amount of the trail through the Dakotas is graveled and across Idaho and Washington the entire trail is graveled or paved. The highway is well marked and an excellent free information service is maintained.

The first major appropriation by the federal government was made for the Rainier National park this year and $500,000 is being expended in imporving the highways, and in but two places does the grade exceed four per cent in the entire trip to the very foot of the massive glaciers. This makes it possible for one to motor up this scenic mountain with little or no strain on the motor and the most timid driver can make the trip with ease. One eats breakfast at the sea level at Tacoma and luncheon among the glaciers at Paradise inn at an elevation of 5,557 feet.

Volumes could be written about the awe inspiring spectacular beauty of this region with its massive giants of the forest, mirror lakes, crystal streams, rugged snow capped peaks, and the great glaciers. However, the greatest convincing argument is the fact that hundreds of tourists come back year after year fascinated by the soothing and inspiring effect which the beautiful surroundings create.

The park is especially well equipped for a large volume of tourist business and these facilities are being constantly increased. One can receive any class of accommodation desired. The rustic Paradise inn furnishes a service which will compare with accommodations at any modern resort, while the tourist may rent a tent if desirable, equipped for camping out at a very moderate figure. The free camping grounds include stoves, shower baths, laundry facilities, and sanitary conveniences. This is absolutely free.

Tacoma is not only the gateway to Ranier park, but it is also just across the sound from the Great Olympics, a range which is easy of access.

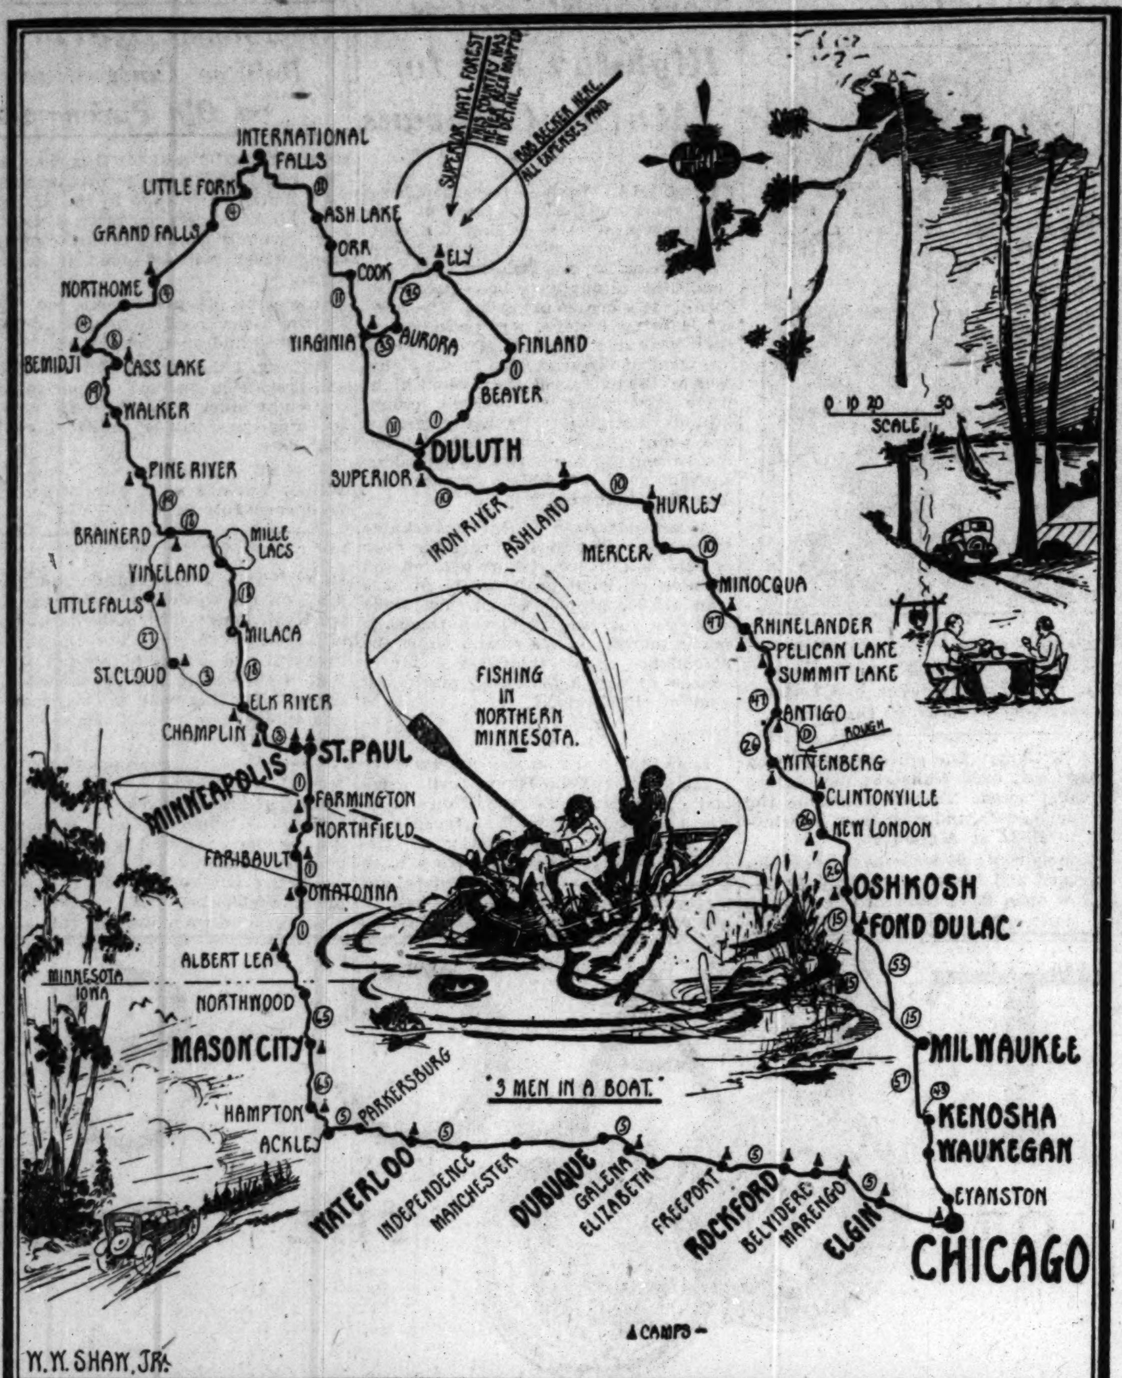
MOTORDOM TRIBUNE TOURS

XVII.—Trails to the Wilderness

IF YOU'RE hankering for the real open road, for miles of gravel ribbon winding through pine forest, past hidden lakes, across vast table lands, and into the balsam scented heart of the silent north woods, follow these long trails to the tip of the country and into the Minnesota wilderness.

For the first time the Chicago motorist is offered this great touring circle with the promise of all pavement and gravel highways, well marked and maintained, and a practical guarantee that touring barriers are cleared away. The trip starts via Sheridan road and uses Wisconsin concrete to Oshkosh, where it picks up the excellent gravel trunk lines running north into the lakes country. Nearing Lake Superior it picks up the famous Cloverland trail, a wonderful road made of iron and copper ore that plunges into and through stands of virgin timber to reach the busy cities of the north range. From Duluth a touring objective well worth the trip, the tourist may continue following the lake shore, branching off with good gravel to Ely, or strike northwest on excellent concrete to Virginia on top of the range, and from that point follow the sportsman trails into Ely and the Superior forest or north to the line at International Falls.

Returning the route cuts through some of the finest fishing country in Minnesota to pick up pavement into the Twin Cities, and strikes straight south with good gravel through the rich farming belts of Minnesota and Iowa on the Jefferson highway. At Ackley it strikes the Grant highway—Iowa and Illinois routes 5—and comes home via Dubuque, Rockford, and Elgin.



Water Supply for Tourists Guarded by Authorities

SAFEGUARDING the motorist from infected water sources is one of the most important phases of safety work, according to a touring bulletin issued by the American Automobile association.

"The health authorities are doing excellent work in most parts of the country," it adds, "and they should have the assistance of motoring organizations everywhere. The motorist himself, however, should use every precaution.

"Motorists away on a vacation should remember not to swallow water while swimming, and they should refuse to drink water from any well or spring that might allow drainage to seep in.

"If the city man visits a farm or a resort he should remember that it is probable that persons using a pump may wipe the mouth of the pump with fingers that are not clean. Germs that may have congregated at the pump are easily destroyed by burning a torch of newspapers under the spout."

The association through its affiliated clubs is working with health authorities by erecting signs along main highways in the vicinity of water that has received the O. K. of the health authorities. The plan is to extend this activity to the whole country through the instrumentality of the 800 clubs flying the A. A. A. emblem.

"Direct indication to the public of the safety of a semi-public water supply is even more necessary than in the case of a municipal or public water supply. In this semi-public class are the roadside well, the gasoline filling station, the summer resort well, the tourist camp well, the church well, and the fair grounds well.

"Another problem is the small private tourist camp—that is, the camp that is not under public auspices but is set up by private individuals for the purpose of selling something to tourists. Some of these are run by farmers in places where the only source of water supply is a small stream located close by. The need of close supervision of these private touring camps, dozens of which are springing up overnight, appears to be urgent.

"We are virtually a nation on wheels. Close to thirteen million motor tourists will take to the road this season. About one-third of this number will be making their first venture. This group needs protection against contaminated water and insanitary camps to a much greater degree than the veteran tourist."

"It is ridiculous, in my opinion, that men should even think of going forty or fifty miles an hour in a glass cage, their families packed inside, with the practical certainty that if they hit anything glass will fly and somebody must be cut."

The symbol of Safety

One motorist's reply to our safety glass announcement

THE writer of the foregoing speaks for many thousands of automobile owners who have long realized the ever-present danger lurking in the ordinary plate-glass windshields and windows of closed cars.

And he, like his fellows, hails with profound relief the announcement that he can now secure a closed car of any capacity with safety-glass all around—in the New SAFETY STUTZ.

The New SAFETY STUTZ models are the first and only automobiles to have safety-glass all around as regular equipment, without additional cost to the purchaser.

Safer motoring means pleasanter, more enjoyable motoring, with peace of mind and freedom from the worry of riding with "cut-throat" glass as a constant companion.

This vitally important protection to passengers represents the last possible step in making the New SAFETY STUTZ the safest private automobile ever built.

For the motorist gains this final security in the New SAFETY STUTZ along with many other in-built safety features, such as: a greater stability and resistance to overturn; more effective and evenly-operating brakes; instantaneous acceleration, enabling the driver quickly to pull out of "tight places"; extra-strong and rigid frame, with integral steel running-boards (side-bumpers); narrow, clear-vision front corner-posts, etc., etc.

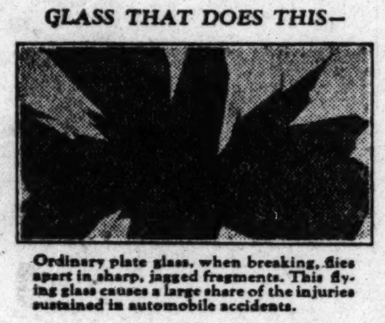
Each of these features reinforces all the others, so that in the New SAFETY STUTZ an automobile is achieved that provides complete and all-around protection to its passengers.

Added to the surpassing safety of New SAFETY STUTZ design and construction is a charm and ease of handling beyond description, an exclusively smart elegance of body design, and the utmost luxury of upholstery and appointments.

We are now displaying the New SAFETY STUTZ models (including 7-passenger cars) with safety-glass all around; these models also give the car-owner, without cost to him, the benefits of the Fedco System of Theft Prevention and Detection, which not only safeguards against theft, but indemnifies him against loss of his car's use resulting from theft, at the rate of five dollars per day, up to thirty days.

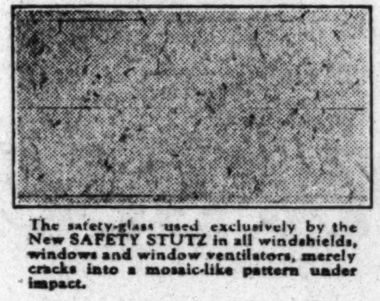
Which would you rather ride with—

GLASS THAT DOES THIS—



Ordinary plate glass, when breaking, flies apart in sharp, jagged fragments. This flying glass causes a large share of the injuries sustained in automobile accidents.

OR ONLY THIS?



The safety-glass used exclusively by the New SAFETY STUTZ in all windshields, windows and window ventilators, merely cracks into a mosaic-like pattern under impact.

STUTZ 8

Eight body styles, designed and constructed under the supervision of Brewster of New York. All closed bodies automatically ventilated—an exclusive feature. All models priced F. O. B. Indianapolis, war excise tax excluded, but fully equipped except spare tires.

CANADA DROUGHT REPORT BOOSTS WHEAT VALUES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Dry and hot weather reports from the Canadian northwest brought about heavy buying of wheat after an early break of 1⅛@1⅜c, which carried September off to 1.38⅝. With Winnipeg in the lead, values advanced sharply, and the finish was about the top with net gains of 1⅝@1⅞c with July $1.41⅝@1.41¼; September 1.41⅝@1.41⅜, and December $1.46@1.46⅛. Winnipeg gained 2⅝c on the active deliveries, while Minneapolis was 2⅜c higher, and Kansas City 1⅜@2c.

Oats showed independent strength with September advancing 1⅝c over Friday's close to 44c, a new high on the present upturn, and the finish was at gains of 1⅛@1⅝c, with July, 41⅝c; September, 43⅝@43¾c, and December, 46⅜@46½c. Corn gained 1⅛c, with July 76⅝c; September, 83⅝@83⅞c, and December, 86⅝@86¾c. Rye was 1⅝c higher, with July, $1.03⅝ and September, $1.05⅝@1.05⅞.

Wheat Lower for Week.

Wheat reversed its action of the previous week, and values were on the downgrade from Monday to Saturday, with a strong rally from the inside figures, but the finish was at net losses of ⅝@⅞c, as compared with a week ago, with July leading. Corn was ⅝c lower to 1⅝c higher, the former on July, while oats were 2¼@2⅜c higher, and rye, 2⅛@2⅝c lower. Lard lost 5@10c, ribs, 70c, and bellies 42½@45c for the week.

At the low point September wheat showed 8⅝c under the high on Monday and had lost half of the recent advance. The decline materially strengthened the technical position, and, with Minneapolis relatively strong and talk of hot and dry weather in Canada, it took but little buying to start values upward, an oversold condition being disclosed. There was persistent selling of December in small lots regarded as hedging. A local house that was a free seller on Friday was a big buyer on the way down, and helped to absorb the surplus in the pit. Houses with eastern connections were sellers.

See Bearish Figures Ahead.

The trade looks for bearish statistics on Monday, with probably record receipts of wheat at terminal markets. Kansas had 1,109 cars for the day, a new record for one day's arrivals, and compared with 372 cars last year. Movement of new grain in the central west is increasing, and thrashing is well under way. Further rains were shown in parts of the Dakotas and Minnesota, with the forecast for fair and warmer in the spring wheat territory. R. O. Cromwell estimated that Alberta and Saskatchewan would raise around 310,000,000 bu wheat, or 33,000,000 bu less than last year, weather conditions during the next few weeks determining the total.

Corn was under pressure from commission houses and local traders early on the rains in the northwest and west, but rallied sharply later on talk of dry weather from Illinois and other parts of the belt, and the loss was quickly recovered. Some claims of damage were received from Nebraska and Indiana. The latter state is beginning to need rain badly.

Oats Strong, at New High.

Oats showed independent strength, and, while fractionally lower early with other grains, advanced later to a new high on the present movement, with private reports from the west, southwest, and northwest indicating that the recent hot wave did more damage than anticipated and that the yield per acre would be much smaller than anticipated a short while ago.

Rye was influenced largely by the action of wheat. Private cables said rains were interfering with the rye harvest in Germany and that the prospective crop was one-third less than last year, when official returns placed the yield at 317,000,000 bu. Domestic exports for the crop year of 1925-'26 officially reported at 12,596,000 bu, compared with 61,664,000 bu for the previous season.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Rains were reported in eastern Nebraska, Omaha getting a good downpour, and other points extending to the north and west had some rain. Western Iowa also had rain as did Bismarck, N. D., on the Missouri river, where moisture was needed.

Bryant's report to Jackson Bros. & Co., from Edgemont, S. D., said: "Trade in observations show winter wheat practically all cut, with most of it very short straw and small head. Except irrigated fields yields will be 10 to 20 bu per acre. Spring wheat is firing badly and needs cool weather to develop heads. Rain would be beneficial in some places."

Cromwell's views on western Canada as given to Lamson Brothers & Co., from Calgary are: From Stettler to Custer, Hanna, and Calgary wheat is very good and promises fully up to last year. The line to Custer had a two-inch rain Sunday and the remainder had good rains the previous week. Yesterday was hard on the crop, but with moderate weather there will be much 25 bu or better. Heads average good length and are filling six rows over much of Alberta. Future weather will determine whether Saskatchewan or Alberta will make 15,000,000 bu more or less than 310,000,000 bu compared with 343,000,000 bu last year.

"We have never seen such a phenomenal wheat crop in this section as we have had this year," writes Edwin C. Hawkins, of Paducah, Ky., to the Chicago Tribune. "'We had a report from Metropolis, Ill., where a farmer seeded his wheat in December and the crop threshed 35 bu per acre. Another farmer in the same section failed to get in a crop and much to his surprise he is getting better than 2 bu of volunteer wheat. Ordinarily wheat in this section only averages 15 to 18 bu per acre."

Reports from the Red river valley said they were harvesting rye, oats and barley, as reported from Crookston, Minn. Wheat harvest will not be in full swing before the first of August. Observers say that crops over the northwest have made a remarkable recovery during the last ten days following scattered rains. The James river rose 18 inches at Huron when 1.5 inches of rain fell.

Reports on oats from northern central Illinois are running 30 to 40 bu per acre to almost a failure. In Iowa oats are spotted, some sections having about lost their crop while others will have 40 bu per acre. In Indiana oats are 25 to 60 bu, mostly 25 to 35 bu. Nebraska reports poor prospects, a failure in some sections.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreign demand for cash wheat was slow, but exporters were active in trying to secure hard winter at the gulf for July loading, presumably to cover old sales.

Local handlers sold 62,000 bu corn and 20,000 bu oats to the domestic trade, while purchases to arrive were 155,000 bu wheat, 50,000 bu corn, 75,000 bu oats, and 3,000 bu barley. Charters were for 125,000 bu corn and 100,000 bu oats to Georgian bay. Deliveries on July contracts aggregated 20,000 bu wheat, 100,000 bu corn, 55,000 bu oats, and 200,000 bu rye.

No change was shown in the local spot wheat basis, with No. 2 red 1@1½c and No. 2 hard 1@2c over the July. At Kansas City the basis was unchanged to 1c lower, a small decline considering the extremely large offerings.

Choice cash corn was in demand and sold ⅛c better as compared with the futures, while the poorer kinds were as much as 1c lower. No. 2 grades sold at ⅛c over to ⅜c under; No. 3 grades 1@3c under and No. 4 grades at 2@6c under. Outside markets were ½c lower to 1c higher.

Cash oats basis was unchanged to ¼c higher, with No. 2 white ½@⅝c over and No. 3 white ¼@½c over.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 232 cars; corn, 107 cars; oats, 66 cars; rye, 5 cars; barley, 9 cars.

NEBRASKA WHEAT YIELD GREATER THAN ESTIMATE

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Lincoln, Neb., July 24.—[Special.]—Threshers' reports coming from machines now humming throughout the southern two-thirds of the state are making it necessary for Nebraska to add many thousands of bushels to the July estimate figure of the winter wheat crop, while extremely hot weather during the last week is causing reports to whittle thousands of bushels each day from the corn crop figures.

With an increased acreage of winter wheat, W. E. Anderson, federal state crop and live stock statistician, estimated that there would be 33,719,000 bushels this season, or more than 2,000,000 bushels in excess of last year's crop. Since yields are running higher than growers had expected an upward revision of both the winter and spring wheat estimates will likely be necessary. Growers are not only boasting about their yields, but they are surprised at the unusually high quality of the wheat, which means that it will test high when put on the scales.

Danger to Corn Crop.

There will be some shriveled grains in upland fields caught by the dry spell before the grain had reached the final mature stage, but in general the kernels are hard and well filled.

Unless plenty of rain comes soon there are dangerous days ahead for the corn crop. While growers had reduced their acreage of corn about three per cent, they had good reasons to believe that with fine prospects two weeks ago the crop would be nearly equal to the one harvested last fall. A week of extremely hot weather has made growers nervous.

Alfalfa Yield Cut.

Both the acreage and yield of alfalfa hay has been cut down. A big tonnage of alfalfa is being harvested in the east and west ends of the state, but the crop has suffered severely in the central dry belt. In the heart of the stats's big surplus alfalfa hay belt the crop will be at least 25 per cent short of last year. Cozad in Dawson county is the biggest alfalfa hay shipping center in the state, normally sending out from 1,500 to 1,800 carloads a year.

Unverified reports from Newport, which is said to be the greatest wild hay shipping center in the world, say there is perhaps not more than two-thirds of a crop of wild hay in that district this year, according to Mr. Anderson.

Nebraska's oat crop is expected to be more than 24,000,000 bushels shorter than last year.

PRIMARIES FOR WEEK

Primary receipts of grain last week of 26,332,000 bushels were the largest in months and the heaviest at this time since 1922. The feature was the big run of wheat, the best in more than five years. In the aggregate of all grains there was an increase of 6,523,000 bushels for the week, also a gain of 8,672,000 bushels over last year and were 15 per cent above the five year average. Details follow:

LESS PRESSURE ON LARD

The provision market had the appearance of being sold out, and with lighter pressure from sellers, a better tone among traders and packers, a firmer hog market with light arrivals, and the advance in grain, there was a rally and higher close. Lard gained 12½c to 15c; short ribs, 17½c, and bellies, 20c for the day, with last trades at the top.

Shipments of meats and lard for the week were smaller than the previous week and last year. Exports for the day were small. Prices follow:

PIT NOTES

A bullish spring wheat situation and a bearish winter wheat movement confronts the trade. The disposition on the part of local traders is to absorb offerings on breaks, with eastern interests taking that side of the market, while the sharp bulges run into profit taking by a number of large traders. For the time being the market is a mixed affair and is dependent largely on weather conditions in the American and Canadian northwest. The short interest has been cut down, and there was said to be more long wheat held at the close than at the finish on Friday.

There was considerable buying of wheat yesterday on a report from the northwest that there would not be more than 100,000,000 bu of bread spring wheat raised this year in the four northwestern states. Minneapolis mills can easily use this quantity.

A Canadian operator sent down a report that temperatures were getting very high in western Canada, which started general buying and carried wheat prices up sharply from the low point. There was bullish news enough to make a material change in sentiment in favor of holders in most quarters and it was said that the short interest was materially reduced on the closing bulge.

Interest in oats is increasing as crop reports from the leading states continue to make an unsatisfactory showing. Oats have had a comparatively small advance, considering other grain, and, while commission buying has helped to lift prices, local traders in the main are moderately bearish.

The cash corn situation is attracting more attention and is inducing buying of futures by a few large speculators. With crop conditions uncertain, farmers in the west are disposed to hold their old corn until they know more about the outcome of the new crop.

Paul H. Kirk, a government agricultural statistician, after covering southern Minnesota, says: "Fields and pastures are fairly prosperous. Small grain prospects are fair. Harvesting is in full swing. Flax is still to be cut and will gain some from present rains. Acreage shows increase over the state. Pastures are green but short. Corn fields are recovering from the recent hot spell without a great deal of damage."

A report from Indianapolis says corn has gone back rapidly the last week, the weather being too dry. Large areas during June had less than 1 inch of rainfall, against a normal of about 4 inches. Hence the crop is unable to withstand recent temperatures. Nine of the large corn counties are said to have the prospect of only 60 per cent of last year's yield.

Exports of wheat and flour from the United States for the twelve months ended June 30 were swelled by a larger outward movement in June than the trade had looked for. Export clearances for the year were 106,116,000 bu, compared with 223,153,000 bu last year. As wheat prices were above an export basis, it is a wonderful showing.

Indications are for a big run of wheat to Chicago on Monday and for the week.

Winnipeg said that traders there were getting nervous over the prospects for a warm wave Sunday. The market is in a position where it will take constant pressure to keep wheat prices down, as buying on the declines is of better character than the selling.

A Warsaw cable says that $3,000,000 is to be spent in Poland for erection of grain elevators.

SPOT COTTON OVER $19.00

Spot cotton in New York advanced 10 points yesterday to 19.10c. This is a gain of nearly 1c per lb within a short time. Spots in New Orleans closed 36 points up; middling, 18.89c.

Trading in futures was active and prices advanced sharply due to meet profit taking and decline and closed with futures in New York 16 to 32 points higher for the nearby deliveries and 1 to 5 points off on the distant months.

In Chicago gains were 15 to 28 points. Liverpool closed 10 to 11 points higher.

Spinners' takings for the week were 184,000 bales, against 171,000 bales last year.

Crop reports were spotted and in the main favorable. Weevil was reported in parts of Texas and doing some damage. Prices in leading markets follow:

SOUTHWEST RAIL MERGER UP TO COMMERCE BODY

Washington, D. C., July 24.—(AP)—Another step in the far reaching plans of L. F. Loree, to link the principal transportation gateways of the country, was taken today with the filing of two applications with the interstate commerce commission to unite into a single system three major carriers of the southwest.

Approval of the two plans, one providing for acquisition of stock control of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas (Katy) by the Kansas City Southern, and the other for assumption of similar control by the "Katy" of the St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) would mould into one big operating system nearly 6,000 miles of track and approximately $600,000,000 of working capital. The commission was requested to regard both applications as covering one general project and they be considered together.

Question of Legality.

The distinction between consolidation under common ownership and management, prohibited by law pending completion by the commission of final consolidation plans, and merging through stock control to operate as a single system was emphasized in the "Katy" application, which explained it was for "acquisition, not involving consolidation into a single system for ownership and operation," of the Cotton Belt.

Unlike the rejected Nickel Plate unification plan, which called for the creation of a new company to assume control over five railroad units, and the issuance in some instances of nonvoting stock, the applications filed today would have one railroad acquire a second and the second take over a third, and all three, while retaining their corporate identities, grouped into a single operating system.

Demanded By Economy.

One of the principal reasons for uniting the three roads was said to be the necessity for a grouping of the southwestern carriers into a limited number of systems so arranged as to provide for the greatest economies in operation and the most efficient service to the public.

The application of the Kansas City Southern, which now owns 350,000 shares of "Katy" common stock for which it paid more than $11,000,000 declared that acquisition would be by purchase or exchange of sufficient additional shares as to give it a working majority, while that of the "Katy" requested authority to acquire the Cotton Belt by purchase of at least a numerical majority of its outstanding capital stock.

Would Purchase Control.

Such control by the "Katy" would be obtained by purchase from the Kansas City Southern for $13,613,301 with interest at 5 per cent, of 135,000 shares of preferred and 20,000 shares of common stock of the Cotton Belt, pursuant to an agreement entered into yesterday at New York between the "Katy" and Kansas City Southern and the Central Union Trust company. The "Katy" also would purchase, at not more than $92 a share for preferred and $74 for common, such additional shares of the Cotton Belt as would constitute a majority under the agreement, the "Katy" in addition would acquire all rights of the Kansas City Southern to a reduction of the purchase price of Cotton Belt shares bought from the Rock Island. Should it fail to acquire the needed additional shares at the terms mentioned, the "Katy" reserved the right to file another application with the commission.

Would Buy "Cotton Belt."

The "Katy" plan also provides for an immediate payment of $7,000,000 with interest at 5 per cent for the Kansas City Southern's Cotton Belt stock.

Of the larger independent carriers in the southwest, the applications pointed out, practically the only ones which remain unattached to some large system were the "Katy," with 3,188 miles of track, the St. Louis Southwestern with 1,747 and the Kansas City Southern with 865.

CANADA LIBERALS ASK RECIPROCITY WITH U. S. TRADE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Toronto, Ont., July 24.—Reciprocity with the United States on natural products is one of the chief planks in the platform drawn by Manitoba progressives in their meeting at Winnipeg to outline a policy for "low tariff" candidates in the Canadian election.

The important significance of the gathering was that the members declared as essential to Canadian progress a "consolidation of low tariff sentiment," and prepared their platform to unite liberal and progressive strength against Prime Minister Meighen's Conservative forces. The platform included a declaration for no further tariff increases, and reductions in existing tariff schedules.

DROUGHT PERILS CANADA WHEAT, EXPERT REPORTS

"Broadly speaking, we have a year of poor spring wheat in this country and a very heavy yield of winter wheat, furnishing a total crop decidedly larger than last year, while the Canadian crop of spring wheat is uncertain and is dependent on weather conditions of the next few weeks."

This is the analysis of B. W. Snow, grain crop expert, who has returned from a 2,000 mile automobile tour through the spring wheat territory of the American and Canadian northwest.

"For three consecutive years rainfall shortage in the American spring wheat territory has been responsible for an almost unprecedented collapse of our spring wheat crop over a large part of South Dakota and more or less of a shortage in the southern half of North Dakota," Mr. Snow said. "Some of the best spring wheat territory in South Dakota will hardly get seed back and there are many fields in the bad area of North Dakota which will never be cut.

Striking Increase in Durum.

"The northern part of North Dakota has a very good crop, the result of rains in June, which did not appear as far south as the center of the state. The striking thing, however, is the enormous increase this year in the good territory of durum wheat. There is in many places scarcely a field of bread wheat. The crop in the Red River valley is decidedly better, however, than that through the state, and this is largely bread wheat. In the western part of the state, the Bismarck territory, there is a miserable crop, but further north and running into Montana, the situation is much better.

"On the Canadian side of the line, the prospect is more mixed up than ever before has been known. Roughly speaking, the territory lying south of the Canadian Pacific railroad in the three western provinces has a good crop.

Poor Crop Conditions Prevail.

"Central Saskatchewan, northern Manitoba, and central and eastern Alberta, however, have all the conditions for poor crops. The weather last fall was such that less than the usual amount of fall plowing was done in Canada, and as a result there is a larger area of wheat stubbled this spring than usual. Some of this stubble wheat is already badly fired, and the yield on this character of seeding will be light.

"Summer fallow wheat represents the best type of farming and is fairly good over most of the territory, and exceedingly good in some places.

"A little of the prematurely ripened wheat on poorly farmed land will be ready to cut by the end of this week, but the bulk of the crop, particularly the good crop, will require from two to three weeks yet for maturity.

Sure It's Not Bumper Crop.

"The size of the Canadian wheat crop is purely a matter of condition at this time. The only thing certain is that it will not be a bumper crop at best, and if the weather should be hot and dry for the next ten days there may easily be severe losses."

Mr. Snow, in a message sent a few days ago while he was in western Canada, estimated the spring wheat crop of the three provinces at 350,000,000 to 375,000,000 bushels, compared with 381,000,000 bushels, which was the official estimate of last year. His estimate, however, is dependent upon favorable weather conditions for the balance of the season.

Activity characterized trading in the hog market on the week-end session and the small showing of better grades met early clearance at strong prices, sales in spots indicating slight advances. Demand was broad on both local and shipping account, some orders being unfilled. Less than 2,000 hogs were estimated in the pens at the close, including a few good grades held off the market in hopes of further improvements early next week.

Fancy 140@190 lb averages reached $13.85, the day's peak, with general average price unchanged at $12.00, against $12.50 the previous Saturday. Prime 211 lb butchers reached $13.75, with 256 lb averages at $12.85, and 300 pounders at $12.40. Most 300@350 lb smooth sows brought $10.00@10.50, heavy "packers" ranging down to $9.60.

Demand Checks Decline.

Hogs experienced the sharpest decline of the season during last week, prices falling 75c@$1.00 in three days, when a marked expansion of outside demand, coupled with a falling off of supplies at all leading centers checked the drastic break and enabled the market to finish the week on firmer ground.

A decline in lard and provision futures added to the weakness early in the week. Quality graded fair, the run including a liberal number of good 300@350 lb packing sows and comparatively few strictly choice light hogs.

Receipts of hogs last week at 124,900 were third largest since last March and averaged 261 lbs in weight, the heaviest in many years, comparing with 244 lbs a year ago and 239 lbs two years ago. The general average price of hogs dropped 60c@$12.25, the lowest since the middle of April, against $13.25 a year ago and $8.45 two years ago.

Cattle Market Closes Low.

Demand in the cattle division was restricted to light weight offerings throughout last week and, barring a few specialties in light steers and heifers, the general market finished at the low time and on par with the recent low spot. Weighty kinds lost the 25@40c gain scored earlier in the week, despite the second smallest cattle receipts since last April at 53,800, against 61,891 the preceding week. Yearlings and light heifers on the other hand were the highest in several weeks, 833 lb heifers at $10.35 standing highest since the middle of June. Nebraska heifers reached $10.30.

Fancy 807@936 lb yearling steers in load lots and four head averaging 1,160 lbs, reached $10.65, the week's top. Bulls advanced 10@25c on better grades. Calves moved up 50c@$1.00. Better grades of feeding cattle held firm, while others ruled weak to lower. The average price of good beef cattle last week was $9.45, against $12.25 a year ago.

Lambs Gain Sharply.

Sheep receipts last week dropped to 61,300, the second smallest since last May, barring holiday periods, and the market responded readily to reduced supplies in a 75c@$1.00 advance, finishing at the highest point since July 1. Best range lambs reached $15.15 at the close, $1.15 above the week's top on feeders, which are lowest in practically two months. First Montana range lambs of the season arrived Tuesday and topped the trade at that time at $14.60. Aged sheep closed strong to 25c higher for the week, light ewes at $7.50 and old wethers at $9.00.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 38,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 15,263 cattle, 37,526 hogs, and 8,949 sheep a week ago, and 18,721 cattle, 48,480 hogs, and 8,545 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 54,000 cattle, 130,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep, against 47,171 cattle, 124,977 hogs, and 62,075 sheep a year ago.

BASKET INDUSTRY MIRRORS GROWING AMERICAN MENU

BY HARPER LEECH.

Every increase in the variety of food on the American table involves an expansion of the container industry. More kinds of food mean more kinds of packages. There was a time when food moved mostly on the hoof, then it moved in bulk in canal and flat boats, then mostly in barrels.

In recent months the Armour live stock bureau has issued two very important historical summeries. The first pictured the old cattle trails. The summer motorist cannot fail to note how he trails them yet, and they trailed the buffalo and Indian in many sections. American civilization has pursued mostly the same paths that early savagery trod over the continent.

A more recent study shows the influence of the early water routes on food transport and the war of trade routes, first between the river and the canal systems, then between the rails and the waterways. When the river route was supreme it was Cincinnati "which originated and perfected the system which packs 15 bushels of corn into a pig, packs that pig into a barrel, and sends him over the mountains and over the ocean to feed mankind."

But frequently they didn't even need the barrel. The packing houses were built near the rivers—not until 1852 did Chicago overcome the lead of Beardstown in hog packing. "Great quantities of pork were brought down the Illinois river in bulk. A hog after being cleaned was smiply spit in two parts from head to tail and cured in that form. Several cords of the resulting pork would be piled at one time on the levee by the river. At Chicago, for instance, the early packer, Gurdon S. Hubbard collected hogs from far and wide and would store them on the river front where, because of the honesty of the inhabitants or the esteem in which Hubbard was held, the carcasses would not be molested although they remained in the open."

But who wanted to steal a hog?

In the days of that porcine idyll, good liquor cost a Mississippi planter about six dollars a barrel and to protect the slaves from malaria every field hand was served a stiff portion after breakfast and at night. A generation previous when Davy Crockett ran for congress he opened a barrel at every cross roads for the freemen and was not even investigated, although one story has it that he was criticized for providing a tin dipper with each barrel. That was plutocratic. The proletariat was used to drinking out of gourds.

Contrast such bucolic and bibulous pictures with the reports on the manufacture of containers for the refrigerated food of today. Last year 102 plants made 378,000,000 berry containers. Seventy-one factories produced 167,000,000 till baskets, and 65 plants made 26,000,000 climax baskets. Seventy-three plants made 32,000,000 round stave baskets, 74 plants made over 25,000,000 hampers, 50 factories turned out 15,000,000 market baskets, while other shops made 25,000,000 boxes, 6,000,000 berry crates, and 58,000,000 vegetable and citrus crates.

Solid Investment, Not Speculation, Builds Independence.

If you are building up an estate—investing for future independence—do not go about it by playing the stock market.

Quick profits are sometimes obtained in that way, but large losses are also frequently sustained.

Speculation on the market is simply betting which way a stock will go.

If your guess is right you may get a profit—if wrong, you lose.

Even if you do guess right the chances are that you will not sell when you have made a reasonable paper profit, but will hold on for more.

That is human nature and it frequently results in losing the profit you might have taken.

A market reaction may wipe out in a single day one's entire holdings, perhaps representing the savings of a lifetime.

One then has to begin all over again.

If you are investing with the intention of eventually having an estate that will support you later in life you must be content to make haste slowly.

Financial independence is built step by step of solid material.

Each investment must be selected carefully with regard to its soundness.

The income must be steady and assured and the principal well secured.

You must not depend for income on a possible profit from the sale of the security at an advanced price as one does who plays the stock market.

Steady, consistent saving and investing in sound securities well diversified as to type, geographical distribution and maturity date is the proper way to go about it.

This may seem a slow, tedious process, but it is the safest way to build and you will be surprised to find how rapidly such an estate will grow once it is started.

If the interest is reinvested instead of spent the growth of the estate will gain increasing momentum.

With a few sound securities one can always borrow money for the purchase of others or for any other purpose, which gives one a distinct feeling of independence.

This sense of the possession of a real asset and the freedom from worry about his investments is in marked contrast to the uncertainty, apprehension and almost constant worry of one who is playing the market.

Speculation is no game for the man or woman of limited means.

If you would eventually have financial independence, build your estate solidly on sound investments and do not let impatience for quick profits tempt you into the dangerous and uncertain field of speculation.

D. A. DOBRY SECURITIES COMPANY

1850 Shares 7% Cumulative and Participating Preferred Stock Par Value $100.00

(Participating with common stock up to 10%)

History and Progress

In 1923 Mr. D. A. Dobry acquired the business, clientele and good will of various established and active investment concerns in the city of Davenport, Iowa, and combined them with the Brokerage House of D. A. Dobry & Company, under which style the business was conducted until July 7th, 1924, at which time the D. A. Dobry Securities Company was incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa and took over all of the properties, assets and liabilities of the former.

The Company as originally incorporated issued and disposed of total capital stock to the amount of $125,000.00 divided into 1250 shares of the par value of $100.00, 250 shares Common Stock and 1000 shares 7% Cumulative and Participating Preferred Stock. April 7th, 1925, an increase of $125,000.00 was authorized, bringing total capitalization of the Company to $250,000.00. The increase thus authorized consisted of 1250 shares (par value $100.00) all of 7% Cumulative and Participating Preferred Stock to be known as D. A. Dobry Securities Company Series "B" Preferred Stock.

The Company now offers the unsold portion of 1850 shares (par value of $100.00) Series "B" 7% Cumulative and Participating Preferred Stock, participating with Common stock up to 10%. This stock carries all of the earnings, profits and protection enjoyed by all issues of Preferred Stock of the Company.

The D. A. Dobry Securities Company commenced business with a nominal cash capital and has advanced to the position of the largest concern of its kind in Iowa. At the time of the Company's beginning with present organization (about October, 1923), one office room with three employes was sufficient to conduct its affairs, while today the Company requires the entire east wing of the third floor Kahl Building (consisting of about ten room floor space), with traveling and office organization numbering upward of 30 people in its combined departments. Originally organized to negotiate stock transactions only the Company has from time to time developed and added new departments in order to better serve a constantly growing and widening clientele.

Departmental Divisions

Stock Department: Since October, 1923, the Company has specialized largely in carefully selected Insurance Stocks and has been highly successful in satisfactorily placing stocks of favorably known middle Western Companies. The volume of business transacted up to the date of this advertisement in 1926 has already exceeded the entire business of any previous year. The activities of the Company in the future as in the past will be confined to financing only concerns of proven and successful records.

Bond Department: This Department deals in Municipal, Industrial, Railway and Insured First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds of high rating, and approved Commercial Paper. We refer to more than 70 banks in Iowa and Illinois who participate with us in the sale of these securities under Exclusive Franchise Agreements. The business of this department has grown very rapidly in purchase and sale of highly rated bonds of the issues of reliable bond houses over the entire United States.

Customer's Trading and Service Department: This Department is devoted to the purchase, sale and exchange of stocks (listed and unlisted), and all transactions are handled upon a strictly commission basis. Being in constant touch with hundreds of allied correspondents throughout the United States this department is able to furnish clients with dependable information promptly and without prejudice.

The business of the Customer's Trading and Service Department has run far in excess of anticipation and handles hundreds of inquiries and commissions weekly for clients over several States.

Mortgage Loan Department: The activities of the Mortgage Loan Department are confined strictly to Western Illinois and Eastern Iowa and in that territory gives prompt and efficient service. We purchase and sell both approved farm and city mortgages and carry always on hand for the selection of our clientele a well selected and diversified list of mortgages in amounts from $3000.00 up, amounts loaned regulated to very conservative percentages of real values.

Earnings

The total business of the Company for the year ending July, 1925, approximated $500,000.00, all in stock operations, whereas the total aggregate business during the past year in stock operations alone will reach a minimum of approximately $1,000,000.00 to which must be added the business negotiated through the Bond Department—the Mortgage Loan Department—and the Customer's Trading Service Department.

After payment of all expenses, including salesmen's commissions, operating costs, salaries of officers and employes, organization expense, and the installation of a large amount of equipment; the profits earned have permitted the Company:

To pay to every holder of Preferred and Common Stock full 7 per cent Dividends, together with additional 3 per cent Participation Earnings, a total of 10 per cent per annum.

And in a single year to add:

To Total Assets $198,964.66

To Surplus $27,467.33

New York, July 24.—(AP)—The stock market moved irregularly lower in today's quiet trading. A series of bear attacks, particularly against the motors and some of the high priced industrial specialties, resulted in the elimination of some weak speculative accounts, but failed to undermine the market's structure. Good buying support was forthcoming when needed, but little effort was made to bring about any demonstrations on the up side.

Rails showed better support than the industrials. Buying of these shares was influenced by the appearance of additional favorable June earnings reports and the publication of plans for the big merger in the southwest. Southern Pacific closed nearly two points higher at 106⅝ on the announcement that net operating income in June was 18 per cent above the average income for that month over the last five years.

Motor Group Withstands Attack.

Motors, which have been subjected to repeated assaults in the last few months, again withstood the attacks of bear traders. General Motors closed ⅛ higher at 166⅛, after fluctuating between 165 and 167, Mack Truck showed a fractional loss at 119½ after having sold a point below that figure, but Hudson closed nearly two points lower at 60⅛. Jordan rallied over two points to 26 and then yielded slightly.

Most of the other standard industrials drifted lower, United States Steel common showing a net loss of ⅜ at 137½. While the large majority of net losses in that group were fractional declines of one to two points were recorded by American Smelting, American Water Works, Dupont, General Electric, Pullman, and Westinghouse Air Brake. Offsetting these were similar gains in Austin-Nichols, Brown Shoe, Davison Chemical, Foundation Company, Marine preferred, and Jones Brothers Tea.

Curb Market Trading Quiet.

Except for a sharp decline in Cumberland Pipe Line, which receded more than 2 points, transactions on the curb exchange today were extremely quiet and virtually devoid of feature. From the character of trading it was apparent that closing out of commitments for over the week-end was in progress.

In general, oils displayed the narrowest variation in prices evidenced by this group in some time, power and lighting stocks moved irregularly and industrial specialties failed to reveal any definite trend. While American Light and Traction moved forward a point, United Gas Improvement and Electric Bond and Share were fractionally lower. Lehigh Valley Coal Sales scored an advance of 2 points on the initial transaction and General Baking A lost ½. Canada Dry was supported.

Trading in today's bond market was restricted and prices held relatively steady. French issues advanced slightly. Other foreign issues showed narrow and irregular changes. Publication of excellent June earnings reports imparted a firm undertone to railroad liens. New Haven 3½s of 1954 advanced over a point to a new 1926 high at 67½ and Great Northern 7s improved fractionally on a large turnover. Industrial liens moved within extremely narrow and irregular limits, and U. S. government issues showed practically no change.

A further rally of nearly 10 points in French francs to around 2.45 cents featured the irregular foreign exchange market. Belgian francs and Italian lire rallied in sympathy with the Paris rate, but demand sterling eased 3-16 of a cent to $4.85 11-16.

The weekly New York clearing house statement showed excess reserve of $32,540,170, an increase of $21,210,930 above that of a week ago. Loans, discounts and investments dropped $5,889,000 and net deposits $28,375,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 24.—(AP)—COTTONSEED OIL—Prices advanced 3 to 20 points on commission house buying of October and covering operations, prompted by unfavorable weather advices from the southwest and the firm ruling in cotton and lard. Sales, 2,700 bbls. Prime crude, nominal; prime summer yellow, spot, 15.00c; July closed, 15.23c; September, 14.18c; October, 12.84c; December, 11.05c; January, 10.95c.

RAILROAD NOTES

The interstate commerce commission has found to be not justified proposed reduced proportional rates on grain and grain products from Kansas City to Beaumont and Port Arthur, Tex., New Orleans, and points taking the New Orleans rates. The schedules which would have covered rates on grain to these points for export, were ordered cancelled.

The commission placed a tentative valuation of $11,826,300 on the total owned and used property of Henry Ford's Detroit, Toledo and Ironton railroad as of June 30, 1918. The valuation also covers the Toledo-Detroit, a subsidiary. The commission reassigned for hearing on Sept. 8 at Washington the application of the Reading company for authority to acquire control of the Lehigh and New England railroad.

The Seaboard Air Line is in the market for 10 locomotives of the 2-8-2 type and 5 of the 0-6-0 type, the first sizeable inquiry for engines in some time.

The New York Central railroad has ordered a 100-ton oil electric locomotive from the Ingersoll-Rand General Electric and American Locomotive company. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway is inquiring for five 70-foot gas electric cars, including two passenger-baggage, two mail-baggage and one baggage car.

The National Railways of Mexico have ordered ten mail-express and five baggage-express cars from the Pullman Car and Manufacturing company. The Georgia and Florida railway has ordered 20 fifty-ton gondolas from the American Car and Foundry company. The Norfolk & Western railway is inquiring for 250 flat cars.

The Rock Island handled 109,173 revenue freight cars in the first twenty-one days of July, against 103,670 in the like period of last year. The Illinois Central handled 125,[illegible], against 121,390 in the like period last year. The Burlington handled 102,961 cars, against 102,323 in the same period last year.

Chicago stocks were excessively dull and prices were fractionally lower in the general list in yesterday's week-end session. William Oil-o-Matic was the only issue to show much trading interest and it lost a small fraction. Fractional declines also were shown by Stewart Warner, Auburn Auto, and Butler Brothers. Swift International gained half a point. On small trading, All-American Radio advanced 1¼ and Crane and Pines Winterfront gained a point each. U. S. Gypsum declined a point.

Meeting today The Demands of Tomorrow

> "The automobile is fast becoming the American family's roving home, and just as the average family does not trade its fixed home every year, it does not want to trade its automobile," says Ray W. Sherman, Editor of Motor, and leading authority on automobile trends.
> Continuing his leading article in the Show issue of Motor, he states,
> "There are two great advances demanded by the public:
> 1. ONE IS CARS THAT WILL GIVE SERVICE FOR YEARS AND NOT HAVE TO BE TRADED IN.
> 2. THE OTHER IS MAINTENANCE THAT DOES NOT LAY A CAR UP FOR SO MANY HOURS AS IS NOW THE CUSTOM AND NECESSITY."
> Reo leads all American cars in meeting both of these demands.

1 Reo leads all American cars in giving years of service without needing to be traded in.

That is proved by Reo's amazing achievement of being America's longest lasting automobile—an achievement attested by every recognized method of computing automobile life.

These prove that Reo offers you over three more years of life than the average American automobile.

You may not wish to keep your Reo until its days are over.

But the length of life built into it means that far beyond the limits of ordinary car endurance, your Reo will give you velvet-footed miles of travel, miles free from worry of breakdowns or minor troubles, and that its resale value will be high.

Ask a Reo salesman to show you the facts about Reo's long life. Go over a Reo for yourself and see why it is possible for Reo to outlast all other American cars.

The Second Great Advance

2 Reo leads in construction that makes maintenance and repair easy, economical and quick.

The Reo owner pays less for maintenance and repairs for two reasons:

First—Because Reos so seldom need repairs. The fact that Reos are kept so long testifies to that.

Second—Because Reo, realizing years ago that these advances would be demanded, has so built that repairs can be made more quickly and with less cost for labor and parts.

When repairs are needed, most can be made more quickly, and at less cost on a Reo than on any other car in its price class or of greater price.

They can be made more quickly on a Reo than on most cars costing less. They can be made more cheaply, counting labor and parts cost, than on some cars whose original cost is below Reo's.

There are many repairs that can be made on a Reo far more quickly and at much less cost than on a car which is constructed to older standards. Only a few of the many can be mentioned here. Come in and ask us to compare Reo repair costs with yours.

When the hot days spell "go to the hills," a Reo takes you carefreely, comfortably, economically—year after year after year.

A Few Instances

Freedom from layups and maintenance costs:

Valve grinding and carbon removal are required only one-third to one-fourth as often as on most cars.

The radiator is so constructed as to be practically frost-proof.

Adjustable bearings save the cost of new ones.

The Split-Second Steering Gear seldom, if ever, needs adjustment.

And many others.

Come in and see them.

Clutch repairs. These can be made without disturbing the motor, transmission, or rear end. The time necessary is from ½ to ⅔ less than on ordinary cars. So easily and quickly is the work done, so low are parts prices, that a new clutch can be installed on a Reo for a complete cost which is 33⅓% less than just the labor cost on some others.

Come in and compare your costs with Reo's.

Transmission repairs. These can be made without disturbing clutch, motor, or rear end in from ¼ to ⅓ the time commonly needed by other cars.

Come in and compare your costs on this with Reo's.

Timing gears. There's no need for lifting or supporting the Reo engine while installing new timing gears as must be done on so many other cars in its price class.

Come in and compare your costs.

Rear axle inspection. The Reo rear axle can be dismounted, all gears taken out for inspection in half the time and at less than half the cost necessary for many other cars in its price class.

Come in and compare your costs.

Starter. It's almost impossible to damage a Reo starter. The most an owner could do would be to break one or more links in a starter chain—and a new chain can be bought and installed for $3.00 or $4.00 against the usual cost of $30.00 to $40.00 for repairing the most common damage to the ordinary starter—breaking a gear tooth.

The Two Great Advances Are Here

The two great advances demanded by the public:

"1. Cars which will give service for years and not have to be traded in.

"2. Maintenance that does not lay a car up for so many hours as is now the custom and necessity." Are today found in Reo, and have been for years.

For years the forward-looking, veteran car-buyers who first asked for these advances, have been buying Reos.

Come in and compare Reo maintenance and repair costs with yours.

Then take out a Reo and drive it.

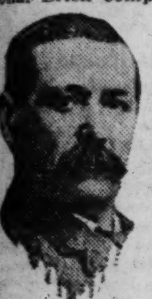
Hollywood Filmists to Give Chicago $1,500,000 Shore Club

PLAN MEMORIAL GROUP FOR OLD WEBER FARM

$1,500,000 Buildings to Be Erected.

B. F. Weber, president of the National Brick company, and his sister have had plans drawn by Architect Robert C. Ostergren for a $1,500,000 group of structures to be known as the Weber Memorial buildings and to be erected in memory of their parents, from whom they inherited the site, once known as the old Weber farm. The property has an entire block of frontage on the west side of North Clark street, between Granville and Thome avenues, with half a block of frontage on the two avenues.



B. F. WEBER.

The Weber Memorial buildings will comprise three units. One will be a store building, 375 feet long, on the Clark-Ashland concourse, designed by Mr. Ostergren in the Tudor style, with a Teutonic touch. This lengthy business block will be fireproof and will contain twenty stores and fifty-two offices and apartments.

Spanish Style Apartments.

To the west of the commercial unit will be two apartment units, designed in Spanish style of architecture, with a sixty-six foot wide patio or interior park between them.

This patrio will be 300 feet long and will have an electric fountain, sun dials, old fashioned wells, statuary, ornamental trees, shrubs, flower beds, etc.

The total number of apartments will be 150, of one, two, three, four and five rooms each.

Site Owned Since 1852.

The property on which the three Weber Memorial buildings are to be erected came into the possession of the Weber family back in 1852. It was then part of the Weber farm, miles out in the country in those pioneer days.

The memorial will be erected by the Weber Memorial Building corporation, of which Mr. Weber is president and principal stockholder.

Bids are now being taken and contracts are to be let in the near future, according to Mr. Ostergren. The entire group will be ready for occupancy early next spring.

WILL ERECT TALL FLAT BUILDING AT 1910 LUNT AV.

Edmond Grossman is the architect for a six story apartment building which the Forrester Building corporation will erect at 1910-12 Lunt avenue, a half block west of Sheridan road. The site measures 50x175 feet. The design will be an adaptation of the Gothic. The building is to contain fifteen apartments of three rooms, thirty-four of two rooms, and six of one room, all kitchenette, and will represent an investment of $400,000. Richard W. Forrester is president of the building corporation and the A. E. Pearson company is the contractor. Work will start shortly.

RUTH MANOR IS NEW APARTMENT IN WINTHROP AV.

A seven story building to contain sixty-five apartments of one, two and three rooms is to be erected at 5516-18 Winthrop avenue by the Ruth Manor Building corporation. A. E. Pearson is the president of the corporation. The structure was designed by Edmond Grossman and will be of Gothic architecture. The site of the building measures 50x150 feet. When completed the project will represent an investment of $425,000. The Chicago Trust company is underwriting a bond issue of $285,000 for ten years at six per cent on the improvement.

Brokers' Notes

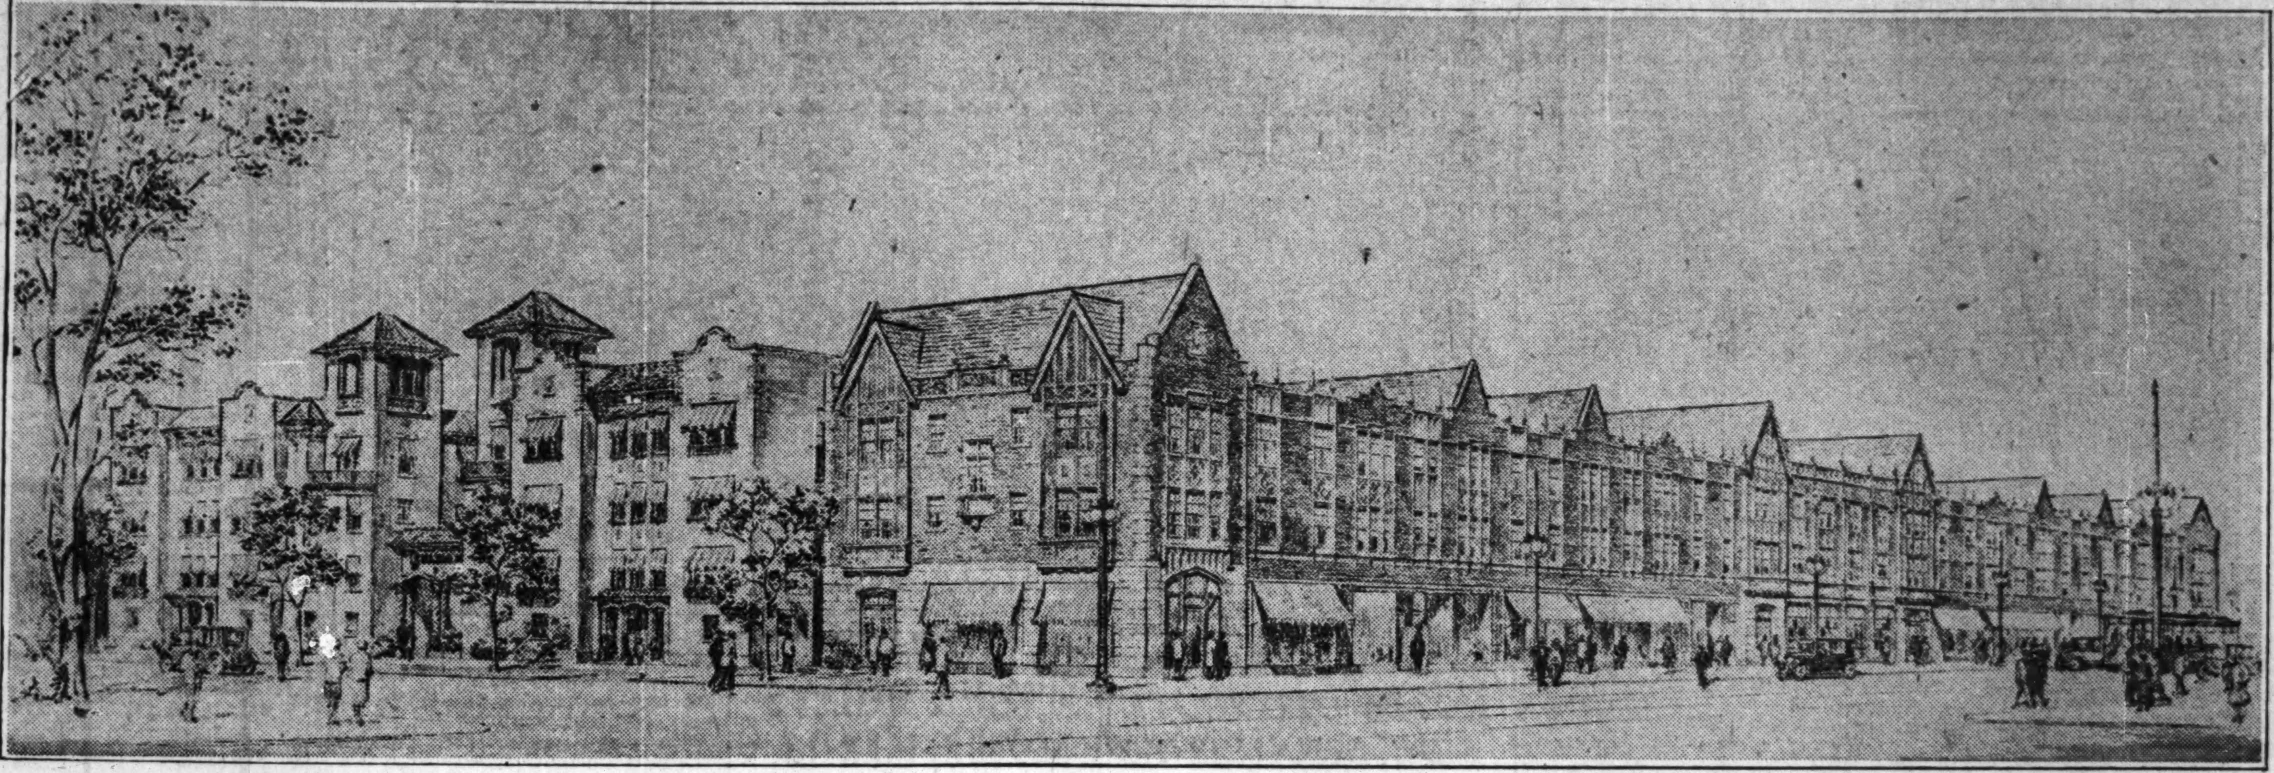
Miss Vera H. Finlay, formerly associated with Charles E. Finlay & Co. of New York City, in charge of their sales department, featuring houses and bungalows, is now associated with Aaron Bodenweiser and associates at 1537 Hyde Park boulevard. Miss Finlay will specialize in and have charge of the sales department, with houses and bungalows featured.

VERA H. FINLAY.

Snow Williams, formerly with McKey & Poague, is now in charge of the Rogers Park office of Liepold & Hicks at 1569 Howard street.

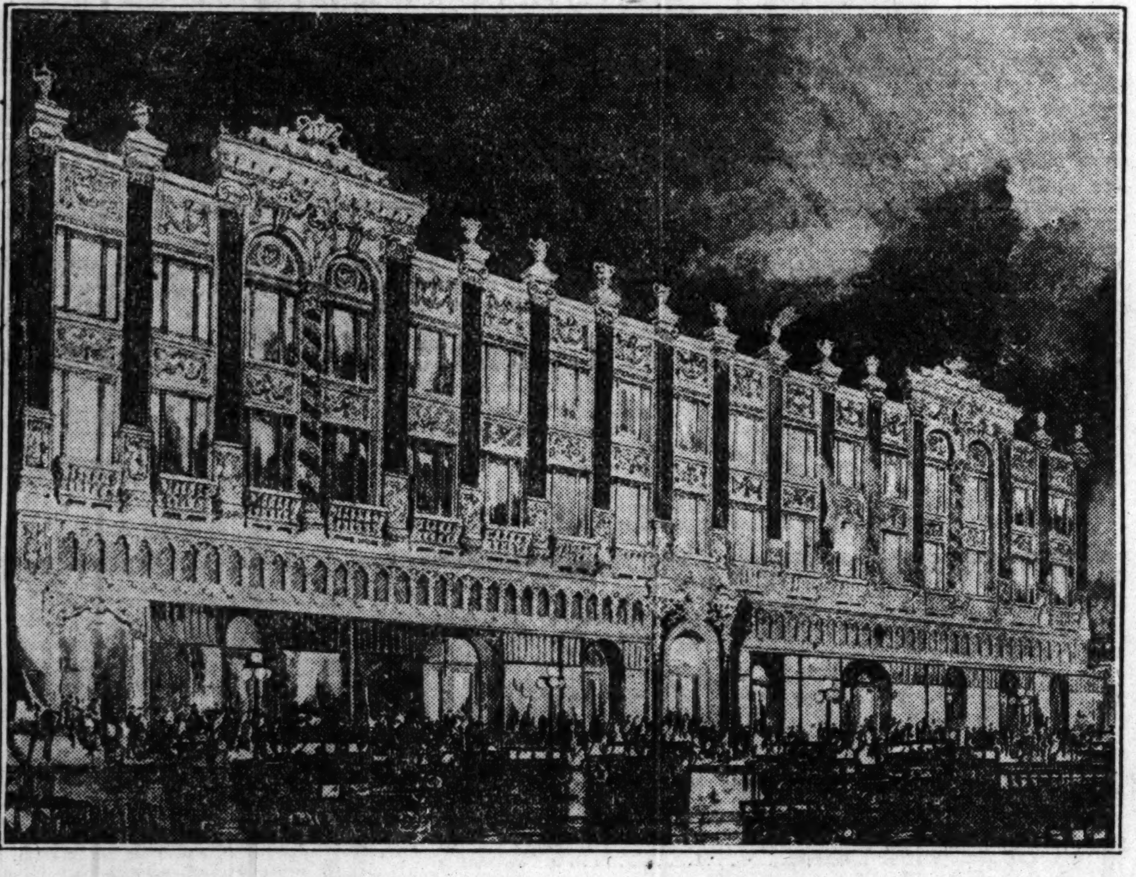
Lawrence P. Romano & Co. have opened a ground floor office at 712 West 63d street to handle the firm's Marquette Road Terrace properties. Clarence Du Val will be in charge of the office.

BROTHER AND SISTER PAY TRIBUTE TO PARENTS' MEMORY



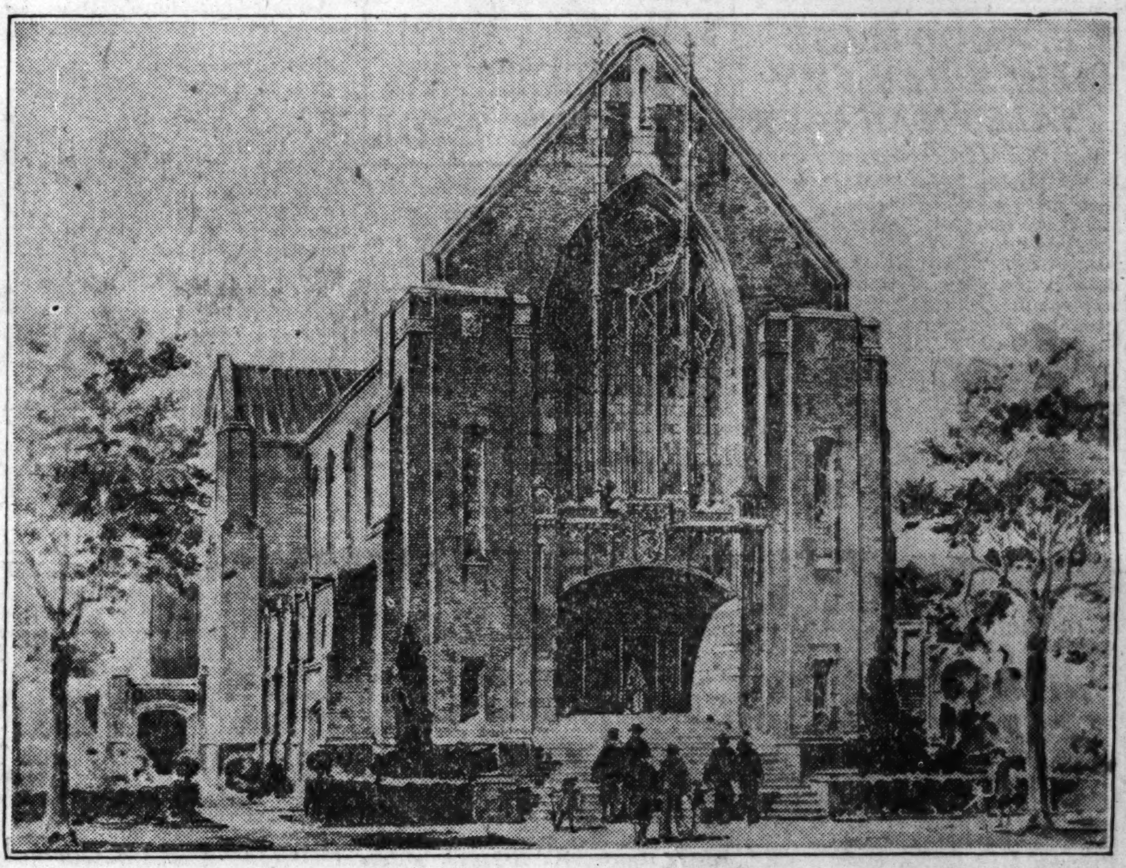
Robert C. Ostergren is architect of the above $1,500,000 Weber Memorial buildings to be erected by B. F. Weber, president of the National Brick company, and his sister on the west side of Clark, between Thome and Granville avenues, as told about in detail in an adjacent column. The business unit will be in the Tudor style, of brick, with half timbered effect, random slate roof, and will be fireproof. The two patio apartment units will be of Spanish design, with red tile roofs. B. C. Greengard made the rendering for Mr. Ostergren.

NEW BUILDING FOR BROADWAY



This is the $400,000 Uptown-Broadway building to be erected on the east side of Broadway, between Leland and Clifton, from plans by Walter W. Ahlschlager, architect. Samuel Klein and I. S. Stern are engineers. Charles Morgan made the rendering. Details are given in another column.

ANOTHER STROKE FOR GOOD



William H. Lautz designed the handsome new English Gothic structure which the Salem Evangelical church will erect at 6818-24 South Emerald avenue. The building will cost $125,000. The Rev. Joseph A. George is the pastor of the church. George Conner made the above rendering. Story on page 2.

Uptown to Get New $400,000 Business Block

Work is to start Aug. 1 on a $400,000 business building for the Wilson avenue district, to be known as the Uptown Broadway block. It's to be erected by the Uptown Broadway Building corporation, of which Arnold Schlachter and Edward P. Lundstrom are the principal stockholders.

It'll be on the east side of Broadway, extending from Leland to Clifton avenues, and will have a frontage of 164 feet on Broadway.

Plans by Walter W. Ahlschlager call for ten stores, with mezzanine floors, forty offices, half of which will be specially equipped for doctors and dentists. There's be a subfloor for a café and night club.

The entire front will be of black and polychrome terra cotta. This will be flood lighted. Completion is set for late fall. Baer, Eisendrath & Co. have underwriten a $250,000 serial loan on the project. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson were attorneys.

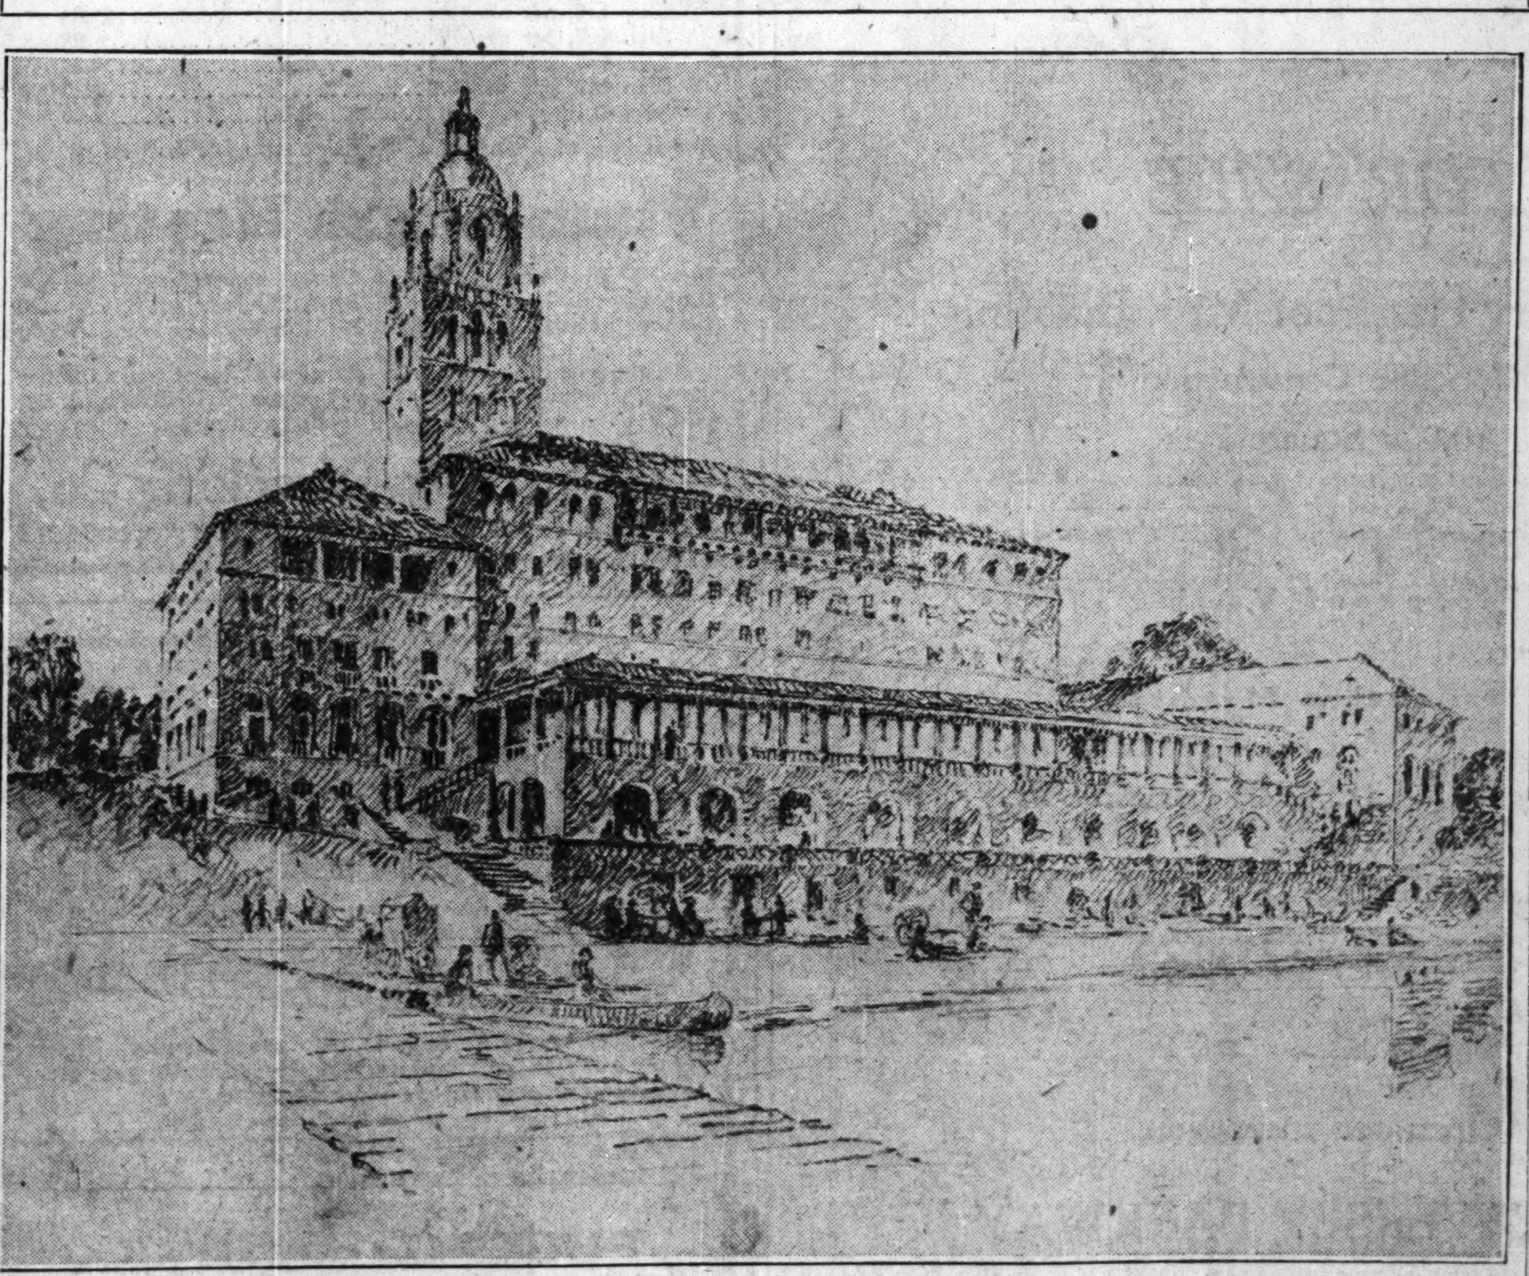
SYNDICATE BUYS 100,000 ACRES OF FLORIDA LAND

Arnold Joerns, president of the Arnold Joerns company, advertising, is head of a syndicate which has purchased 100,000 acres of agricultural land in Taylor county, Florida, including six miles of gulf frontage, from the Florida West Coast Development company, known as the Hoover interests, at a reported $3,500,000, or at the rate of $35 an acre.

BUYS TWELVE ACRE TRACT ON DEMPSTER ROAD

The Metropolitan Realty company has bought a twelve acre tract on Dempster road at Crawford, Niles Center, from Henrietta Fishleigh, for a reported $90,000, or $7,500 an acre. Albert Sabath and F. J. Wenigman were attorneys; O. J. Russell was broker.

"VISTA DEL LAGO"—A BIT O' SPAIN FROM CALIFORNIA



Thielbar & Fugard are the architects of the above Vista del Lago, $1,500,000 private shore club to be erected between Kenilworth and Wilmette, on the shore of Lake Michigan, by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton and a group of Hollywood folk and Chicago sportsmen. Work is to start at once and completion is set for August, 1927. The roof is to be of vivid crimson tiles made in California and the walls will be of equally brilliant yellows and browns.

Plan 196 Acre Subdivision in Glen View

One of the most attractive subdivision projects for the region north of uled for Glen View by Axel Lonnquist of the Lonnquist company, who yesterday purchased three tracts totaling 196 acres fronting on Colfax avenue, Central road, Waukegan road, Shermerville road and Harlem avenue.

AXEL LONNQUIST.

One unit, comprising 152 acres, will be subdivided in large lots, which will be sold to include memberships in the Glen Acres Golf club adjoining. Lots will be sold with extra stringent restrictions. Even the architecture of prospective residences must be O. K.d by the Lonnquist interests so that it won't strike a sour note in the general architectural scheme of the subdivision.

Mr. Lonnquist will lay out his Harlem Park subdivision, as he has christened it, with curving roads wherever possible. He intends extending Harlem avenue through the property 100 feet wide. Waukegan road, where it goes through his land, will be widened by him to eighty feet.

The property was bought from the Glen Acres interests and others for a reported $3,000 an acre. Paul C. Loeber & Co. were brokers in all purchases. All improvements are to be put in by Mr. Lonnquist.

$500,000 PAID FOR LAND UNDER CONGRESS HOTEL

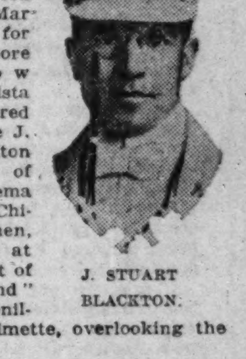
Part of the fee under the Congress hotel, comprising 62½ by 122 feet, was purchased yesterday by the Congress Hotel company from the heirs of Joseph H. Rice and Ignatz Friedman for a reported $500,000. The property is under a ninety-nine year lease dated May 1, 1892, at an annual rental of $18,000.

BLACKTON BUYS SITE JUST SOUTH OF KENILWORTH

Membership Open to Bobbed Sex.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Los Angeles' recent fad of "shore clubs," which we understand now total a dozen or more, seems to have hit Chicago with a bang. Last week the Casa del Mar was heralded for the south shore clubless. Now comes the Vista del Lago, fostered by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton and a group of Hollywood cinema interests and Chicago sportsmen, to be erected at once on the bit of "no man's land" between Kenilworth and Wilmette, overlooking the lake.



J. STUART BLACKTON.

Thielbar & Fugard, Chicago architects, have completed plans for a gorgeous hued piece of Spanish architecture, which will give a much needed splash of color to Chicago clubdom. Its vivid reds and yellows should make it one of the most outstanding features of the north shore.

Membership Open to Women.

Like the Southern California shore clubs, the $1,500,000 Vista del Lago (which you can guess, even if you don't speak Spanish, means "view of the lake") will have its membership rolls open both to women and men. If the wife decides to take out a membership in her name, however, friend husband doesn't need to join. He'll have all the privileges.

Now we'll stop for a minute and let Mr. Blackton's personal representative, who was seen at the Lake Shore Drive hotel yesterday, eating a chilled luncheon and wishing he were back in Hollywood, where, of course, the climate is always perfect, speak a word:

"In all the world there is no spot more beautiful," declared Commodore Blackton, as he surveyed from the Gage palisades the sweep of Lake Michigan and its silver sands, curving in from the north at the southern boundary of Kenilworth and riding out in an arc of sunshine and sparkling blue to the south—Wilmette and Evanston. "We shall build here the envy of Lido and the despair of Southern California and Florida."

Relayed Enthusiasm.

Let us hasten to add that Commodore Blackton didn't indulge in this outburst of enthusiasm yesterday. He's now in Los Angeles where Mr. Fugard is to join him next week and discuss the club plans. The former head and founder of Vitagraph Pictures corporation saw the shore site recently, however.

The site purchased by the commodore and his associates is fan shaped, with 500 feet of beach front and 363 feet frontage on Sheridan road.

The club house will contain 300 rooms and locker accommodations for 1,900 members.

Athletics for Whole Family.

"Especial attention will be paid to athletics both for men and women and the children," said the commodore again through his Chicago representative, who has his offices in the Rockefeller block, opposite the Drake. "The all year swimming pool, 100x50, will be under glass and set in a colonnade terrace. Children will have a separate pool. The gymnasium will include squash and handball courts. There also will be Turkish and Battle Creek health baths.

"Outdoor sports, in addition to beach bathing, will include badminton and tennis courts, a pitch and putt golf course and an all year clock putting green. In the winter a St. Moritz ice rink will be available for hockey and ice fiestas. The natural terrain lends itself to tobogganning and skiing. In short we shall have in Chicago that which soon will be a world famous resort with a hand picked patronage."

Wetten, Pegler & Dale represented the Blackton group in the property purchase deal with Jared, Leonard and Henry Gage. Attorney George Walter Johnson represented the latter.

CONTEMPLATES 8 STORY BUILDING ON IRVING PARK

An eight story building to cost $350,000 is contemplated for the northwest corner of Irving Park boulevard and North Paulina street following the purchase of the property there by the Nature's Rival company from Andrew Cuneo for a reported $52,000. The property has a frontage of 120 feet on Irving Park and 90 feet on Paulina. The Nature's Rival company now owns the entire frontage on Irving Park and Paulina street. They now have a three story building at the northeast corner of Irving Park and Hermitage. Naumann & Steuer were the brokers in the deal.

CALENDAR MAKER PLANS A $400,000 WEST SIDE PLANT

The John Baumgarth company, calendar makers, now at 1219 West Washington, bought the southeast corner of Lowell and Belmont, 519x209, from Edmund S. Graf for an indicated $121,000 and next summer will erect a $400,000 plant. No architect has been engaged.

CALM PREVAILS IN LABOR RANKS OVER COUNTRY

Few Minor Squalls Are Reported.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Here's some good news for the building workers of the nation, the general contractors and all those who are connected in some capacity with the building industry in general or with some kindred line of business. The good news for the building workers and building industry in general is embodied in a comprehensive survey of building conditions made by Frank Thayer, industrial expert, for the S. W. Straus & Co.

This survey sets forth that with construction conditions throughout the United States being maintained on a basis comparable to the record breaking strides of a year ago, labor in the building crafts is well employed and conditions generally are tranquil.

The Straus companys building survey avers that some readjustments of wage scales have been made, especially in the larger cities, even in the face of the fact that wage increases in a number of instances were granted June 1.

Disputes Mostly Settled.

Some of the salient points emphasized in the national building survey aver that:

Labor disputes that disturbed the industry early in the spring have mostly been settled without difficulties, although at the present time there is a sharp controversy arising between the plasterers and bricklayers over the erection of artificial stone, a field now being covered by the bricklayers in most cities.

The settlement of the controversy between sheetmetal workers and carpenters on the installation of metal trim was recently negotiated on a 50-50 basis by national representatives of both unions; this settlement is regarded by prominent contractors as one of the most important jurisdictional settlements in the last twenty-five years. It is conservatively estimated that during its six years existence fully $1,000,000,000, worth of construction has been held up by the dispute.

Shortage in Some Cities.

Builders in many of the larger cities report a shortage of bricklayers, plasterers and lathers, but the situation has not reached a stage where it has been necessary to pay bonuses as in former years.

Conditions are somewhat unsettled in San Francisco, Kansas City, and Cleveland. In San Francisco the turmoil is caused by the efforts of the International Union of Carpenters to unionize that craft along the Pacific coast.

In Cleveland, where there was considerable labor difficulty this spring, laborers have returned to work from a strike, but the dispute between employers and painters over pay increase demands has not been settled. There is also a slight disturbance reported among the union carpenters in Kansas City. This was created by a demand of the carpenters for a wage boost of 12½ cents an hour.

Decline in Chicago.

Chicago showed a decline in building during May and June, with the result that builders report a surplus of mechanics in several trades. It is reported, however, there is a shortage of plasterers, lathers, and bricklayers. Practically all disputes between building trades and employers have been settled up to date, but the controversy between the Chicago Building Trades council and employers to regain closed shop conditions for the thirteen so-called open shop trades remains unsettled.

Builders in New York report that labor is tranquil and that because of a continued demand for building construction labor is steadily employed. The scale for stone setters in New York is $14 a day, while the scale for other basis trades ranges from $11 to $14 a day.

In Philadelphia, contractors report there is a surplus of carpenters, plumbers, painters, stone workers, and cement finishers.

Boost in Philadelphia.

The carpenters' wage rate in Philadelphia was recently increased 12½ cents an hour. Boston builders report that cement finishers, who are asking for an increase of 12½ cents an hour on Sept. 1, are still on strike.

Builders in St. Paul report that open shop prevails there in the building industry and that the supply of labor is about equal to the demand. No wage increases are in prospect for fall months. St. Paul bricklayers get $1.25 an hour, labor is paid from 45 cents to 60 cents an hour, and carpenters from 87½ to 95 cents an hour.

Labor conditions in Florida are on a sound basis. In spite of a decided decrease in purely speculative real estate development building is continuing in substantial volume. There is now in Florida ample employment for the resident building trades workers.

Quiet in South.

Practically all southern cities report tranquil labor conditions in resident building industries. This is especially true in builders' reports from Atlanta, New Orleans, Houston, Savannah, and Dallas.

This year's building program in Cleveland is lagging behind that of last year. Builders there say there's last year.

Detroit, Grand Rapids, and other Michigan cities report tranquil labor conditions, builders there reporting a good supply of mechanics on hand.

This year's building program on the Pacific coast is keeping pace with that of last year. This claim is, based on reports from San Francisco, Seattle, and Los Angeles. San Francisco builders report that turmoil in the ranks of carpenters is causing surplus of mechanics in other trades.

Salem Evangelical Tells of Plans.

REV. JOSEPH A. GEORGE.

Another important church project is announced for the south side, where the Salem Evangelical church will build a handsome new home at 6818-24 South Emerald avenue. The church, for which William H. Lautz is the architect, is to be of English Gothic design.

The exterior is to be of gray face brick and Indiana limestone. An interesting detail will be the tracery windows which will be beautifully executed in stone.

The interior church walls will be of sand finish plaster with stone quoining. The ceiling is to be finished in dark wood. The main auditorium will seat 600. In the basement there are to be an auditorium seating 500, a recreation room, and a well equipped stage.

The new church is to cost the congregation $125,000. It's to be joined to the present Bible school hall and parish house which have been used as the main place of meeting. With the completion of its new home, the church will have property valued at $200,000. Besides the previously mentioned departments there are to be a gymnasium, the pastor's apartment, and a sexton's apartment.

The store and office building at 938 Belmont was sold by Nick Trakas to Mrs. Josephine Kostichek for a reported $125,000, subject to $81,500, through Krenn & Dato.

JOSEPH B. HALL NEW OFFICER IN MORTGAGE COMPANY

JOSEPH B. HALL.
[Walinger Photo.]

The Hamilton Bond and Mortgage company, an Illinois corporation, yesterday announced the taking over of the business of the former partnership of the same name. Expansion of the business and the bringing in of new interests is the chief reason given for the change. The new corporation is headed by Frank H. Anderson who was general partner of the predecessor company.

Joseph B. Hall, who has been in charge of appraisal and taxation work for Gordon Strong & Co., was made vice president, in charge of loans. Other officers are James O. McKinsey, chairman of the board; Orion A. Mather, treasurer, and Elmer D. Bushnell, secretary.

the city, having been founded in the year 1862. It was first located at Archer avenue and 21st street and later moved to 23d and Wentworth. In 1881 Salem church moved to 25th street, near Wentworth avenue. In 1910, because of the change in the character of the neighborhood, the congregation purchased its present site in Emerald avenue, in Englewood. A small frame chapel was erected in 1915, but it only lasted five years, being torn down in 1920 to make room for the present Bible school hall.

The Rev. Carl Krafft served Salem church, which is a member of the Evangelical synod of North America, from 1888 to 1911, being one of the most noted pastors of his day in the city. Then followed the Rev. H. H. Fleer, who served from 1911 to 1915. The present pastor, the Rev. Joseph A. George, has been with the church since 1915. It was under his leadership that the great strides permitting the present development were made.

Great credit in the campaign resulting in the new structure is given to Ernest J. Magerstadt, who served as chairman of the finance committee and who was the right hand man of the pastor in the building drive. William F. Bazner, president of the Bazner Press, 621 Plymouth court, is chairman of the building committee, and together with his colleagues will supervise the construction.

The congregation hopes to have the new home completed in time for the Easter services next year.

UNITE TO HELP INDUSTRY GET FACTORY LOANS

Bankers and Realtors to End Obstacles.

A movement is now under way to make it more easy to secure loans from mortgage bankers on Chicago industrial real estate. In the past the bankers have been loath to make loans on this type of property for a variety of reasons, thus, in a measure, putting up a serious obstacle to the growth of Dad Dearborn in an industrial way.

LOUIS B. BEARDSLEE.

Recently, however, there have been a number of meetings between members of the industrial section of the Chicago real estate board and the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association to find a way to overcome this situation. And from all indications it seems as if this department of the real estate field is to have new life put into it.

Edgar N. Greenebaum, vice president of Greenebaum Sons' Investment company and president of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association, gives some of the objections of the bankers in former years to industrial property loans.

Explains Difficulties.

"The chief difficulty in the way of borrowing on factory buildings," Mr. Greenebaum said, "is in the fact that investors who purchase real estate securities underwritten by the various banks and mortgage bankers have shown a decided preference to bonds secured by office buildings, apartments, etc., rather than those secured by factory buildings.

"And the reason for this is easy to understand. Office buildings and apartment houses are elastic in the uses that may be put to them, while an industrial building is erected for a certain purpose and oftentimes it would be difficult to use it for any other than the original plan.

"But with a sound business, well managed, in a type of building that could be easily converted to another line of endeavor, a loan on an industrial structure should be just as secure as on any other type.

"The borrowing corporation must have a good record of earnings. The income of the apartment building pays the loans, while in loans on industrial property the interest and principal are paid from the earnings of the corporation.

Offers Coöperation.

In a recent letter to Mr. Greenebaum, as president of the Mortgage Bankers, signed by Louis B. Beardslee, members of the industrial division of the Chicago Real Estate board, experts on industrial property, stated, in part:

"Often loans of a very deserving character are not given proper consideration, but if the financial institutions were in a better position to judge the true, sound security of properties applying for loans, a betterment of the condition might be brought about.

"With this thought in mind, the members of the industrial division will gladly lend themselves and their specialized knowledge to being of practical assistance in this direction.

"We all feel that industrial Chicago is in need of the help and coöperation of mortgage bankers to assist in the development and proper expansion of industrial facilities. With such development Chicago will continue to progress and help to develop all other branches of commercial activity."

HERE'S NEW CLUB WITH DOBBIN AS BIG ATTRACTION

To Be Located Near Palos Park.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Departing from custom, this week's country club announcement comes in on a horse instead of flying in on a golf club in the manner of a witch on a broom, as most stories announcing new sport associations outside the walls of the city, traffic ones of course, have done in the last few months.

It was getting so that the real estate department typewriter believed that the inhabitants of the city found their only pleasure in spending the day hunting little white spheres in weeds and underbrush and whacking mosquitos.

But here is an announcement of a club where the horse will be king, with golf as more of a hanger on. The name has a pleasant sound, Hurlingham Fields Country club. And Hurlingham, it is remembered, is the name of a famous club in England that turns out polo players for Americans to whip in international matches.

Outside of Palos Park.

The new club will be located at Kean avenue and 131st street, near Palos Park, which is said to be about an hour from the loop and less than half an hour from the south and southwest centers. The plans of the backers call for a number of buildings which, with the grounds, will represent an investment of more than $1,000,000."

The club's property comprises 275 acres and it adjoins 10,000 acres of forest preserve, with the latter's miles of winding bridle paths. Here is what the club is to have: A polo field, tanbark rings, hurdles, and bridle paths for riders, tennis courts, a swimming pool, and shooting traps. And, O, yes, there are to be two golf courses. The two courses ought to keep quite a fair section of the city poking around through the grass for the aforementioned little white spheres.

The club buildings are to be of the early American type of architecture and will be constructed of brick painted white, with red tile roofs. Rebori, Wentworth, Dewey, and McCormick are the architects.

A Stately Clubhouse.

The main clubhouse is to be of two stories and it will resemble one of the stately homes of the eighteenth century, with tall pillars rising from the flagged veranda. Close by is to be a clubhouse for men only. Then there is to be a swimming pool and bathhouse, which will harmonize with the general architectural scheme.

The stables will be beyond the polo field and they will be in harmony with the English idea of barns. They will take care of the polo ponies and riding horses owned by both the club and the members. A capacity of 120 quadrupeds is planned. There is to be a promenade around the tack room and stalls which will allow an inspection of the horses, trophies, and trappings.

Pay $1,200 an Acre.

The club's land was purchased from John and Margaret McCord at a reported rate of $1,200 an acre, the total amount being approximately $338,000. Flagg & Co. were brokers. The legal details were handled by Walter C. Senne of Kirkland, Patterson & Fleming. Harold G. Townsend acted for the club and MacLean & Co. have been retained as fiscal agents. Business offices have been established in suite 1200, 6 North Michigan avenue.

Among those who are interested in the development of Hurlingham Fields Country club are Grover Ellis, former president of the Equestrian Society of Cook County; John A. Carroll, president of the Hyde Park State bank; M. J. Flynn, president of the Inland Rubber company; Dr. W. F. Dickson, John Bain, Walter Butler, Leander J. McCormick, John Wentworth, D. B. Silbermann, president of the Dexter park polo team; Harold G. Townsend of the Chicago Trust company, and Perry Bland, business manager. The membership is limited.

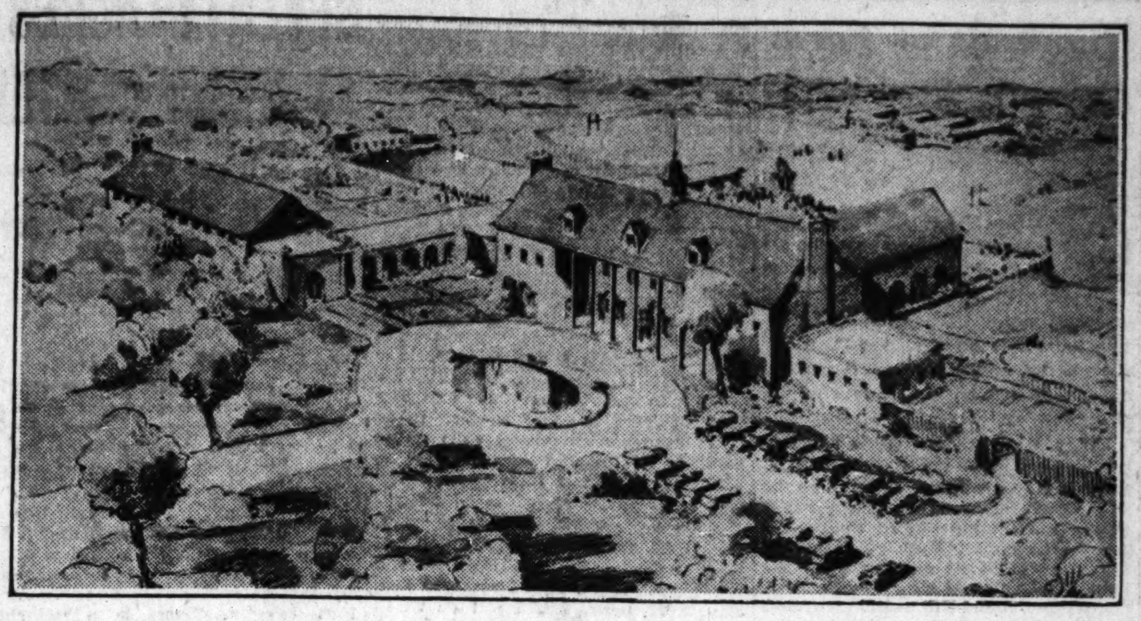
THUNDERING HOOFS AND FLYING MANE



Above is the new Hurlingham Fields Country club, where the good old horse will be the pride and joy of the members. A polo field, hurdles, and bridle paths will do their part in lending zest to the real sport of riding. However, there will be two golf courses and other attractions for those who would enjoy themselves in a safer manner. Rebori, Wentworth, Dewey & McCormick are the architects who planned the buildings for Hurlingham, which will be located near Palos Park and its great forest preserves.

MOST people live in rented apartments for two reasons: one of which is, to escape the cares and responsibilities of home ownership. They will admit that the neighbors are not entirely to their liking; that the conveniences are not exactly what they should be; that the house servants often are discourteous, and that the rent is pretty high — and going still higher.

Apartment Renting vs. Apartment Ownership

But what is to be done? Where can one find relief from such conditions without having the annoyances that go with ownership of an individual home?

The new 100% co-operative apartment at 1320 North State Street is the solution. Here, as a tenant-owner, you will enjoy all of the charms and comforts of residence in the finest apartment house that skill and money can build. You can select your own neighbors; you can be surrounded by every comfort and convenience known to the building world; you can enjoy service that strives for perfection — and all at a low, fixed cost that eliminates the landlord's profit forever.

May we tell you the rest of the story of 1320 North State Street?

FARM AND GARDEN

Best Varieties of Popcorn Flourish in Platte Valley

Producers' Festival Is Scheduled to Be Held in September.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

NORTH LOUP, Neb. — [Special Correspondence.] — If Nebraska popcorn growers here in the Platte and Myra valleys were to pop all of their corn before sending it to market it would take approximately 200 trains, with each locomotive pulling 50 cars, to haul the crop. More than 15,000 acres of popcorn are being grown this season in four central Nebraska counties.

On Sept. 28 and 29 producers will hold their twenty-fifth popcorn festival, celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of the great popcorn industry which was started when George Smith grew the first big field on his farm at the edge of North Loup, for many years the largest popcorn center in the world. During the festival, which was attended last year by more than 27,000 people from all parts of the country, a ton and a half of shelled popcorn is popped and served in galvanized watering tanks that hold eight to ten barrels each. By the end of the second day the streets and sidewalks are paved with a thick white layer of popcorn.

Popcorn growing is a man's job in Valley, Sherman, Greeley, and Garfield counties. It is common to see fields of from 50 to 250 acres each, yielding an average of more than 2,500 pounds of ear popcorn to the acre. Occasionally the yields run up to 4,000 pounds to the acre.

Facts About the Trade.

Pop corn is handled with the same tools and the same methods of cultivation that are used in the growing of ordinary field corn. The costs of growing the crop up to harvest time are about the same as for Indian corn. Much of the popcorn crop is listed—the grains are drilled in furrows where the roots are constantly kept in contact with moist soil, even in dry weather, which is common in this part of the country. The rows are 3 ft. 6 in. apart, with the stalks standing not more than 8 or 10 in. apart within the row. Close planting is a trick of the trade; growers have learned that if the stalks stand too far apart they stool out like wheat and many suckers will spring up and produce uneven sized ears with kernels that pop unevenly.

The season for this crop is short. It is planted about the same time field corn is put in, usually from May 1 to June 1, and even up to the last week in June, but it matures early. Several varities are used, including Queen's Golden, yellow; Japanese Hulless, that sells under the trade name of Baby Rice; Amber Rice; Golden Gate, a type of Japanese rice; White Rice, and Old Standby. Baby Rice is the popular white variety and sells at top price.

Most of the corn was formerly grown under contract, but today the growers take their chances on selling the crop at a fair price at harvest time or during the following winter and spring. During the last three or four years popcorn growers have sold their crop at prices ranging from $2 to $7 a hundred pounds. Last year's crop sold for $2 to $2.50 a hundred. Many farmers are still holding thousands of pounds of the 1925 crop in cribs on their farms.

Nebraska Yields Best Crop.

From the big popcorn house at Ord, Neb., a few miles up the valley, more than 200 carloads, averaging 70,000 pounds of shelled popcorn each, have been shipped out since last fall, and there are still about 3,000,000 pounds held in the house. It is cured in big cribs before it is shelled.

At times this section produces more than fifty per cent of all the popcorn grown in the United States. The popcorn of this district is particularly valuable, according to J. A. Manchester, a vegetable grower and popcorn dealer, because it can be taken directly from the field and popped. The dry climate and favorable fall weather make it possible for the corn to mature early and thoroughly. The entire crop goes through the natural curing processes and is ready to pop by Christmas, while in other sections, Mr. Manchester says, the corn is often not properly cured for popping until the middle of the summer following the season in which it is grown.

This is important from the marketing standpoint. Buyers of popcorn would rather have corn from the new crop than to take old corn left over from the previous season. This factor has, perhaps, had more to do with the successful development of the popcorn industry along the Platte river and Myra creek than any other. The ideal moisture content of popcorn is about 10 to 12 per cent. The kernel increases in size from about 17 to 24 times, so that a bushel of shelled popcorn will make about 20 bushels when it is popped.

Picking Machines Lessen Work.

Much of the popcorn crop is now harvested by mechanical pickers drawn by a team or a tractor. One of these pickers will gather about 15,000 pounds a day, while a man is doing a big day's work when he picks 1,500 to 2,000 pounds by hand. Operators of mechanical pickers get 30 cents a hundred and hand pickers get 25 cents a hundred. R. D. Imbody, a grower, estimates that it costs about $10 an acre to pick popcorn.

The grower's gross income from an acre of popcorn is from $50 to $75, when corn sells at $2.50 a hundred, as much of it did last fall. In extreme cases they get more than $200 an acre. The wheat farmer considers that he is making big profit when he has a gross return of $50 an acre. Arthur Meyers, one of the biggest growers along the popcorn trail, sold his 1924 crop for about $27,000.

Marketed from Chicago.

Popcorn is shelled here at North Loup and Ord, the two big shipping centers, and shipped to Chicago, where it is cleaned, regraded, and put in bags and boxes for the retail market. The cobs are sold locally for fuel at ten cents a hundred. About one-fourth of the weight of ear popcorn is cobs, so that of each ton of ear corn brought in from the field, 250 pounds are cobs.

Sweet corn also is grown here near North Loup and Ord. About 100 carloads of sweet corn are produced annually and sold at from $2.50 to $4 a hundred for seed. The seed is used extensively in Canada and in the southern states. Most of the sweet corn is grown under contract. North Loup is one of the biggest seed sweet corn shipping centers of the country. Farmers in this section usually grow all three kinds of corn, including sweet, popcorn, and field corn.

A section near Odebolt, Ia., is now being developed as another big popcorn growing center in this part of the country.

Hundreds of Farm Laborers Seek Work in Western Towns

OMAHA, Neb.—[Special Correspondence.]—Farm machinery that does the work of an army of men and poor small grain crops in many sections have driven hundreds of laborers off the farm and thrown them into the small towns and cities to walk the streets looking for jobs.

Every time the telephone rings in Ben Short's labor office here in Omaha's city hall from twenty-five to seventy-five men and women six days in the week jump out of their seats and scramble for first place at the door, hoping some one is asking for help. "Nothing doing, boys," is the answer Ben Short has had to give them thousands of times during the last few months.

"I haven't had a single call for a harvest hand all summer, and I usually have from 10 to 75 a day at this season of the year," said Mr. Short. "I haven't had more than a dozen calls for men to work on the farm by the month. That's unusual. Conditions haven't been that way for years, although it has been tough sledding for the laborer for a year and a half here in this part of the country."

"No Help Needed."

"No help needed" signs have been put in the windows of business houses all over Omaha. Laborers think they are lucky if they get a job that lasts a month, he says.

A hundred and seventy-five men have applied for jobs in the last few weeks at the Hastings, Neb., headquarters of a bus line with a system of 300 miles of highways crossing the dry stricken area of south central Nebraska. There is another bus line in the same territory covering a system of 100 miles that has had more than a hundred applicants for jobs within the last month. Many of these men are from the farms.

Poor crops are not the only thing that is driving workers off the farm; machinery is playing a big part. Twenty-seven farmers in a single neighborhood in west central Iowa bought two row cultivators this spring. By plowing two rows, each farmer is now doing the work of two men, so that today twenty-seven fewer men are needed to cultivate the corn on these Iowa farms.

The combination thrasher is eliminating an army of harvesters wherever it is used, and hundreds of them are being operated in the small grain belt.

Eliminating Man Power.

Robert Freeman, a grain grower near Fremont, Neb., is running his combination harvester with three men, cutting, thrashing and spreading the straw back on to the land all in one operation. With two men he operates the machine and uses the third man to haul the grain to an elevator three miles away. Last year, with ordinary harvesting machinery, he worked a gang of about fifteen men to do the same work. He harvests the grain and puts it in the elevator at a cost of 3½ to 4½ cents a bushel, while before he estimates that his costs were roughly $7 to $8 an acre. He turns out about 700 bushels a day with the combination harvester in a field yielding about 43 bushels to the acre.

Up in the popcorn belt the mechanical picker does the work of ten men, and the other nine men have to get out and find work.

Many gangs of harvest hands go from one district to another in their automobiles, making competition keener for the local laborers.

Cropping systems are being changed throughout this part of the country, making it possible for farmers to grow a greater variety of crops and spread their labor out over the season so they can avoid hiring extra help during the busy months in the summer. Breaking up the big ranches into smaller tracts of land has resulted in neighboring farmers trading work more and more here as they do in Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and other older farming states.

Women Vie with Men.

Mr. Short says that in towns women have become competitors with men, especially since the war. Many women and girls, for example, are operating elevators formerly run by men and boys. It is common, he says, for women to come to his office and hire girls at from $5 to $6 a week to do their housework while they go into business houses and work for $12 to $15 a week rather than do it themselves.

A woman came into Mr. Short's office while I was there asking for a man and woman to do work around her home. She said, "I came to you, Mr. Short, because if I put an ad in the newspapers here where there are so many looking for work I'd have to ask the police to come and guard my home while I received applicants."

"The thing we need more than anything else in this part of the country is the development of manufacturing plants that will furnish work for our men. We often have young farmers coming in here looking for work, especially in the fall and winter, when there is little to do on the farm. Instead of sending cowhides back east to be made into shoes to be sent back here to be worn, perhaps by the man who raised the cow, we ought to make our own cowhides into shoes in our own factories. We need factories to keep our men and women busy throughout the year."

BUYS TRACT OF SEVENTY ACRES AT NILES CENTER

Price Reported to Have Been $500,000.

One of the most important deals of the year in the Niles Center district has just been closed by Eugene L. Swenson of Swenson Brothers, who has purchased seventy acres for a price said to be in the neighborhood of $500,000.

The tract is on the dividing line of Niles Center and Evanston and it includes all the McCormick boulevard frontage from Lyons to Emerson streets, extending west to Central Park avenue. There is a detached twenty acres on Church street extending four blocks west to Central Park avenue.

This property was purchased from John Emerson and Richard M. Savage, a portion of it being acquired from the Emerson family from the United States government in the year 1842 at the rate of $1.50 an acre.

Will Be Restricted.

The new area will be known as Evanston Manor and will be restricted to high class apartment dwellings in some sections and to single family dwellings to cost not less than $12,000 in others.

Prussing & Co. were the brokers. Ernest E. Ellington of Swenson Brothers represented Mr. Swenson.

Henry A. Bjork, cartage contractor with the Foley Construction company of Evanston, has purchased twelve acres in the village of Wheeling from Edward C. Hoyer & Co., for a reported price of $25,000. The property has a frontage of 700 feet on Milwaukee avenue, running east to the Des Plaines river.

A. H. Hedley sold to Dr. Reich a tract of eighty-seven acres north of Libertyville, on route 21, and about a mile this side of Grays Lake. The price was a reported $56,000 and the purchase was made for speculation. Sellers & Petersen of Libertyville were the brokers.

In I. C. District.

Henry Rindsberger, has just purchased two tracts of land aggregating twelve acres in the Illinois Central electrification district from Mathilda Campe for an undisclosed consideration. One piece of property lies at the section line corner of Sauk trail and Crawford avenue. The other has a frontage of 736 feet in Crawford avenue, lying south of the right of way of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois.

Frank Hunte is the head of a syndicate which bought a 138 acre wooded tract lying east of Crete and adjoining the new Lincolnshire Country club. It is reported that the price is $1,000 an acre. Cowing Bros. were brokers.

SEAT
WASHER

Are your faucets "all wet?"

LEAKING, dripping faucets are discouraging things to cope with. They always get worse—never better. The only cure is to "have them out" and put in better ones next time.

Chicago Faucets give complete and permanent satisfaction because no leak need ever be tolerated more than a minute or two, and they never have to be replaced. You can count on them to outlast the building.

The construction of the valve in Chicago Faucets is radically different from all others. A standardized renewable working unit contains all wearing parts and can be changed as quickly and easily as an electric bulb.

In a few minutes, for a few cents, either washer or seat can be replaced, making the faucet as good as new. There is no other wear and, for this reason, Chicago Faucets will last indefinitely.

You can get them from your plumber or get in touch with us direct by calling, writing or telephoning

HERE'S A HOUSE FOR NEWLYWEDS WITH LEAN PURSE

Arranged with a Room or Two for Renting.

> Are you interested in home plans? "Small Homes" plan books may be purchased for ten cents at the Public Service office of The Tribune, 11 South Dearborn street, and in the branch in the lobby of The Tribune Tower. They will be sent out by mail on receipt of thirteen cents in coin or stamps.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Here is a house which contains in its interior planning a number of extremely practical features for the young couple who are contemplating the building of their own home.

It is in the English style, of brick with asbestos shingle roof. Willard C. Walker, 58 East Washington street, Chicago, is the architect.

Probably no style in architecture, the Colonial excepted, is as near the average American's spirit and needs as the English. Which accounts no doubt for the amazing vogue it has enjoyed in the last decade, and for the fact that its popularity is increasing yearly.

Few young people start to build a house without wondering, in their hearts, just how successfully they are going to finance it, and whether or not they can really swing its complete payment and upkeep. If everything goes well they know they can manage, but if—and there is so often that nagging little "but if" in the back of their minds.

Another Provision Made.

For this reason, besides the limiting the cost of the house to what seems in logical accordance with their income and assets, there is another provision which is sometimes made. And one which has, in many an instance, saved the home, tided over temporary embarrassment, and without too much straining of effort on the part of those most vitally concerned.

This provision is in the sufficient detachment of one or more rooms, which can, if it is found to be necessary, help pay for themselves and for some of the rest of the house besides. Renting out one or two rooms for a year or so—and it is usually the first two years of home paying which are the hardest, owing to the rate of interest on the mortgages and the additional improvements made on the interior—is often a simple way of adding to family budget.

In this home, which contains on its first floor a sleeping suite of two bedrooms and bath, and on the second floor a suite of almost precisely the same size, practical possibilities are offered for just such an arrangement as this. Whether or not such an expedient has to be resorted to, the fact that one can do so, is a comfort. A kind of cashable insurance against the hazards of uncertain fortune which many young couples are forced to face unexpectedly in their first years of married life.

Serves Families' Needs.

Furthermore, a plan like this, with the bedroom suites divided between two floors, fits into the needs of many families who never need to consider the possibility of renting a room or two to help out. Where there are older people in the family, the division of bedrooms is a comfortable arrangement. Or again, if a maid were kept, the back bedroom could be hers, and the one opening on to the terrace, which is one of the most pleasant in this house, converted into a library or study.

Another practical feature of this plan is in the long, graceful, narrow home which it achieves; one which can be placed on a narrow frontage, if economy of land is to be considered.

The entry hall, which has a composition floor at once resilient, non slippery, easy to keep clean and extremely durable, avoids the rather common fault of being too close to the bedrooms and bath. It is large enough besides to seat a casual caller on business bent, and is but a step from the service quarters so that the housewife or the maid can answer the front door bell without intruding on any other room.

Beyond the living room, which is a story and a half in height, is the enclosed porch opening on to a terrace. This combination of porch and open terrace is always delightful for the maximum quantity of fresh air and sunlight which it affords.

The dining room has a rounded window seat and opens in to the front entry, the back central hall of the house and into the kitchen. No room has to be passed through to reach it and it is completely detached from the living and sleeping quarters.

The kitchen would meet in all ways the demands of the national kitchen contest of the better homes in America movement, which laid stress on three points—general equipment, size, and labor arrangement. With its outside exposure on two sides, and painted in some of the prevailing cheerful combinations such as green and ivory, saffron and white, blue with gray or brown with ochre, it would easily become one of the most attractive spots in the house.

Floors of Oak.

In the architect's plan the floors of the house are to be of oak. Good floors cost good money, and cheaper, just as good substitutes in the end often cost a good deal more, to say nothing of the worry and trouble endured in their repairing.

For the average small house wood floors are best suited and most used. Their virtues are quite unparalleled, all things considered. Of course, if the house is emphatically in the Spanish or Italian spirit, tile or concrete or slate or composition can be used.

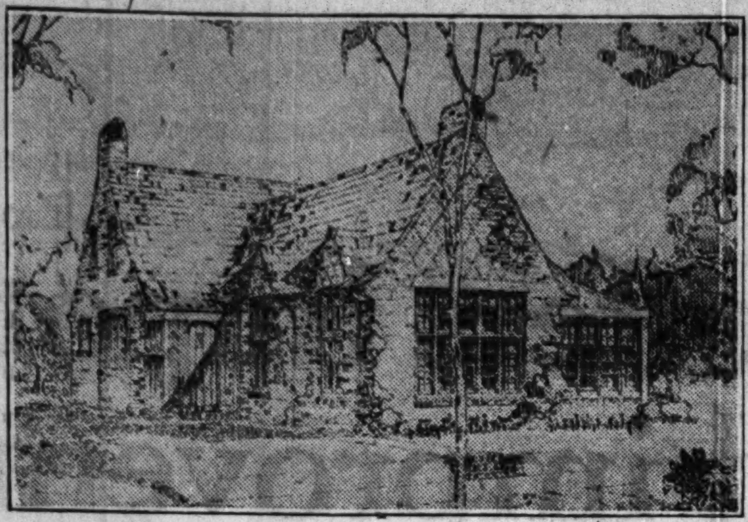
Otherwise oak, maple, beech, or hard pine are to be preferred. Quarter sawed oak is preferred by many, but now, with the vogue for red oak or white, these are often laid.

Both bedrooms on the second floor are comfortably sized, with windows on two sides, ample closet room, and a generous bath, with an outside window which can be reached without stretching over a tub or lavatory.

A minimum amount of space has been utilized for the stairs in the house, and the halls are all compact and small.

The house can be built on a forty foot lot, and the general cost, as estimated in Chicago territory and at present prevailing prices, is between $12,000 and $13,000.

SERVES THE PRACTICAL



Here a graciously inviting English home of brick, with its seven rooms and two baths, possesses a number of practical features which will interest the man and woman of moderate means who are just starting out in the serious business of home owning. Willard C. Walker, architect.

F. E. DAVIDSON IS PIONEER IN HIDING TANKS IN TOWERS

F. E. Davidson, former president of the Illinois Society of Architects, calls attention to the fact that he was the architect of the office and factory of J. C. Deagan, Inc., at Berteau and Ravenswood avenues, the water tank tower of which was pictured in this section last Sunday. Another architect was mentioned at the time. It seems that his connection with the building was merely that of making alterations for the Deagan concern.

F. E. DAVIDSON. [Moffett Photo.]

"I'd been trying for years to get owners to put their water tanks in ornamental towers," said Mr. Davidson, "and this was the first success I'd had. I designed it for the Progress company, which later failed. Then the Deagan concern bought it and is still owner.

"It was erected in the early spring of 1910, so you can see it was one of the pioneers in the movement to hide the unsightly roof tank."

CO-OP FLATS ARE RESOLD AT 100 PER CENT RISE

Henry K. Holsman Tells of Profits.

One seldom hears any other data about the coöperative apartment than the report of the site purchase or the announcement of the first steps in the organization of the company to build it. For that reason it's interesting to hear a little about resales from Henry K. Holsman, former president of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, who for several years has been active in designing high class fireproof coöperative apartment projects.

HENRY K. HOLSMAN.

"There were five resales in the last year of apartments," said Mr. Holsman, "at advances in price of from 80 to 100 per cent.

"For instance, Arthur B. Cody of the Chicago Trust company bought a flat at the southeast corner of 56th and University on our usual terms of cost plus 10 per cent. This was in December, 1924. The price was $3,292 and a mortgage he assumed, on which he paid $25 a month. On May 1 of this year he sold it for $6,750.

"Prof. Arthur Compton of the University of Chicago bought an apartment for approximately $3,000, assumed a mortgage, and has recently sold it for $6,600."

Another one of Mr. Holsman's buildings is the Rainbow Park apartments, at 7855 South Shore drive.

DIVERSEY-CRAWFORD LEASE.

Thomas M. White has leased the garage and oil station at the northeast corner of Diversey and Crawford for twelve years to Leroy and Albert Hodes at a term rental of $69,600. A. T. Hanley, of E. N. Duerlein & Co., was broker.

ADDRESS S P 596, TRIBUNE

—"beautiful as the day you moved in"

"How long have you lived here, now? Six years! It doesn't seem possible. Your home looks as beautiful as the day you moved in. I don't know how you do it!"

Do you know how to do it? The formula is very simple—Better Plastering on metal lath. If you will stop to think that plaster represents 85% of the visible interior of your home, you can readily appreciate that the plastering job can either keep a house new or make it grow old, years before its time.

How often have you entered a home which is only a year or two old, to find the walls cracked, soot marks along the cracks, streaked and discolored ceilings! These are almost sure signs of a CHEAP plastering job. The owner or builder saved a trifle by skimping the job, but the results scarcely justify that false economy.

When building your home, make certain that the plastering is right. Budget 10% or 12% for Better Plastering, and ask the Better Plastering Contractors, listed below, to quote on the job. The results you will obtain will be a constant source of delight to you and your friends.

Ask for a copy of "Better Plastering in Modern Homes." Every prospective home owner should have this booklet.

TEST IT !

Beaver Bestwall offers important plaster wall board improvements

For Repairs and Remodeling

For
New Construction

—Costs no more than others

THIS "Strength" Test, made with common bricks, is only one of several practical home tests by which any man can prove to himself the amazing service offered by this improved plaster wall board—Beaver Bestwall.

Before you lay out money for any plaster wall board, whether for new construction, remodeling or repairs, study the tests shown. Get samples of genuine Beaver Bestwall, if you like, and test them. Make comparisons. Don't buy on traditions or mere belief. Get the facts.

What makes it superior?

Plaster wall board gets its serviceability from two sources: (1) the quality of the plaster core; (2) the toughness and strength of the facing or binder.

In Beaver Bestwall the plaster core is made of finest quality gypsum rock from Beaver mines. It is an extra fine, extra well set rock plaster.

Then Beaver Bestwall is finished with a new, improved fibre facing of remarkable toughness.

This improved, exclusive facing is made in Beaver mills—where fibre products have been made for nearly a quarter of a century. It greatly increases the strength and flexibility of the rock plaster center. Make the "Strength Test" and prove it. Consider also the exhaustive laboratory tests made by our experts.

Other desirable advantages

Another advantage of the improved fibre facing of Beaver Bestwall is its susceptibility to artistic decoration. This smooth, hard, fibre surface promotes charming effects.

Get a sample of Bestwall and make the "Surface Test." Note how the hard fibre surface resists rubbing—does not become woolly.

Now make the "Water Glass Test." Note how Beaver Bestwall does not absorb moisture.

Now make the "Paint Test." This improved surface takes any paint perfectly! Calcimine or oil tinting colors dry smoothly—give richest color effects.

Note, too, that the fibre surface of Beaver Bestwall does not "drink up" paint. A little goes a long, long way. On any job there is a noticeable saving in both labor cost and materials.

Make the "Redecoration Test." Note how wall paper may be removed without damage to the surface of Beaver Bestwall. This means that you can redecorate when desired—a most practical feature.

At no greater cost

These are some of the specific advantages offered by this improved plaster wall board. Being a completely Beaver-made product, both plaster and fibre facing manufactured by specialists in the great Beaver Products Company mills, manufacturing costs are at a minimum. Therefore Beaver Bestwall can be sold at no higher cost than other plaster wall boards. You gain in many ways, as a personal test will prove. Yet you pay no more.

All you need do is to specify "Beaver Bestwall" instead of merely "plaster wall board"—to insist upon it—and see for yourself that each sheet bears the distinctive cream-colored fibre surface and the familiar Beaver trade-mark.

Genuine Beaver Bestwall is sold in Chicago and vicinity by all good dealers. Call on the one nearest you.

A Simple Comparison

Its tough cover enables the golf ball or baseball to withstand terrific impacts of club and bat. The same thing applies to plaster wall board. The extra tough fibre facing—permanently bonded to the rock plaster center—gives Beaver Bestwall its remarkable strength.

The "Water Glass" and "Paint" Test

Place a sample of Beaver Bestwall over a glass of water. Invert the glass so sample is underneath the water. Also apply paint to a sample. Note how little is absorbed in each case. Very economical.

The "Fire" Test

Every panel of Beaver Bestwall—the superior plaster wall board—is approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and manufactured under their laboratory supervision.

The "Surface" Test

Swiftly rub your finger tips over the fibre facing of Beaver Bestwall. Note that it does not scuff up and become woolly—a feature of the fibre facing which is sized and calendered.

The "Strength" Test

Lay a piece of Beaver Bestwall across two piles of bricks or between two chairs. Pile heavy weights on the center. Note the surprising weight it will hold without breaking.

Easy to Apply

Saws and nails like lumber. Quickly applied to studding over old walls or ceilings. Will not warp, buckle, crack, crumble or fall. Is fireproof, moisture-proof. Produces smooth, clean, permanent walls and ceilings.

Many Uses

Use it for durable, fireproof walls and ceilings in new dwellings and buildings of every kind.

For quick, permanent, economical repairs for remodeling at low cost—reclaiming wasted attic space; lining garage or summer cottages; adding needed rooms, or walls in the cellar; making partitions in stores, factories—and for 101 other uses where a smooth, clean, permanent wall that will not warp, crack, crumble or fall is required.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by Sara
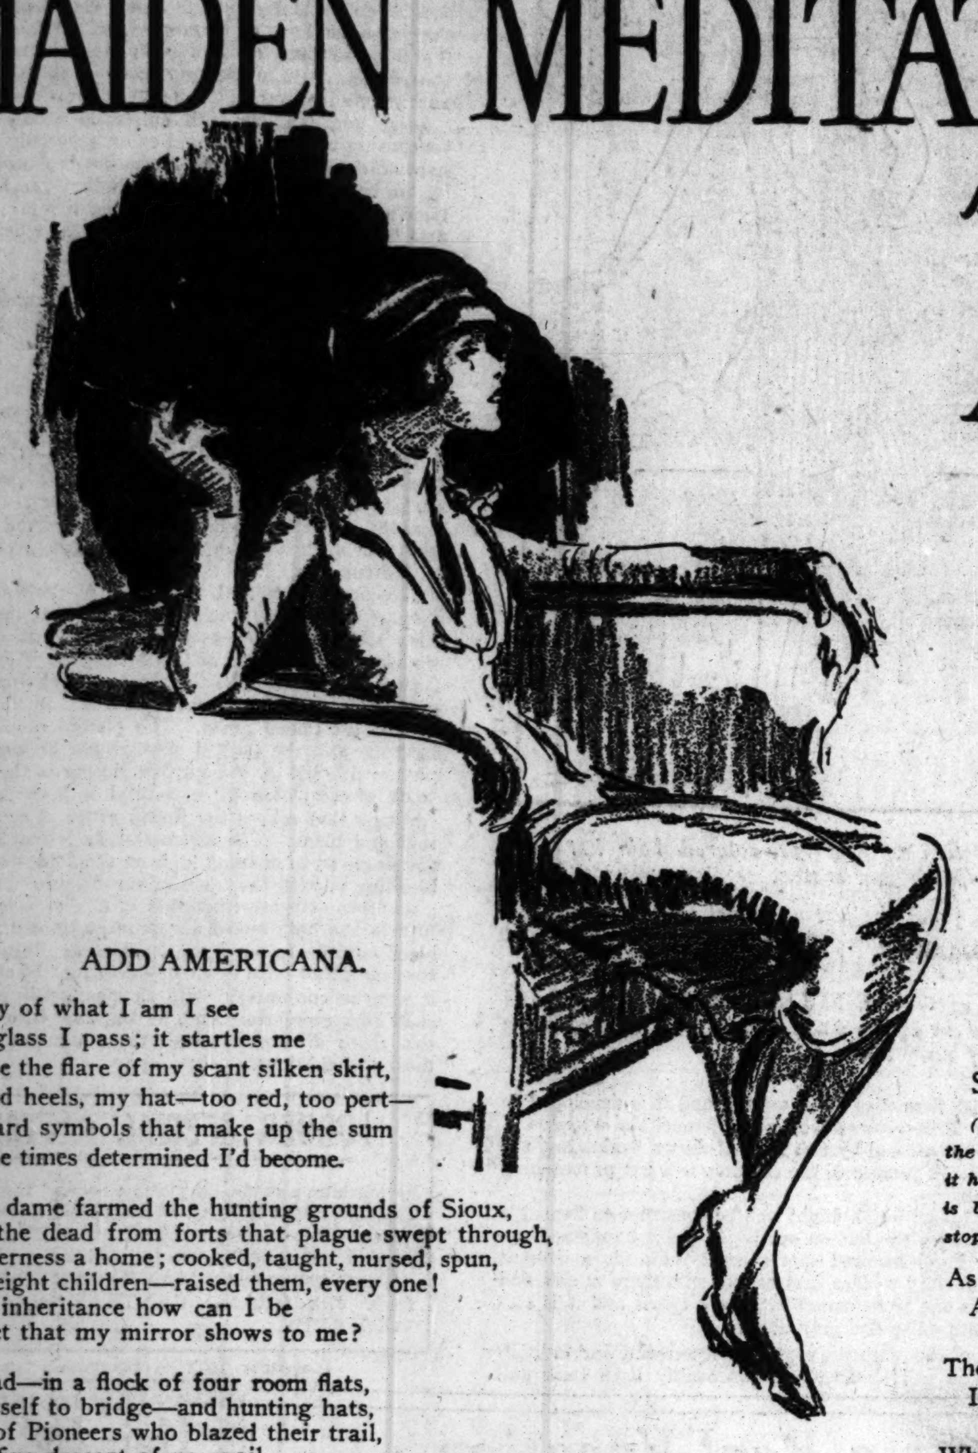
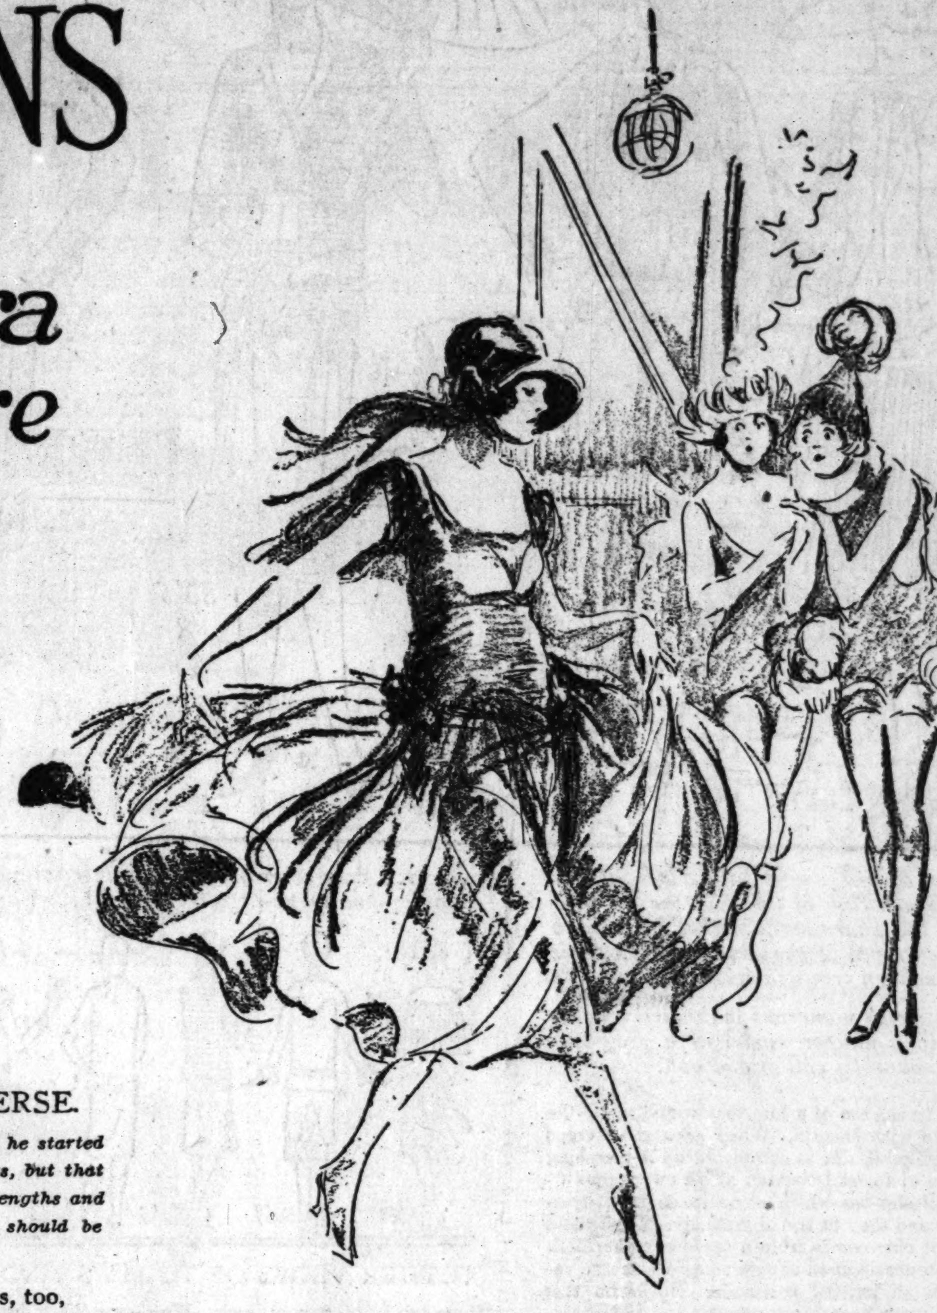
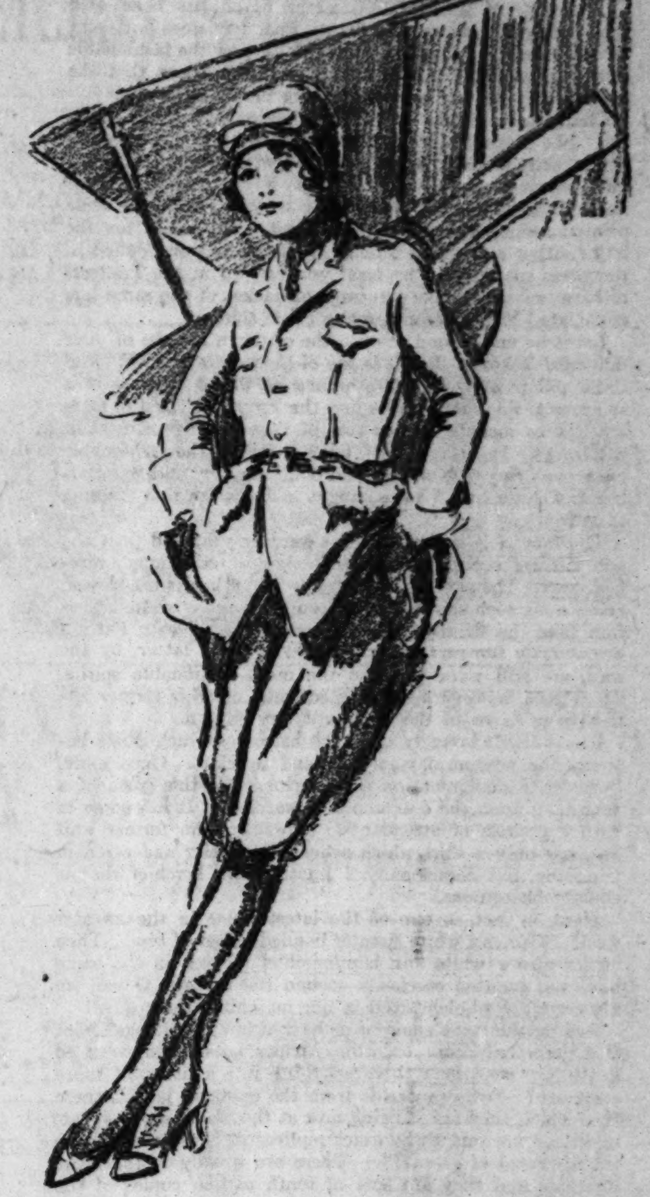
Moore







ADD AMERICANA.

A mockery of what I am I see
In every glass I pass; it startles me
To glimpse the flare of my scant silken skirt,
My pointed heels, my hat—too red, too pert—
The outward symbols that make up the sum
Of what the times determined I'd become.

My grand dame farmed the hunting grounds of Sioux,
Removed the dead from forts that plague swept through,
Made wilderness a home; cooked, taught, nursed, spun,
And bore eight children—raised them, every one!
With this inheritance how can I be
The puppet that my mirror shows to me?

I homestead—in a flock of four room flats,
Devote myself to bridge—and hunting hats,
Daughter of Pioneers who blazed their trail,
I find my fine descent of no avail.
Inheritance within my breast dares destiny—
I'll taxi down a boulevard for tea.

SHIFT TO REVERSE.

(Mr. Ziegfeld admits that he started the craze for daring displays, but that it has been carried to such lengths and is being so badly done—it should be stopped.—News item.)

As debutantes and co-eds, too,
Are stealing all the chorines' stuff,
The stage finds competition keen;
It claims that ladies grow too rough.
Who can an audience outbluff
Since gowns in boxes and parquet
On chorus queens would draw rebuff
From any censor—any day!

Bare knees, strong makeup, henna hair
Are featured in the street, home, club;
Extremes that Follies used to dare
Adorn the dowager—and dub;
And managers—ah, there's the rub—
Find cheapened charms their business hurts,
So, social copycats they snub
By putting showgirls into skirts.

THE PERFECT FOLLOWUP.

A lass that loves a sailor lad
Is left, bereft, no more;
When he takes off to the high seas—
His girl takes off—on shore.

My jolly tar is true to me,
He's steady as a rock;
For when he lands in foreign ports—
I meet him at the dock.

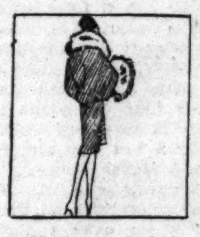
The Last Word of Fashion

From the fashion centers of the world comes word of the autumn mode. Colors stand out, models become definite—all of which is news that is of interest to every woman.

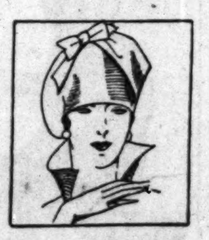
Coats Will Be Different



Dolman sleeves, bloused backs are dominant features of the new coats. Treatments of fur are unusually lavish.

The new handbags will flaunt bright colors. In most instances they are fashioned of reptile skins.

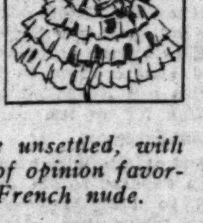
Velvet Tops the Mode



Two tones of velvet mark many of the recent imports. Both contrasting and harmonizing shades are sponsored by Parisian milliners.

Milady to have chic must wear jewelry of barbaric design. Slave bracelets, chain necklets and cuffs of hammered gold are style tendencies.

Blue Bids for Favor



A pale shade of blue comes forward in the new evening mode. Le Long sanctions a robe de style of taffeta created in this shade.

Hosiery shades are unsettled, with the preponderance of opinion favoring gunmetal and French nude.

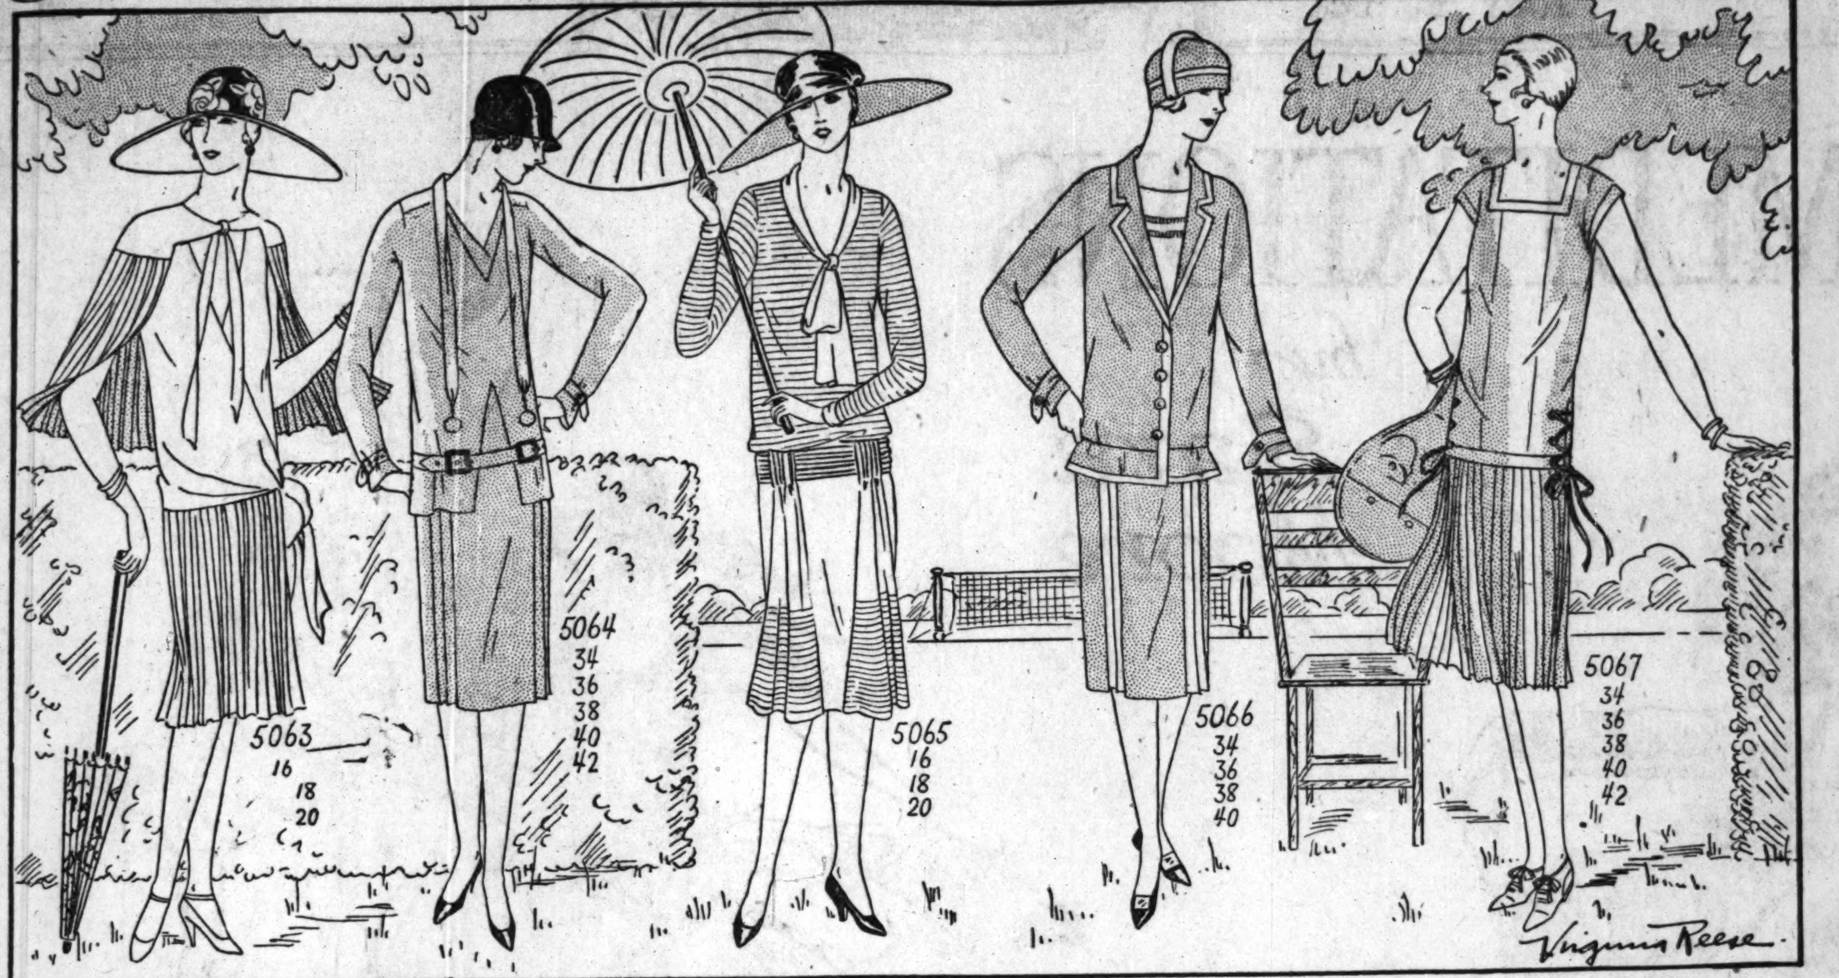
Fashion's Playgrounds Bring Out Numerous Novelties

by Corinne Lowe

SPECIAL PATTERNS by May Manton



Worn by one of the smart attendants at the opening of the Beach club of the Westchester Biltmore club was the charming creation of chiffon in linden green pictured at the extreme left. This is topped by a Leghorn crowned with cretonne.

In our second sketch numerous individual touches are introduced in a jumper model of a gray-blue novelty weave combining cotton and silk.

Next, a flesh-color georgette with ingenious application of fine tucks exploits unusual skirt draperies in connection with a rose-colored hair hat with draped black velvet crown.

Fourth from the left a flannel frock inspired by Paris occurs in the fashionable baby blue banded with white flannel and matched by a flannel hat.

At the extreme right a tennis frock which may be developed in either linen or crepe is identified by lacings of navy blue.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—In sports wear this summer it is a case of play your trump cardigan. I have spoken several times of the popularity of this jacket sweater which has been seen these many seasons on the links. That fact does not deter me. I am bound to speak of it again, for now the fashionable resort season is at last in full play it is evident that the golfer's coat sweater has found a big place in the sun.

Chanel in particular has made a major suit of the cardigan. She plays it a great deal and invariably in connection with a skirt or frock which is linked with it in either trimming or color—usually both. Thus if you wish to top off a simple little sports frock of—let us say, green and beige printed crêpe—with the sweater coat, you choose for the latter either a green or a beige wool collared and cuffed in the dress material. The least you can do in the interests of harmony is to make the cardigan jacket of the same hue enunciated in the accompanying crêpe skirt.

Let it be understood at once the cardigan is none of your universal fashions. But it is one of the most exclusive. And those pillars of fashion fire among us whose business it is to guide groping multitudes into the Promised Land of Chic are apt to include one or two of these garments in their wardrobes. In other words, quite a few of the fashionable ones who bring to Newport, and Southampton, and Bar Harbor the clothes they have bought in Paris are now sunning their cardigan jackets.

The fact of it is that this is a sweater year and in it the golf sweater occupies an exceedingly limited, though rarefied, area. The sweater which has really taken is the slip-on and among such slip-ons none occupies a more exalted position than the striped ones so often associated with Patou's sweaterlike jumpers of wool jersey. These latter, by the way, are still worn by even the most fashionable spirits. They have, however, relinquished some of their former authority in favor of the plain ordinary slip-on.

I have dwelt lovingly upon the harmony which exists between the present day sweater and its skirt. Once more, however, I shall mention that no longer is this garment a foundling upon the doorstep of a wardrobe. It has come in with a flourish of attendants. Nowadays the former waif has, not only a skirt which echoes it in color and often in trimming, but occasionally a knotted silk kerchief that is equally obsequious.

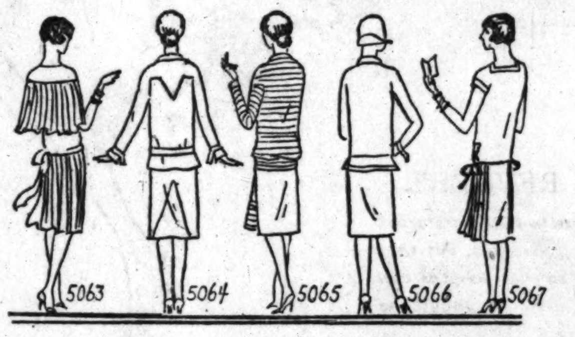
Here, in fact, is one of the latest notes in the sweater world. Comes a white sweater banded in pencil blue. Then comes also a white silk handkerchief banded in the same blue and knotted carelessly around the throat. O yes, we are certainly wholehearted in our matching, these days!

But by this time some of us have a few misgivings about this perpetual zebra toilette. Stripes have been worn to death, cry we. Isn't there anything just a little bit more exclusive? Yes, even aside from the cardigan jacket, there is. In fact, they are showing now at the smart shops sweaters which are said to be exact replicas of those which have the approval of Deauville. These are usually in the beige mixtures and they are sort of tenth carbon copies of the Fair Isle. However, they are to my mind decidedly fairer. Also it is interesting to note that, in spite of the strong dominion of beige, some of these smart new sweaters are in vivid color. Solid red, for one tint! Indeed, recall that this brilliant scarlet is much in the season's mode and that a number of crêpe frocks are of a hue that would make the scarlet tanager pale with chagrin. When sweater or crêpe frock of this unmistakable tint is completed by a matching hat—well, the tropical forest is beaten at its own game.

These smartest of slip-ons which come to us from overseas have a V neck and they fit the hips snugly. Their most conclusive accent of chic comes from a narrow leather belt.

Along with the emphasis upon sweaters has occurred a redoubled interest in all knitted costumes. Never on this side have such costumes been more popular and never certainly have they displayed such finesse of detail.

Leaving the province of the knitting needle, let me revert again to the popularity of flannel. Dismissing the ubiquitous white flannel coat and the manifold flannel jackets, there too is the flannel frock. We give a charming exemplification of this in our fourth sketch from the left.



OTHER VIEWS OF TODAY'S MODELS.

Here is a frock from which the designer tore at least one page of the page boy silhouette, for the distinguishing feature is that saucy little peplum of the jumper coat. This is an English flannel of finest quality and it is developed in baby blue. It is trimmed with white flannel and a vestee of white crêpe is crossed by two lines of drawn work. Not the least significant feature of the costume is a hat of matching tint and fabric.

Another model which might well be construed in flannel is the second from the left on our page. As it happens, however, this Paris inspired sports frock indicates a present thirst for novelty weaves that use an admixture of silk and wool. This one looks somewhat like a tweed and it is carried out in a delightful gray-blue.

The cut of the jumper is especially interesting and individual and you will observe how thoroughly both back and front have mastered their lessons in counterpoint and harmony. A belt of self-material is aided on its way by two gun-metal buckles repeated in miniature form on the straps of the sleeves. The vestee is of pique. This is worn with a matching felt hat.

Speaking of hats, it is quite remarkable to find out how many fashionable women of this summer are donning broad brimmed leghorns in natural tint. The leghorn, in fact, constitutes a formidable rival of hair. This, too, often borrows the yellowish tinge of its competitor. Indeed, the truth of it is that anything included in the tan or beige range is good this season. And in the supremacy of this gamut we must admit a gradual waning of the bois de rose craze.

Beige and tan are both employed widely for sobering touches on costumes of vivid color, especially those of brilliant scarlet. For example, a crimson sweater may be offset by tan belt, felt hat and shoes. Similarly, such spots of carmine as can be created by accessories like hat, handkerchief and belt frequently give life to tan and beige and navy blue backgrounds.

As I have said, scarlet—most particularly when combined with white—is one of the leading color manifestations of the season. Hardly less important is blue. At present there are two tones of the latter color which are used constantly by the most exclusive designers. One of these is the soft baby blue which we have indicated in our fourth sketch. The other is that intense shade which is known variously as blazer, pencil and light navy.

This latter tint is used most effectively for a number of those chiffon frocks of solid color which vie with printed chiffons for the position of arbiter of our afternoons. Incidentally, these same chiffons are often found in vivid scarlet. Nor must it be forgotten that light green is still much in the running.

We choose as typical of the sort of clothes assembled for a smart summer afternoon the costume at the extreme left. This toilette was sponsored by a certain widely known woman at the opening of the Beach club of the Westchester Biltmore club. Here is the sheerest of chiffons in that light green which the French call tilleul and which in plain English is just linden green. The plaited shoulder cape with its yoke and the plaited skirt merge harmoniously into a picture finished by the surplice closing of the corsage. This frock is completed by a natural leghorn hat crowned in cretonne that echoes the linden green in combination with rose and black. The slippers—that fashionable type with the single strap crossing high on the ankle—are of light kid blending in with the tones of the leghorn.

Another attractive member of the wide brimmed fraternity is the hair model surmounted by a draped crown of black velvet. In our central model we illustrate this hat in rose pink hair with a tamlike crown of black velvet. This is worn in conjunction with an ingeniously plaited frock of shell pink georgette. And, by the way, before passing from this frock do not overlook those unusual skirt draperies tucked at the hips.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This Offer Brings Joy.

"Several months ago some friends of mine organized a club. We made a collection of toys and games which we have grown tired of and would like to pass on to some children. None of the toys are valuable, but they are all in fairly good condition. G. C."

Here's an offer to make some little girls and boys happy. If you'd like to have some of them just write in at once.

Call for Clothing.

"I would greatly appreciate it if you could help me get some clothes for my sister's family and for herself. She wears size 44. The children, all girls, have no coats at all and wear sizes 9, 6, and 2. If she had presentable clothing for herself she could get a position. MRS. L. W."

Does your wardrobe hold the clothing, not being used, which would enable this woman to get a position and support her children? Or perhaps you can help with the clothing your own children have outgrown.

Dog Wants a Home.

"I have a three months old part police dog which I will be glad to give to some one who can give it a good home. "MRS. E. C."

Thank you, Mrs. E. C. I am sure there are a number of people who'd like to give this dog a home.

Eager to Help.

"I wonder if through your department I could get a sewing machine. My husband has been out of work for three months and I could help out by sewing. MRS. M. W."

If you are planning on getting a new sewing machine why not give the old one to this woman? Her earnings would help fill the family coffers and be a great help in their present misfortune.

French Grammar.

"I have a beginner's French grammar to give to any one who'd like to have it. P. M. P."

Are you a student of French or would you like to be one? Here's an opportunity to learn something of the language.

Bed Is Greatly Needed.

"Do you think any of the Cornerites have a single bed, spring and mattress to give a 12 year old girl who is slightly tubercular? The doctor says she must sleep alone. J. S."

This girl really ought to have her own bed, not only for her own comfort but to safeguard the health of the other members of the family. Have you one she may have?

Lace Loom to Give.

"I have a lace loom, with bobbins, book of instructions, and patterns for some shutin. It is in good condition and will pass many lonely hours. "E. F. S."

Not only will this lace loom fill the lonely hours, but it might also be a source of income. It is easily operated and you may be able to turn out some attractive pieces of lace.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

BEVERAGES NUTRITIVE AND SOCIAL.

YOU may agree that if anybody in the world should be able to prepare drinks both nutritive and attractive it should be a nurse. Therefore, I was especially interested last summer when visiting one of the best known of the cooking schools of the East to come first upon a class of nurses who had been experimenting with such drinks. Eight or ten of these women were ready to eat their luncheon, and at each plate or cover there was a different drink.

Those who have specialized, by chance or training, in invalid cookery have almost always known how to combine fruit juices and cereal waters to make nutritive and highly palatable cool or hot drinks. The recipes for these usually are put first in books of invalid cookery.

No more grateful food and refreshment can be offered an invalid than a nutritive drink and, unfortunately, a great number of people, at some time during the summer, become candidates for something like a diet of barley water for a day or two. Any drink containing sugar and fruit juices is a nutritive drink, but the term is often used meaning such drinks as barley water, or something similar made of some of the other cereals. Rice water is given those who have been extremely sick, and hot cereal thickened drinks, which used to be called by the rather hateful name of gruels, have been given to those recovering their appetite after an illness, and sometimes having an almost violent appetite.

But there are other delicate palates besides those of the invalid, and in capably catering to the thirsts of hot weather one may be doing a great missionary work or performing for the family a valuable and loving service.

Instead of orange juice, a barley water well seasoned with pieces of orange, cut fine, may be just as agreeable and of greater nutritive value than the juice, while one small orange cut in bits will be enough to flavor three cups of barley water, to which sugar may be added if liked, and its nutritive value counted.

There may be actual danger to a stout person, and to some others, in a plentiful drinking of lemonades, because of the amount of pure fuel consumed in taking the sugar required to sweeten them. Plain diluted orange juice is far safer for them. The same is true of the drinks made of limes with their unique and special flavor.

In making great bowls of drinks perhaps with a lump of ice, but more wholesome without it, the pineapple, if used, may be counted with the lemon, while the orange is the happiest and mildest of the ingredients, and just as pretty as the garnishing cherry or strawberry in its season. Strawberry and raspberry sirups, and even that of the blackberry, add color and a delicate flavor to these drinks or punches. Plain soda, seltzer, and ginger ale, are added to the juices, and pieces of fruit and the water to give zip, but it is possible if the ingredients are not good, nor well combined, to get a blend that is not fair to the ingredients used, because almost any of them alone would be better or greatly superior to it.

Some of us are fussy about using grape juice in considerable quantities for the ice cold punches, yet other people use it often. In prescribing both it and ginger ale, we ought to be able to mention the brand for it makes a great difference which is used in a given combination.

Barley Water.

Barley water in England is used both as an invalid and as a social drink. With the finely cut bits of orange it will do quite well for a morning cocktail for a hot day. Quite by itself it may have a fruity flavor and people who are unaccustomed to it, and may reject it on one taste, may easily come to like it after tasting it a few times more, and adding some fruit flavor to taste, although orange may easily be the one preferred.

Barley Water Recipe.

Wash two tablespoons of pearl barley and add five cups of cold water. Cook gently for at least three hours. A double boiler is best if after the lower part boils the fire is not left full tilt under it. If the water boils out the barley will rise and boil over and make something not so easy to clean up. Over a tiny fire and in a kettle of adequate size it can just as safely be cooked. It swells greatly in the cooking, and this small amount will make a liquid which will jelly when cold and when cooked thoroughly.

Barley Porridge.

Barley as a breakfast cereal is excellent, and palatable quite cold on a summer morning. One can kill two birds with one stone, or get a barley water and a porridge, by cooking one-half cup of the washed pearl barley in one quart of water. As a real health dish use the thick part with a seasoning of salt only, or use fruits with it—the berries and milk may be sufficient for a light breakfast, or use sliced peaches and cream with it.

Drinks with Soda Waters.

The uneconomical bottle of soda, or the economical seltzer bottle and the ginger ales, can be used to get effects like those of the soda fountain. There is a serious question as to whether they are wholesome—these charged waters. One who had never got used to these drinks said after drinking one, that she felt just as she did when riding up and down in the elevator for the first time, and then added, "You take it and don't notice. Then all of a sudden it 'sizzes'," which is certainly what it does, and with most embarrassing suddenness sometimes.

The Tea Sirups.

To some of us it is next to impossible to get a tea base fine enough for some pints or quarts of fine fruits cut in bits, but when a tea sirup is in testing out some of the recipes for tea sirups, from interesting sources and particularly one from an interesting old French book entirely devoted to drinks, we find it seems much too sweet for the combinations mentioned, or for the most interesting of these, which had the title "Bavaroise au lait," or a milk Bavarois. With other preparations, other Bavarois were made, but that of milk contained equal parts of the tea sirup and milk, and seemed too sweet, but the French formerly drank a great deal of "eau sucre," or just sweetened water, and perhaps this would be to the taste of the days when that drink was so common among them.

Origin of Bavarois.

We all know what the Bavarian creams are and the Bavarois are described in the book mentioned above as follows, translating the French freely: "One attributes to the habits of a prince of Bavaria the origin of the name which among the purveyors of drinks serves to designate a cold or hot drink, prepared offhand, which one can serve at any hour. This is prepared with a sufficient quantity of a tea infusion and when sweetened with a plain sirup is called a water Bavarois." In the recipe for the milk Bavarois it says that you can give the Bavarois any flavor desired, by sweetening it with differently "aromatized" sirups, some people choosing cinnamon, others vanilla, others orange flower water. This seems to offer something interesting for those who like iced tea, and would like to vary it for company, or to satisfy a general curiosity. And then they may, by experiment, get something that in the French phrase "produces an agreeable sentiment in the stomach."

A Melonade.

A melonade may be one of the thrifty but daintily agreeable drinks. Put the seeds of a cantaloupe into a glass and add half a cup of cold water. Let it stand for a time, drain off the liquid and add about a third as much lemon juice, and considerable less sugar than one uses for an ordinary glass of lemonade. A little fizzy water may be added. A melon may be mashed into a puree and used for a drink. To three cups of mashed sweet melon add one cup of sugar and the juice of one lemon. Or add the lemon juice gradually so as not to destroy the mild melon flavor. Some orange juice may also be added and less care is required. This can be frozen for a melon ice.

Mint Flavored Drinks.

Home made drinks flavored with mint water, or mint tea, may be delicious, and are particularly and perhaps always to be recommended for children. The mint water or tea is superior when made with cold water, but may also be made with boiling. To make the cold water "infusion" wash sprigs of mint and shake off the water from them. Either sprinkle sugar over them or rub it into them, and cover with cold water. Let stand until the water is daintily or deliciously flavored with the mint. For a glass of water flavored with this sweetened mint add three or four teaspoons of lemon juice. This is an exceptionally pleasant drink for a hot day and all the pleasanter and cooler seeming if garnished with a spray of mint. To make a hot water mint infusion pour a cup of boiling water over a dozen sprays of well washed and drained mint. Let it stand five minutes or a little longer and drain off. Sweeten to taste and drink hot or cold, and get its real refreshment. Or, if you like, add one or two teaspoons of lemon juice per glass. Mint added to a much stronger mixture of lemon juice and water gives an unusual and bland lemonade, though the mint taste may be lost, while a sort of haunting aroma of mint remains. If you like this you will soon come to believe that the addition of mint tea is essential to a lemonade.

Beverage Sirups.

Lemonades and similar beverages are superior when sweetened with sirups. This is the most economical way of sweetening them and the sirups make them smoother. Perhaps the most common beverage sirup is made with two cups of sugar and two cups of water—the sugar thoroughly dissolved before the cooking—cooked to sirup stage or to 220 on the thermometer. The water used may be lightly flavored with a fruit juice.

Hot Sirup.

A hot sirup poured over fruits, cut up for a punch, is often used when there is time for it to cool. Fruits are watery, so a sirup of two cups of sugar and one of water is good, and they give up full flavor to the sirup besides diluting it. Pour the hot sirup over chosen mixture of fruit, or it may be poured over a glass of jelly or jam, to be whipped up. This can be chilled for a punch or frozen for an ice.

Lemon Sirups.

Lemon juice and orange juice quickly weather when exposed to air, and when subjected to heat they also change, yet two tablespoons of the following sirup in two-thirds of a glass of water will make an excellent drink which we may call lemonade, [or use more sirup if you prefer.] Use one cup of lemon juice, which is about what a half a dozen small lemons will yield, one cup of water, and two cups of sugar. Perhaps it is best to cook the sugar and water to sirup stage [220] and then when it is partly cool add the lemon juice. The above amount will make sixteen to twenty glasses of lemonade.

Blackberry or Raspberry Sirup.

Wash, thoroughly drain, and mash the berries and measure, then add to them half their measure of cold water. Let stand for half an hour, then strain off the liquid, measure, and add twice as much sugar as there is liquid, and cook to a sirup, skimming if necessary. A second and even a third extraction may be made by adding to the pulp after the straining half its measure of cold water and cooking for five minutes. Strain and treat like the first. The cooking gives a sirup so made a more pronounced flavor, but the sirup will be lighter.

My Idea of a Real Vacation

What is your notion of the ideal vacation? A fishing jaunt, an ocean trip, or a lake voyage, a stay at a fashionable resort, a stretch of lazy idleness in the woods, a long motor tour—or what? Write us your idea of the ideal vacation. We'll pay $1 for every letter we print. Address Vacations, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

A Unique Trip.

E. K. and I claim our best vacation was last year when we succeeded in winning a bet and having a highly enjoyable time by circling Lake Michigan through Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Indiana in one week simply by picking up stray auto rides, and hiking when none were to be had.

In this way, we saw the country first hand—and we always had the pleasure of indefiniteness—not knowing where we'd be by nightfall. We picked our food up along the way at small stores, and beds ranged from a real one at my fraternity in Madison to park picnic tables and haylofts on other occasions.

The entire distance around the lake took us 70 auto rides, one wagon ride, one boat ride across the straits, and one elevated ride to our homes when we finally landed in Jackson park at the end of the week. It cost us only $6.80 apiece.

The trip was especially fine because of the various little incidents that occurred along the road, the people we met, the conditions we observed—and above all the hiking we did. Going out of Chicago on one side and coming in on the other made us feel as though we had been around the world, instead of around the lake. The actual time for the trip was less than a week. We left Oak Park on a Tuesday morning at 6 a. m. and arrived back the following Monday night at 6:30 p. m. We averaged 200 miles a day. H. P.

On a House Boat.

My vacation this summer was unique and, therefore, a pleasureable experience. It was spent on a houseboat on a mid-western river. The cabin, 14x20, was ample and comfortable for six people, though we cooked and ate our meals on deck. The boat was moored across from a lovely park, which by day or night was a scene of beauty.

A severe electric storm in the wee small hours added a thrill to our experiences, but we were snug and secure from the lashing, flashing elements and finally lulled back to sleep by the lapping of the waves. It was a vacation long to be remembered and ended with regret. C. H. L.

At Grandfather's.

My ideal vacations were spent on my grandfather's farm, when I was a child. I know of nothing more enjoyable than to roam about on a 200 acre farm, gather apples, pears, peaches and plums, feed the chickens and turkeys, and, in the evening after having been charmed by the rustic beauty, to sit astride Mandy, the favorite horse, and drive the cows home from the pasture.

Then, after a good country meal, spend most of the night in a swing under the pine trees, gazing at the "candles of heaven," as Shakespeare calls the stars, and finally take a deep breath of the fresh, invigorating air, to retire "at peace with the world." E. M.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

SIMPLE LINES SHOW SUPREME CHIC.

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—It takes the kind of courage that makes heroes to run contrary to current styles. And outraging fashion doesn't bring the reward of self-satisfaction that being a hero does. Snickers and stares are not so agreeable, either, as silence or applause. A few women are so individual that they simply must have costumes different from anybody else, but most women, fortunately, have an individuality that is not lost by wearing costumes in the mode. Particularly the present mode, which is entirely built upon the beauties that nature has bestowed on woman.

Pessimists accuse us who follow fashion of being just couturier's dummies, but, after all, roses all follow a certain mode and yet a rose never gets tiresome. That is the case with today's fashions, which are as true to the laws of beauty as the rose. Shingled hair, as it is worn today, is cut to increase the naturally beautiful lines of the head and any unprejudiced person will admit it gives a much more agreeable outline than wads of hair, straggling locks, and other atrocities that accompany long hair. And the hat that goes over the shingled head is just as simple and beautiful. It fits; it has an artistic line, and best of all it is in perfect harmony with the silhouette au naturel that characterizes the fashions of today. This is no doubt the basic reason why styles show no radical changes.

I went recently to the Vieux Colombier to see a re-released film of 1911. It was an eloquent commentary on the real loveliness of present day fashions. Even the reactionary gentleman who accompanied me admitted that straight front corseted figures, skirts clumsily concealing ankles, waistlines under armpits, big pompadours, and huge, beplumed hats serve only to distort woman and that our present styles are a whole lot more charming and natural. The worst condemnation of fashions today is that they are standardized. They are. But what of it? Even if every woman wears the popular jumper dress, the cape-coat, and the ensemble, there are a million variations of personality and detail that make them different in spirit. Character will out, and no likeness of costume can be so complete as to smother it. A study of clothes worn by fashionable women reveals a striking similarity of silhouette and of cut, but there the resemblance ends, even if one color scheme dominates the entire season.

Our models sketched today represent costumes which are runners of the season and which you can see many times in a single day among smart women in Paris. Yet, somehow, no two of them look alike—that is, sufficiently alike to become monotonous. Each has assumed the character of its wearer and with the varied details that accompany them you have a subtler and more pleasing change than any amount of startling differences could make.

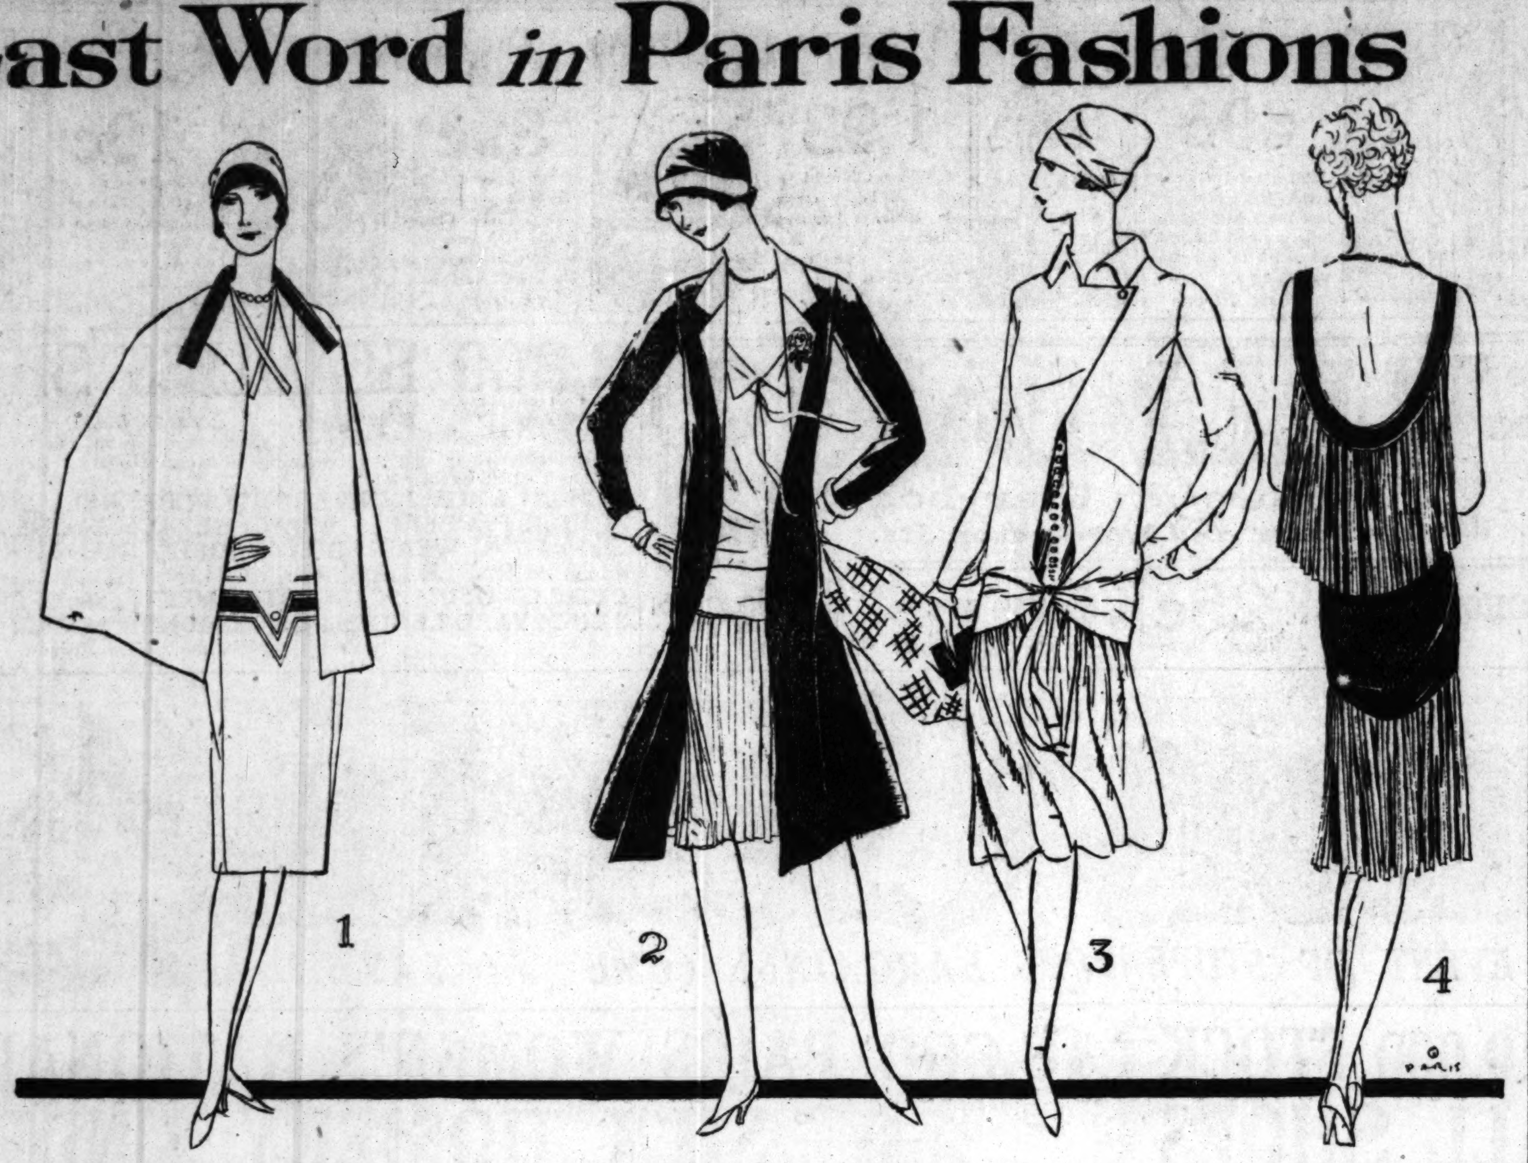
Our first one is the cape ensemble, a costume that in lines is a twin sister to the cape-coat and dress, and yet this model has a distinct flavor of personality. I saw it at the Ritz, worn by one of those Parisian Americans who fill Paris now. The ensemble is made of Rodier's crêpella in a soft, light tone of beige with a hip length cape fitted, as all smart capes are, at the shoulder line and flaring toward the terminus at the hips. The band collar, which may be buttoned or worn open, is one of the little insignias of Premet. The dress is absolutely straight, so that the bulk of the silhouette comes above the hips, as it should, according to the latest daytime mode. Premet has contrasted the beige crêpella charmingly with a belt of brown suede, which fastens in front under a buttoned flap of the crêpella. The piping above and below the belt is stitched in brown and the little crossed band color is in the same color.

Our second model is another extremely prevalent ensemble with long coat of one color and simple vareuse frock of another. The coat in this case is made of dark blue serge de soie cut in classic tailored fashion with a slight flare at the hem line. The sleeves, which give importance to the upper half of the silhouette, are set into extra large armholes and are rather loose and baggy just to the elbows, where they are laid in folds fitted close to the arms. Under this coat is worn a frock of light bronze crêpe de chine, with the usual plaited skirt, and the simplest of jumper blouses ending at the hipline—waistline indicated by a narrow self-material girdle. The collar, which is turned back from the V neck, ends in narrow string ties of self-material. The long, tight sleeves have turn-back cuffs with a slight flare. It is the kind of costume that follows closely the current mode, has hundreds of twin sisters, and yet which never looks banal or tiresome because of its real beauty of simplicity and excellence of cut and line.

The costume I saw was completed by a boutonniere of copper flowers and a scarf of blue, copper, and Indian red. It would never start a riot on State street or stop the traffic on the Place de l'Opera, but it is agreeable to the eyes as a shady lane and aids the slim grace of the modern figure.

Our third model is the kind of afternoon dress that prevails whenever the occasion calls for such a frock. Its extreme simplicity, its flowing line, and its lack of ornamentation in the matter of extraneous detail all are signs of the haute mode of today. This Worth model was one of the most distinguished gowns at Longchamps recently, although it certainly is not anything particularly strange or striking. Its vogue is inspired by the sophistication of cut and the beauty of the line. The unusual sleeve with its puffed section from elbow to the wrist in back, its diagonally closed bolero front showing a bit of gilet beneath, and its crushed girdle are all the items it needs to make it a creation worthy of Worth. The material is crêpe de chine and the color is a soft, dull green, a pastel tone like a leaf under water. The skirt, which is quite full, lies in slender lines. It is shirred under the girdle and the fullness is concentrated in front.

Our last model is "the" evening gown of the season—and that, of course, means that any successful affair will show several different versions of it. I saw it recently at the Casino in Deauville no less than six times in one evening in as many different colors. Its creator is Chanel and its material is crêpe de chine—in this case black—with self-colored fringes, which form the tunic that droops almost to the knees along the line of the draped girdle in back and its bolero, which rises to a point in the center front of the waist, at the base of the shoulder yoke, and borders the deep, rounded decolletage in back. The lower edge of the bolero is thus uneven also, drooping to a point in front and describing a curve that hides the top of the girdle in back.



1. The cape ensemble chez Premet developed in beige crêpella with brown belt.

2. A dress of beige crêpe de chine and a long straight coat of dark blue form a most popular ensemble.

3. The prevailing afternoon frock in green crêpe de chine with bolero front and shirred skirt.

4. The fringed evening gown that is fashion's favorite, with bolero and tunic of long fringes.

How to Order Clotilde Patterns.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin [coin preferred; wrap it carefully] for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

CREPE de chine in pure white, yellow, or any preferred color, or one of the tub silks would make a smart frock, using pattern No. 2706. Nothing could be easier to handle in cutting and making. The dress is cut in two pieces, front and back, and the drop shoulders form short sleeves. The neck in front is cut V shape, and in back the natural neck line is followed. A pretty collar finishes it. As the dress nears the lower edge it gores out decidedly, meausring there, for size 36, about 1⅞ yards.

French seams will be the best ones to use, and the bottom will look well finished with a binding matching that used for the edges of the short sleeves. As the dress gores out so at the bottom, a hem will be difficult to manage at the sides. A shaped facing could be used though, giving it the appearance of a hem.

If the dress material is striped or a plaid, use one of the colors in a plain material for the collar, and finish the edge with a narrow binding, if the other parts have been bound. A narrow ribbon bow, with short loops and long ends will finish the dress prettily at the neck.

A one piece section is included in the pattern if long sleeves are liked. These are gathered at the wrist into narrow bands. If the dress is made of a solid color the long sleeves will be pretty made of something contrasting. Perhaps the ground color could match the dress and have rather wide horizontal stripes of one or more contrasting colors, these stripes showing only on the lower arm.

Making colthes for small children is fascinating work; and the little dress, pattern No. 2381, will be just what many mothers will want. Waist and skirt are cut separately and joined at a natural waist line, the skirt being cut straight and gathered to the waist. The tiny waist is slashed down in the front from the neck to a given perforation and underfaced. It is then rolled back to form revers. There is a small cap sleeve which will be pretty and comfortable for these summer days; and also a full length one, gathered into narrow wristbands.

Dimity and chambray are pretty materials for these small dresses, and hemstitching, feather stitching or other hand work makes an attractive finish. Then the narrow Valenciennes or thread lace insertions and edgings are lovely, depending on the time you wish to spend. Dotted muslins and crêpe de chine are pretty for dressier clothes and this design suitable, too.

Crêpe de chine, or one of the heavier crêpes will be suitable for a dress made by pattern No. 2321, and it is also a suitable design for any of the wash materials that aren't too thin. Tub silk, silk cotton broadcloth, linen, or mercerized poplin may be used.

The dress is a one piece design, and is to be slipped on over the head. At the sides below the hips an inserted section is set underneath inverted box-plaits. A little width is added to the bottom in this way, and this makes the dress easy to walk in, besides adding to it's smartness, for plaits are seen on most dresses just now. It will be a good idea to set buttons on at the top of the plaits, as shown in the sketch. The narrow belt is made of the dress material and goes across the back, ending each side of the front, across the top of the plaits.

The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front, underfaced and rolled with the collar, forming revers. These convertible collars are a becoming and attractive finish, making it possible to have the neck open or closed.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Just Pals.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and in love with a boy one year my senior. We have been pals for several years, but not until a few months ago did he tell me of his love for me. I know I love him, but my parents do not think much of him. Please advise.

"MICKEY."

Just continue being pals, Mickey. It gives you the opportunity to seek other companions as well, and what girl of 17 wishes to cheat herself out of the good times which go with popularity?

Unreasonable.

"Dear Miss Blake: I went with a fellow whom I loved dearly. At a party he said something I did not like and we argued. He has tried to communicate through phone and mail, but I hung up or returned his letters unopened to make him believe I did not care. Now I realize I still love him. Please tell me how I can regain his friendship. PRETTY GYPSY."

It's probably too late now, Pretty Gypsy. To hang up on a person is one of the most insulting things you can do, dear. Don't you think you were unreasonable not to give him an opportunity to explain?

Forgot Too Easily.

"Dear Miss Blake: Recently a boy friend whom I loved left the school we both attended. He always told me he loved me, but I haven't heard from him since. I know his address, but dare not write to him. How can I find out if he still loves me? There are other boy friends, but he is the only one I care for. PIKES PEAK."

His silence indicates he has forgotten rather quickly, Pikes Peak. Your best bet is to stick to the other boys. A bird in the hand—you know.

He Loves Her Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl and know and like many boys, but I like one boy especially who loves my girl friend and I know I should forget him, but every time I see him I love him more and more. Please give me some good advice.

"LITTLE GIRL."

It may be hard, but it's the wise thing to do, Little Girl. The surest way to forget about him is to interest yourself in some other boys. Undoubtedly you know many others, so cultivate some of them.

Glossy Hair Ever Curly

By Edna Wallace Hopper

That glow in my hair, that fluff, that wave are not due to a hairdresser. I have no time for that care. They are due to a dressing some famous experts made for me. I call it my Wave and Sheen. That glitter, that curl, that seeming abundance come from applying that dress twice a week.

I think every girl and woman will be glad to know it. Your hair's beauty will be doubled in an hour. You will need no more Marcel waves.

All toilet counters now supply Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75c. You will find my guarantee with the bottle. It will cost you nothing if it doesn't do what I say. Go try it today.

FOR THE GIRL IN HER TEENS

by Antoinette Donnelly

Beauty Forming Habits Are Essential and Easy to Acquire.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Today I would like to have the attention of you young girls between the ages of 14 and 16 so that I might try to impress upon you the fact that during this early period of womanhood you have within your own power the making of a beautiful person.

Of course, I know you wish to be beautiful. There is no one who has gone through those tender years but knows how strongly you wish it. There is some lovely idol in your mind, and you would like to be as beautiful as she. Isn't it so? You would like to have skin like hers, hair like hers, eyes like hers, and to be able to wear clothes as smartly as she.

Of course, you may not be able to have hair the same shade, eyes the same color, nor long, sweeping eyelashes, nevertheless you can have just as enviable skin, just as beautiful a gloss to your hair, just as much health light in your eyes, and a figure as supple and pliant so that your dresses are just as smart on you.

To begin with, you have an asset in your youth that is invaluable—if you are only willing to be young. If you try to imitate your older sisters, if you try to act and dress like a woman, use cosmetics and generally ape the manners and pursuits of your grown sisters you are neither an attractive woman nor a pretty girl. You kill that most enviable asset I have spoken of as yours and yours alone.

It is a pretty difficult task to try to make a young girl understand that sophisticated arts and pleasures are not for her—not if she wants beauty now and later, and that it matters immeasurably that she have wholesome pleasure, interesting tasks, a good digestion, controlled nerves, and healthy tastes in general.

Forced Blooms Wither Early.

There is nothing truer, my dear girls, than that forced blooms soon wither; that it is the plant of slow growth which has the longest life.

At no time in your life will you be subjected to the emotional disturbances that greet you in these early 'teens. These are primarily due to the physical changes that are taking place in your body and converting you from a girl into a young woman.

The influence of the mind upon your health and beauty at this time is of far greater importance than you believe. Among the things that kill beauty in you are evil suggestions from girls or youths, seeing plays which you ought not to see, reading nasty stories which unduly excite the imagination. These all leave an imprint you cannot escape. There is plenty of good literature, exciting stories, too, to be read without substituting for them cheap tinsel and smudge which have no more to do with real life than a mask has to do with the human features.

Your physical training is just as, if not more, important than your mental education. If you go in for the right sort of outdoor sports and games, a healthful mental trend will naturally follow. The young girl most inclined to mental unhealthfulness is the one who does not want to bestir herself to physical exercise of any kind. She is rarely an attractive girl. By physical exercise it is possible not only to make the body straight, beautiful and strong, but to develop the mind as well. Physical exercise insures a supple and agile body. It increases the lung capacity, strengthens the heart action, improves the digestive powers, and assists the skin to act freely, so that the whole system is in a condition to resist illness. Choose forms of muscular activity that are most enjoyable, for exercise is always beneficial if the spirit of fun and play go with it.

Cleanliness Is Essential.

I should say the most appealing charm next to a healthy mind and a young, agile body is a look of exquisite cleanliness. It belongs to youth and its enviable freshness. If, perchance, any of you young women have not the daily tubbing habit, get it. It is imperative to the charm of your looks. You must have the habit because during these years the tiny glands in your skin are undergoing changes. The sweat glands are more active, and to prevent that bane of youth, blackheads and pimples, you must keep the pores from clogging, which you can best do by the daily bath.

The cold bath habit I strongly urge at this period in your lives. I know a good many of you girls have it. But there are some for whom a more beautiful present and future could be promised if they'd follow suit. I do not believe there is another measure that will so surely guarantee a good complexion for the years to come as the cold bath or shower. It is so stimulating and such a great joy that well being just goes with it. It does not answer the cleansing need, however. It is additional. You require at least three warm cleansing baths a week. But the cold tub stimulates your circulation and keeps your skin healthy and active and at this age particularly you need that stimulation.

There is a bit of psychology about this daily tubbing I want to call your attention to. It influences daintiness about underwear. It is next to a physical impossibility to don soiled things over a clean, glowing body. And real beauty in woman demands that she give out the impression everything about her is spic, span, and spotless. In warm weather, all clothing which touches the skin should be rinsed out each night. You cannot have the faintest suggestion of odor and be attractive. Because of your more or less strenuous life and the increased activity of your skin glands you are liable to excessive perspiration.

These habits established early, and regularly conformed to, are the things that give that perfectly groomed look you admire so much in your ideal woman.

Other Habits to Form.

And speaking of perspiration odors, let me advise you to take a good deal of water into your system. It minimizes the odor from skin and breath. These odors are caused by acids and other chemical materials which exist in the natural secretions of the body. The less water there is in the human system, the more will these chemical odors pervade the atmosphere surrounding the girl.

Another item of tremendous importance to your beauty is that the bowels be emptied every day. Any keeping of the cast off material of the intestines in the bowels means an odorous skin, an unhealthy color to the complexion and an unhappy reflection in the tone of the hair.

A toilet duty that will net you a great beauty asset is the careful brushing of the teeth after each meal and the use of a mouth wash. And still another is brushing the hair regularly at night. It does not matter what color your hair is. If it is shimmering with health and cleanliness it will be beautiful.

Under the heading of neatness and freshness, the things you must strive for, let me remind you that grubby nails are offensive. You do not need to patronize professional manicure parlors, but you must keep your nails in presentable shape—not glossed, please, but clean, filed, and with the cuticle pushed back free of the nail.

The Cheekiest Person I Ever Met

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Difficult to Fathom.

My neighbor invited me to an installation her lodge was giving, and as there would be some little doings for children, she also spoke to my boy, 8, about it.

She had him so worked up he insisted on going. The evening of the affair we were ready to go, when my door bell rang and her boy, who is also 8, came up and said, "My mother said that if Buddy isn't going tonight, to let me wear his overcoat."

How about this for nerve, after I promised her to go, as she was being installed. Guess this must have been an invitation to stay at home.

And this isn't all; the next day was Sunday, and he wore the overcoat to Sunday school, and we didn't get it back until we sent for it. My boy had to wear an old coat meantime.

A. L.

When Words Fail.

One day a girl friend and I were playing on the street, when all of a sudden it started to rain. A woman went by with two large bags full of groceries. The bags got wet and tore and her parcels were scattered all over the street.

My friend and I ran over and asked her if we could help her. We carried some of her heavy parcels. We thought we would earn a nickel for candy and walked and walked.

Finally we discovered she lived on a farm about two miles from our home. The rain was coming down in buckets and we got in the mud to our knees.

When we got to her house the woman took the parcels and said, "Thanks." I thought she would ask us to come in and get dry, but she shut the door in our faces. That's what I call cheek.

F. R.

Gratitude Was Missing.

While sitting on my porch one warm afternoon watching a neighbor across the street working on the motor of his automobile, I saw his next door neighbor leave his easy chair and offer to help correct the trouble as he owned a car of the same make.

Mr. A. rolled up his sleeves, began working on the motor, soiling his hands and clothing, while Mr. B. called to his wife to bring two cigars to him. When she handed them to her husband he took them, sat down on the grass in the shade, put one cigar in his pocket, the other in his mouth and began smoking it, while his kind neighbor worked away on his car.

G. B.

Once Was Not Enough.

Three years ago my neighbors took their two children up to the lakes for a month's vacation. They borrowed my leather bag to help carry their clothes. Coming home the boy had gathered a number of large stones which he wanted to take home, and did so in my bag.

When I needed it for our summer trip I had to go and ask for its return. It was returned with one side all torn out, and when I remarked about it, the borrower answered, "Oh well, you can take it to any harness shop and have it fixed. It won't cost you much."

The next year she asked me if I ever had that bag repaired. She was going on a trip again and would like to borrow it. I call that cheek.

A. V.

Off with the Goods.

The cheekiest person I ever knew is my sister-in-law. I bought my mother some dress material for a birthday present and as she was much pleased with it she showed it to my sister-in-law, who immediately picked it up and took it home with her, saying, "Mother, you have a dress much like this, so I will make one of this and buy you one of a different pattern."

She has worn the dress out, but my mother never got the material for the other dress and this has been over three years ago.

R. C. H.

Pocketing the Money.

The cheekiest person I ever knew was a neighbor of ours that moved from the city out to the country. As cold weather came on in the fall this woman mentioned to me that they would need a base burner. We had put in a furnace that summer and she knew that we had no further use for our nearly new base burner, so I offered it to her for $20. A few days later she sent over for the stove, but nothing was said about paying for it. She never mentioned the matter and as we were getting to be good friends I hesitated about asking for payment. Later she treated the matter as a joke and said that if they ever got that much money ahead they would pay me!

They used the stove for a year and a half and then put in a furnace. She immediately advertised the base burner for sale and soon sold it for $19, keeping the money for herself. Since she made the sale, nothing has ever been said about paying me for the stove.

P. W.

French Leave.

The cheekiest person that I ever met, after having been asked to leave my house because she was in arrears with the rent, quietly called for a taxi and drove away in it.

D. W. B.

At Another's Expense.

I put a situation wanted ad in the paper. The cheekiest person I ever met called up and asked if she might have all the answers to the ad that I couldn't use!

K. C.

Just Fairly!

Upon entering my rooming house after class, I asked my landlady if I had received any mail. Holding out a postcard addressed to me she replied, "Yes, but I can't make out what this word is here!"

Fairly cheeky?

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. Fine, almost invisible skin particles are flecked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. COLOR SCHEMES FOR KITCHENS

UNTIL recently the kitchen had always been looked upon as a a sort of drudgery room, not worthy of of much thought or attention when it came to plans of decoration in the house. Consequently it was not pleasing in appearance. But now the kitchen style is taking a happier trend. The movement is already quite pronounced. Architects and decorators are actually spending as much time in planning and beautifying the kitchen as they are spending on any other room of the house.

One of the most outstanding reasons for this is the widespread popularity, especially in small houses and apartments, of having a breakfast alcove adjoining the kitchen. Even where there is no alcove, many people have installed breakfast sets in their kitchens so they may lighten their housekeeping tasks by having their breakfasts and informal luncheons right in the kitchen. Of course they want to have colorful, decorative surroundings. Old-fashionedness has been completely banished, and smartness and trimness have made their final conquest.

Several interesting color schemes for kitchens are shown in a display of modern equipment. The most striking of these is carried out in black, white, gray and watermelon pink. The floor is covered with linoleum in large squares of black and white. Woodwork is painted black and the walls are a light French gray. Cabinets, work table and chairs are enameled white, decorated with outlines of watermelon pink. A pair of built in benches and a table, making the breakfast nook, are painted white and watermelon pink, to match the cabinet work. They are further decorated with oval motifs of nasturtiums in bright naturalistic colors. Outside the windows are boxes filled with real nasturtiums, so that the designs on the furniture look as if they might have spilled right in at the windows. Window curtains are of ruffled voile in watermelon pink.

An excellent color scheme to be carried out in the kitchen is blue and yellow. One of the exhibits is done in these colors. A dull blue linoleum on the floor is figured in buttercup yellow crosses. The woodwork is painted blue and the walls are buttercup yellow. Cabinets are built in all across one side of the room. These are enameled blue on the outside and yellow on the inside. Kitchen furniture is painted blue decorated with stencils in yellows, greens, black and rose. The window curtains are of yellow crossbarred muslin, finished with ruffles of blue

The kitchen illustrated today is most colorfully done. On the floor is a linoleum of deep leaf green, marked off in squares by means of cream colored "mortar lines." Woodwork is painted green to match. The walls are tinted a soft light mauve. Cabinets, tables, and other pieces of furniture are enameled a cream color instead of a pure white. A little breakfast nook at one side of the room has a drop leaf table and four chairs enameled cream color, with trims of green and hairlines of mauve. Window curtains beneath blocked linen lambrequins are of natural colored linen finished with mauve voile ruffles and caught back with cuffs of the same.

Quite unusual and effective is a kitchen done in black, flame, and lemon yellow. The floor is covered with linoleum in small black and yellow squares. Woodwork is painted black, finished with a hairline of flame. The walls are calcimined lemon yellow in its full intensity. All of the cabinets are enameled black with the insides in flame color. There is no breakfast alcove, but a drop leaf table with four Windsor chairs is set before a group of windows overlooking a delightfully picturesque garden. Table and chairs are painted black with hairlines of flame and are decorated with flowers copied from a black grounded cretonne which makes the window curtains. Cretonne is a most excellent material for use at kitchen windows, as it may be had in many colorful and interesting patterns at moderate prices. Another point in favor of cretonne is the fact that it may be laundered easily with the best of results.

Decidedly different is a kitchen worked out in jade green, jade pink and white. Green and white linoleum covers the floor. The woodwork and cabinets are all enameled white. Walls are calcimined a light jade pink. Jade green table and chairs are decorated with touches of white. Jade pink chambray curtains at the windows are hung by means of white rings from brass rods painted jade green. This arrangement of colors may be carried out advantageously in apartment kitchens, where the usual white woodwork installed by the owner may not be changed.

Manners for Everyday Life

—By Persis Standish

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Room, Chicago Tribune.

IN these days of conventions and parades when the streets of our city are so crowded it is almost impossible not to bump into one another one is reminded that there are many little kindnesses and rudenesses to strangers that are practiced equally. Often people are rude through embarrassment. A man in a motor bus, the other day, got down on his hands and knees and fished about to retrieve a dime for a perfectly strange woman—and, indeed, she was perfectly strange for her reply to all his trouble and kindness was a sort of inarticulate grunt that would not have done credit to my dog, who at least would have barked intelligently.

I have heard several men who have dealt in large capacities and numbers with the general public contend that women are much ruder and more thoughtless than men. One of them says that almost any man, no matter what his status, will look out for children, but that some women will only look out for their own children leaving other women to do the same and heaven take the hindmost.

I am more inclined to agree with Wilde who said there are only two kinds of people in the world and that they are much alike. These two kinds of people are men and women.

Conscious of Self.

On the other hand I think women often appear less polite than men because they are notably more self-conscious. That is why they have the reputation of being—well not quite direct, too, I think. Take, for instance, the case of the woman and man on the bus. The man just naturally was helpful. He probably was a good old married man used to picking up things for the wife and children at home. Without further thought he bent his back to help just any woman. The woman, on the other hand, was probably not used to being helped to pick up things she drops and so she felt "silly." She subconsciously resented the publicity given her by the man's kindness. She was not quite quick enough in her recovery to say thank you as she should have done. But I maintain that it was awkwardness rather than ill will awkwardness dating from the time way back when that poor woman had probably been taught by a post victorian mother that anybody of the male sex who did her a favor was most probably "trying to get fresh."

There is, of course, the other extreme of unselfconsiousness that one sees every day in the park and sometimes on the street. Younglings go about leaning upon each other, the girl clinging to the man's arm as though she were crippled.

Again there is the man who wheels the woman along the street by her elbow as though she were an inanimate object needing his intelligent direction. There is the man who makes a sandwich-filling of himself between two women on the street. Such people offset the woman who refuse to say thank you for retrieved articles and relinquished seats, do they not?

The Origin of Etiquette.

Manners for the street are like manners everywhere else, they are based on kindness and thought for others. Like manners everywhere they should consist mostly of self effacement and simple courtesy. A man walking with a woman on the street always takes the curb side because once it was necessary for him to do so in order to protect her from ruffians and from the mud from carriage wheels. If a man is walking with two women he still takes the curb side. He should never draw attention to the woman with whom he is walking by bending towards her or in any way making known his regard for her. Love's young dream is a beautiful thing, but it should be reserved for gardens and the drawing room, or for whatever privacy passes for these things in the life of the individual, even if it be only the hall of an apartment building or the darkened cinema, or a green field attained on a Sunday afternoon after a long and wearying journey by train and foot.

A man should never take a woman's arm. If, when they are crossing a particularly dangerous bit of traffic, the woman appears nervous and unwilling to go when he does he may offer his arm and she may, with propriety, take advantage of the help. At night in the country or in some rough or unfamiliar place a man may offer his arm to a woman, but in most cases when she is able bodied and possessed of a modern mind she will rather resent than enjoy his suggestion that she needs a crutch. The modern woman glories in her well developed body and her own self-sufficiency. If the arm taking is a sentimental device—that is quite another matter, and refers to Doris Blake and not to me.

Forgetful of Loud Tones.

Both men and women should be careful of their tone of voice in public places, such as when walking on the street, riding in public conveyances, in elevators, and in shops and restaurants. Not long ago a woman of my acquaintance heard her sister's name and, being attracted by it, turned to see the people who spoke it. They were highly embarrassed because, even though they did not know her personally, they knew who she was and as they saw her turn at the particular moment they knew she had heard their conversation. Of course, the woman was at fault for turning—one should never turn around to look at any one in a public place. One should have so much poise that an accusation of murder would not make one turn deliberately and gaze at the speaker. No sooner had my friend turned than she realized her mistake and shared the embarrassment of the speakers.

There is one place when it is permissible for a man, even a strange man, to put his hand on a woman's arm. That is if he sees she is alighting from a motor bus, or street car, or train backwards and is liable to fall in case the vehicle should start. If a man is with a woman he alights from all vehicles first and helps her out. This is not true, however, of elevators. A woman gets out of an elevator first and the thoughtful, polite man waits for a moment to see if any women are getting off before he pushes his way out at his floor.

If a man happens to be traveling on the same train as a woman of his acquaintance he, of course, carries her suitcase or bag until a porter appears on the scene. It is then the porter's duty and the man does not attempt to tip him. If he does attempt such a thing the woman refuses to allow him to do so.

Simple Kindness.

Any man should help any woman carry heavy bags, failing a porter, whether she is known to him or not. It is a simple acknowledgement of his superior physical strength and not a personal thing at all. Any woman should thank any man, no matter what his status or hers, for any favor either done or proffered. She should say "thank you" distinctly and pleasantly for retrieved articles, for relinquished seats, for carried bags, for being helped on or off a train, and any other thing a man does for her in the spirit of kindness, whether it is welcome to her or not.

Custom says a man shall carry packages for a woman of his acquaintance he may happen to meet. In this day of efficient deliveries it is a black mark against a woman's manners to be caught carrying packages. If she is caught she should resolutely refuse to allow a man to share her predicament. If he has a highly developed sense of delicacy he will not insist.

A man may carry a woman's coat for her, but that, too, is optional. He may carry an umbrella over her in the rain and he may carry a book, but he should never carry her personal things, like a vanity or a parasol, or even a fan.

The Case of the Married Pair.

All the things that apply to men and women apply equally to husband and wife, though it seems to be the idea of some people that when a man and woman have become husband and wife they cease to be man and woman to each other and therefore their obligations to manners and delicacy and thoughtfulness cease. On the contrary they should, if anything, increase the vigilance they keep over their manners to each other. If they do this it is safe to say they will not have morals to worry about.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

HOW TO MAKE LAMP SHADES.

It is so much less expensive to make than to buy a lamp shade that many women have learned to make their own. One of the most important parts is to make the right choice of materials and shapes. There is such a bewildering variety of materials and combinations of materials that choosing is not the easiest thing imaginable.

For living rooms plaited georgette over colors is pretty, using deep fringe or ruching for a finish. The lovely brocaded and printed materials stretched on plain also make pretty shades. For bedrooms one often sees dotted marquisette or silk net used over delicate colors and trimmed with lovely net or lace edgings ruffled on.

To begin the work of covering, wind ribbon that is sold for the purpose tightly around both the perpendicular and horizontal wires. This gives the foundation to which the materials are sewed. Cut a piece of ribbon three times the length of the wire to be covered; this is easier than handling the bolt. Slip it through at the top where the length and round wires meet and tie in a hard knot, leaving a short end. Then cover a wire, winding evenly and tightly, and when the end of the wire is reached turn the ribbon in and fasten securely or tie in a knot. The frame must be entirely covered with the ribbon before doing any other part of the work. Be sure to cover the wires where they meet and let the frame rest on a table instead of holding it in the lap.

To put the lining on lay a length of the silk on the inside of the frame, holding it in place around the top with pins. Clip around and above the top wire and cut away, leaving a good half inch margin above the wire to which it is to be sewed. Sew all around, using an over and over stitch, and let the raw edge go toward the right side. Then stretch the silk on smoothly, sticking pins in at close intervals all around the bottom. The pins, of course, are to go up and down, and not across. The same margin of silk is allowed at the bottom, letting it go toward the right side. The outside materials are put on in the same way.

In measuring the materials to be used, find the longest depth and allow a good inch more on the material. Cut by a thread. Four times the width to be covered should be allowed for plaited materials.

If georgette is to be plaited, for instance, on a twenty-six inch shade, five widths are allowed; for smaller sizes four widths are allowed. These must be cut by a thread and sewed together. The upper edge is turned in and gathered, using a short and long stitch. Take these stitches so that the long ones will stand out toward the right side when the thread is pulled up. Do not take stitches that are too long, and have them as even as possible.

When ready for the frame the distance around is divided into quarters, as is the georgette also, which is pinned into place and sewed over and over to the top of the frame, sewing between each long stitch. Laying the plaits at the bottom is a particular piece of work. Each stitch at the top is accounted for at the bottom, and no sewing is done until each plait has been pinned to the frame.

If the frame has a deep cuff, this is covered before putting on the rest; but if it is only one inch deep the covering is brought down over it, the sewing in place of each plait being done at the top and bottom of the cuff.

Be sure before accepting a frame that it hasn't been bent; then if you let the frame rest on a table while working, and you don't pull the material too tight, the result will be fine.

The Colored Cat's Unlucky Day

By Wm. Donahey

Mr. Nickeldick was just about to feed his Italian goldfish their morning breakfast of spaghetti when he happened to glance out of the window. His eyes nearly popped out of his rabbit head. He dropped the handful of sphaghetti on one of the fish, completely knocking it off its fins.

He could hardly believe his eyes as he saw the colored cat toss a plateful of bacon over her shoulder. Next she threw a slice of toast and a fried egg over her shoulder and followed that with two doughnuts.

Threw a fried egg over her shoulder.

"Tilly must have lost her mittens," he gasped to himself. "She must be crazy." He hurried into the kitchen and met the colored cat on the back porch.

"Tilly!" he exclaimed. "What in the name of catnip were you doing out there throwing that food away?"

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh," answered the colored cat, "Ah was jus' takin' de cuss off a powahful bad luck sign. Ah done sing befo' breakfast dis mo'ning, and dat is about de baddest luck yo' all can have. De only way yo' can done take de bad luck off is fo' to throw yo' breakfast ovah yo' left shouldah."

"Why, Tilly!" exclaimed Mr. Nickeldick. "You don't believe in signs like that, do you?"

"Yas, suh," answered Tilly mournfully, "Ah is strictly scientific 'bout these mattahs, but Ah was a little late gettin' mah breakfast ovah my shouldah and Ah hope we all don't have no bad luck today."

"Don't worry about that," laughed Mr. Nickeldick as he walked away; "there is no danger."

"Ah hope not," answered Tilly, "but

Peeped into the parlor.

Ah is afraid somethin' is gwine fo' to happen, especially as de papah hangah is done comin' today."

The colored cat busied herself clearing things out of the parlor, for Mr. Nickeldick had hired a paper hanger to do some work and he was expected at any minute.

The paper hanger was a fat pig with adenoids. He wore overalls up to his chin and chewed gum. He put up his ladder, made a big bucket of paste, and set to work, while the colored cat went mournfully about her work getting things ready for a gingerbread cake. She had just poured out a supply of molasses when she heard organ music coming from the street. She quickly wiped her hands on her apron and hurried to the front door. An Italian grayhound with an organ was making a trained mouse perform at the end of a string. Tilly hurried out to see the fun, but she had only a moment's pleasure, for a bumble bee, smelling the molasses, took after her and she fled for the house.

"There's some of dat bad luck comin'," she cried as she slammed the door. "Where yo' find a bumble bee yo' is gwine fo' to find bad luck."

The bumble bee was probably peeved at having the door slammed in its face, so it flew along until it reached one of the parlor windows that was open. It promptly flew in and nearly bumped into the paper hanger, who was standing on the stepladder. The pig saw the bee and struck at it with his paste brush. The bee dodged and stung the pig on the end of the nose.

The pig let out a bellow and fell off the ladder right into his bucket of paste. With his eyes blinded by the paste, the pig jumped up and started to run. He fell over the davenport and knocked down a rabbit clock. In getting to his feet he bumped his head against the mantel and upset four vases and a candlestick.

"LAWSY!" gasped the colored cat, who had heard all the noise out in the kitchen. "Dat sounds like ol' man bad luck hisself." She tremblingly tiptoed out into the hall and peeped through the parlor door. The pig was just climbing to his feet from the floor, where he had been rolling in the paste, paper, and other things that littered the place. He was almost entirely covered with pieces of paper, broken glass, clock wheels, and everything that would stick to his pasty self.

"HOWLIN' PARSNIPS," screamed the colored cat, "it's ol' man bad luck's ghost!"

She dashed out of the house and scampered up a dogwood tree before she had noticed what she had done.

"Ol' man bad luck is suttenly aftah me today," she cried. "Heah Ah done climb this tree fo' to get away from bad luck and Ah couldn't have done picked a worser tree. It's de baddest luck in de world fo' to climb a dogwood tree." She began to weep at the top of her cat lungs, which attracted the attention of a polecat policeman, who was passing by.

"What's wrong here?" asked the policeman, stopping under the tree.

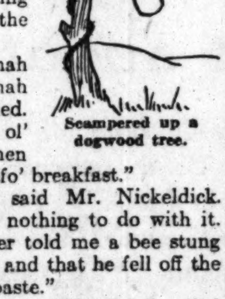
"Ol' man bad luck is cuttin' up in de house there," cried the colored cat, pointing toward the house.

The policeman ran into the house and found the paper hanger stuck fast to the floor, with Mr. Nickeldick standing over him.

"What's the trouble?" asked the policeman.

"I don't know," answered Mr. Nickeldick. "I just came in and found this mess of trash here." The policeman pulled off a strip of paper and the pig glared up at him.

"Why, it's the paper hanger!" exclaimed Mr. Nickeldick. They carried him up and put him into the bathtub, where it took nearly two hours to soak off the rubbish.



Scampered up a dogwood tree.

In the meantime the colored cat had come down from the tree and Mr. Nickeldick found her weeping softly in the kitchen.

"It's all mah fault; it's all mah fault," she cried. "Ah called in ol' man bad luck when Ah done sing befo' breakfast."

"Nonsense!" said Mr. Nickeldick. "You have had nothing to do with it. The paper hanger told me a bee stung him on the nose and that he fell off the ladder into the paste."

"'Tain't no use sayin' it ain't," wailed the colored cat. "It's ol' man bad luck. Ah went out fo' to heah de organ and ol' man bad luck sent dat bumble bee and he followed me into de house. No, suh! Ah ain't nevah goin' fo' to sing no moah befo' breakfast."

Boys, Here's a Chance to See the Sox Tackle the Yanks

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Are you ready, boys, for the news about our next big party? We're going to see one of the best baseball games of the year, a week from tomorrow, when the White Sox tackle the New York Yankees!

I don't know much about baseball, but I think you'll agree, boys, that we couldn't find a game that will be more important, or that will be harder fought. The Yankees are leading now, but the Sox are coming along, determined to reach the top, and we can be sure they'll give all they've got when they have the leaders on the old home lot and have a chance to take them down a notch. They tell me that Honey Boy Hunnefield is turning into a riot as a hitter, and I hear Bib Falk is going strong. So with them and the others on the team playing their limit, I'm sure the game will be something great to see. So get in your letters at once if you want to be among the lucky hundred winners!

I'm asking just the boys this time, because girls don't care much about baseball. But I'll make up for that. We're going to have some fine parties later that the girls will like, and I'll see they get their turn.

Another thing to notice is the date. Most of our parties come after the middle of the week, but this one will be a week from next Monday. And your letters must be in my hands, boys, by next Thursday morning, so I can pick the winners and announce them in next Sunday's paper. Also don't forget to give your street address and your age when you send your letters. Then watch next Sunday's paper for the names of the hundred winners!

Now here are the names of my hundred guests for our party at Ravinia this coming Thursday:

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Atherton Du Puy

Isn't it odd that one bird, the oriole, should have thought of putting its nest on the tip of a swinging bough where none of the creatures that prowl can get at it and that none of its fellows in feathers should have been smart enough to follow its example!

This bird selects a great tree with overhanging branches. Out where the long limbs hang down toward the ground it finds three or four twigs that swing close together. It binds these to each other with string it has stolen from the man creature's yard. It weaves a basket between them. There it places its eggs to be rocked by the winds until the little ones have hatched and have grown wings that warrant their going over the side.

But consider the security of that nest. The prowling snake, for instance, devours eggs and young birds. Many a nest of mockingbird, hidden in a blackberry bush, has been despoiled by snakes. No such reptile, however, could ever make the perilous trip to the oriole's nest.

The robin builds its home in the crotch of a tree, or in the vines beside the balcony. The tabby cat that sleeps so peacefully on the doormat by day fares forth by night, climbs to the nest of the robin, seizes the mother while she broods, devours her and finishes out a meal on the youngsters in pin feathers. But no tabby can climb that tall tree, follow one of those limbs in its reach out into space, and climb down those tiny branches to where the oriole cradle is swung.

Even the squirrel which is, upon occasion, a robber of bird's nests, and whose natural playground is the trees, would have difficulty in reaching this basket of the oriole.

There are yet those thieves from birds' nests, the marauding crow and the prowling screech owl, fitted out with wings and unafraid of tumbling. Even these, however, have no secure footing upon which to perch on these limb tips and are not much given to hunting dinners in oriole nests.

To the tree that furnishes just the right sort of branches for oriole nests these birds offer to render an important service as though in payment for rent. They agree to devote themselves to picking insects that are enemies of the trees, in there among the branches. They specialize, however, in a certain hairy caterpillar that other birds will not disturb. Even the oriole will not swallow such a caterpillar, but it rips open the hairy coat and gets itself a tasty morsel out of the very vitals of the fuzzy one.

Marjorie did not like the idea of a new baby brother. When her mother returned home from the hospital their meeting was a joyful one, and as Marjorie settled herself on the bed for a happy chat she noticed the little stranger on the other side of her mother.

With a small forefinger pointed at the unwanted playmate, Marjorie demanded, "When is that hospital baby going back to the hospital?"

Rich, a small friend of mine, is rather set in his way and hates anything out of the ordinary. His aunt sent him one of the new long suits for boys and his mother, putting it on him, sent him over to show me how he looked in it. After duly praising it to make him like it better, for I could see he was uncomfortable in it, I asked him if he didn't think it was fine.

"I don't like it," was his answer, "'cause it don't feel like me in it."

Lucretia and her little playmate were going to the drug store to get ice cream cones. Lucretia called to her Aunt May and asked her if she would like to have them bring her one.

"Mercy, no," replied Aunt May, emphatically, "you forget I'm not eating sweets."

"Why doesn't your auntie eat cones?" demanded Rosemary.

Lucretia tossed her curls rather scornfully and replied, "O, she's trying to get along without pounds."

Women Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.

They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement, but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MRS. J.: IT IS NOT TRUE THAT night air is bad air, as many people believe. Open the windows wide in your sleeping room—preferably raise them from the bottom and lower them from the top. Do this, allowing yourself the allotted eight hours, and you'll wake up greatly refreshed and ready for the day's work.

MISS F. H.: FOR REDUCING THE fat under the arms and on the upper arms, try the following exercises: Stand erect, abdomen flat, knees straight, arms extended full length straight out from the shoulders. Begin to make circles, with the extended arms and hands; begin with small ones and gradually increase until the circles are as large as you can describe, without putting the body out of position. Do this several times a day, for a period of a month, and see what an improvement there will be. For additional exercises send along a stamped addressed envelope.

G. W. A.: TRY THESE EXERcises for strengthening weak arches: Stand and try to clutch the carpet with the toes, by turning the toes under as far as possible. Then relax. Stand with the toes together, heels three or four inches apart, then raise the feet with the toes together, keeping the heels on the floor. Replace. Repeat each exercise ten times, gradually increasing. These exercises should be done barefooted or in stocking feet.

Spanish Opera to Be Heard at Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

OCCUPYING a prominent place in the bulletins from the Ravinia offices this week is the announcement of a novelty. It is Manuel de Falla's "La Vida Breve," one of the few Spanish operas ever heard outside of Spain, and presented in New York only last winter. It will come on Saturday night, and Lucrezia Bori will sing the leading part.

FLORENCE MACBETH
Soloist at Ravinia concert Monday night.
[Daguerre Photo.]

Spanish music, operatically considered, first began to attract attention in this country in 1915-16, when Enrique Granados came to New York to superintend the production of his "Goyescas." Shortly thereafter he was drowned in the English channel, presumably as part of a war time measure tending to make the world safe for democracy. Since his death, De Falla has been reckoned as the foremost Spanish composer. He is known here chiefly by some orchestral works presented from time to time by Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra, by a ballet, "L'Amor Brujo," staged two years ago by Adolph Bolm, who also danced therein, and by a few pieces of smaller dimensions.

"La Vida Breve," which you can translate "The Brief Life," if you desire, was composed in 1913, and therefore ranks as one of De Falla's more youthful works. I am told, however, that it is an interesting score, full of the fluent tunes, spirited rhythms, and characteristic Spanish touches by which his other music is recognized.

The libretto is by Carlos Fernandez-Shaw, and you may not be surprised to learn, in connection with what is known of other operatic plots, that the story deals with faith and betrayal mingled with passion and vengeance. The scene is laid in Granada with its touch of oriental color and its background of poetry, and more definitely in the quarter inhabited by the gypsies.

The Story Is About a Gypsy Girl.

Here lives Salud, an attractive gypsy girl, with her old grandmother and her uncle, Sarvaor, a mighty blacksmith. But Salud has seen beyond the walls of her own neighborhood. She is young and pretty, and as she has gone about the city on her own occasions, she has met Paco, a young upper class Spaniard. Salud is no Carmen, no vamp or temptress. She falls sincerely in love with Paco and believes him when he tells her of his own love.

So in the first act all is happiness, preparations of the little home for the lover's visit, a love duet punctuated by the clang of Sarvaor's anvil in the forge near by. Soon the sound of the anvil ceases, and Sarvaor enters in no gentle mood, having learned that Paco is not the devoted lover he pretends to be, but is already betrothed to a girl of his own station. He is ready to kill Paco, but seeing Salud's happiness, his resolve fades.

In the next act the scene shifts to the home of Carmela, Paco's betrothed, filled with guests who have come for the betrothal festivities. Gypsy dancers appear, and after them Salud, who has learned the truth, and has come with her family for vengeance. They are mistaken for entertainers and invited to enter. She shows up Paco before his friends, but on the point of forgiving him after all, she drops dead from excitement. A complicated gypsy curse rolls out from the lips of Sarvaor to the head of Paco.

This, as briefly as possible, is what will take place on the Ravinia stage Saturday night. Miss Bori will be the Salud, and as she happens to be Spanish, and, more to the point, is an uncommonly interesting, expert, and stagewise artist, there is reason to hope for something out of the ordinary in the performance. José Mojica will appear as Paco, and Louis Hasselmans will conduct. By the way, the opera will be sung in Spanish.

At the Halfway Post.

With "La Vida Breve" the Ravinia season will pass the halfway post. Thirty-six days, twenty different operas, and not a failure among them. In fact the greater part of them have been superlative. That, if you like, is a bit of a record as records go, these days. Any other opera company anxious to compete is invited to step up and try this on its conductor's stand.

The more one looks at the situation, the more surprising it seems. I, who a year ago went across the ocean to find out, say to you that Europe holds nothing comparable to it, and I saw all sorts of performances, some carefully and intelligently rehearsed, some perfunctory and careless. The best of them would never have dared to put on one-half or one-third the number of operas that Mr. Eckstein has shaken out of his sleeve in five weeks, and if they had, the best of the performances would have been yards, furlongs, miles below Ravinia's worst.

In fact, if Mr. Eckstein had had the temerity to consider a season with no better casts of artists than those I heard in Europe, he would not now be regarding the halfway mark of his season, but would have been obliged to close his gates.

This is a good time to boost America and Ravinia first. For one thing, it is the solemn, unassailable truth.

Operatic Drive Is on in Italy.

Italy would seem to be going ahead with plans for a full sized operatic drive. The city of Rome has recently purchased the Costanzi theater for 16,000,000 lire, and Pietro Mascagni is mentioned as its probable musical director. There is also word that Premier Mussolini has ambitions to construct a new and splendid opera house out near the ancient Coliseum, to be called the Teatro Imperiale, and that he is considering the financial and artistic aspects necessary to put his ideas into execution. This latter is apparently the undertaking of which Giorgio Polacco was offered the musical directorship a year ago.

Venice will have another music festival in September, with programs of old and contemporary opera and chamber music. There are plans for an opera season at the Teatro Venice to include Orazio Vecchi's "Amfiparnaso," Galuppi's "Socrato Immaginario," Rossini's "L'Italiana in Algeri," Malipiero's "The Comedies After Goldoni," Casella's "La Giara," Stravinsky's "Mavra," and Moussorgsky's "The Matchmaker." There will be concerts of old music at the Doges' palace and modern chamber music recitals at the Liceo Marcello. Such a season in Venetian surroundings ought to be something worth hearing.

Herbert Johnson Writes from Florence.

Herbert M. Johnson, business manager of the Chicago Civic Opera company, prepares to wind up his season of scouting through Europe for talent and return home. He writes from Florence:

"When we were in Florence in the early spring the river was on a rampage, but now it is a tranquil thing of beauty; the soft winds sweep down from the mountain tops of the Apennines, and Florence seems much as it must have been in ages past. It possesses such a wealth of art gems and has so many cultural interests that opera is an incident here, whereas it is the life of other Italian communities, such as Milan. Still, music is by no means neglected in Florence. It has been an ideal spot in which to ruminate on the activities of the summer and the fruits of our quest for new artists and material for the coming Chicago season. The work is far from finished, and there are a number of singers and novelties under consideration, concerning which nothing can be said at this time without adversely affecting the pending negotiations. As of date two works unfamiliar to Chicago audiences have been arranged for—Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde," which will, of course, be sung in German,

GOOD morning!

Well, "The Sheik's" little boy Ahmed has grown up a handsome devil like his illustrious father, with daddy's same decided penchant for blondes. And the fix HE got in with his particular fair lady furnished the plot for a story that has made a thrilling and colorful photoplay.

VILMA BANKY.
She is the heroine in "The Son of the Sheik."

So long as the human race—races—along to its uncertain destination, it must have its romance for refreshment. To the women—who have been largely responsible for the success of Rudolph Valentino—he is Romance personified—an ideal realized. They don't love him They wouldn't for one minute swap what they drew at the altar for him, but just the same he is of significance in their lives because he lets them dream a little—dreams that are, after all, nothing more nor less than the naive dreams of childhood. Little girl dreams that put into words were, you know, girls, a good deal like this——:

"When I grow up I'm going to marry a prince. He must be tall and dark and have beautiful brown eyes and he must love me so much that when my folks say I can't marry him, why he'll come on his horse some night and grab me up and put me on the saddle behind him and gallop away with me. When my father finds how rich he is and that I have a house with seventy-five rooms and gold dishes, and——" and so on.

Re-living an Old Dream.

The house with the seventy-five rooms and the gold dishes has never come true and the little girl who is a great big lady by now has married a blonde with an automobile—or maybe NOT an automobile—and she's a happy woman. But the little girl dream is still locked in her heart and clamors sometimes to come out—and DOES come out in the dim coolness of the picture palace.

"The Son of the Shiek" is a charming picture and Mr. Valentino sure does make that son give a great account of himself! The star plays two rôles—the son and the sheik—and you will say for Rudy that the advancing years need worry him not at all! A touch of silver in the hair and a slightly frosted Van Dyke beard are monstrously becoming to the gentleman. As the father he is an imperious and distinguished person.

Agnes Ayres, who was the heroine in "The Shiek," returns to the screen from her retirement, which I understand is permanent, for a few brief shots. She appears with Valentino in several scenes. The Diana of the first picture is plump and comfortable looking now, but her acting is as it always was.

Vilma Banky as Yasmin, the heroine, is adorable. She's the composite beauty, you know. Reminds you of ALL your crushes. The supporting cast is splendid. The direction is ditto and the photography is simply grand. There are some of the most beautiful location shots I think I ever saw. Desert stuff.

Now I'll tell you a bit about the story. The son of the shiek, as said before, is the spit'n image of his father. Adventuresome and brave and gallant always. Foolhardy often. His father and mother have chosen mother's pretty cousin as a mate for him and she is expected soon on a visit. Not so bright of father and mother, wotting the sort of son they have.

However, Ahmed is far from worried and with his two faithful servitors gallops here and yon across the desert, like the wind, blowing where he listeth.

She's a Bold, Bad Bandit's Daughter.

Alighting one day in a market place he spots one, whom immediate investigation reveals to him is Yasmin, a dancing girl. The money thrown to Yasmin she hands right over to her father who is head of a band of hill bandits.

Ahmed seeks her out, hears her story and begs to be allowed to assist her. But Yasmin (NOT the Swedish pronounciation of Jasmine) laughs what I imagine is a silvery, tinkling laugh, and pushes his money aside.

"It would do me no good," she says. "It would just be taken away from me."

"But when may I see you?" begs the now ardent lover. As had his father, he knows instantly when he has met his fate—and Yasmin is that.

Yasmin tells him that on moonlight nights she wanders alone among certain ruins about twenty leagues or so out on the desert. It's a long ride, but Ahmed says, isn't that fine—he'll be out every night.

And he is. His two servitors he permits to accompany him just—so—far. After that he goes alone despite their protestations and warnings of danger.

And then one night something awful happens. I told you, you know, the sort of folks Yasmin's father and his cohorts are? Were. There aren't many of them left by the end of the picture.

BEING the kind they are—WERE—they surround the lovers and pounce on Ahmed from behind. He tries to draw his gun, but, lo, at Yasmin's request he has laid it aside. The bandits laugh merrily at his discomfiture and hang him up by the thumbs.

"What is your father's name—we would have ransom of him?" they say. But Ahmed is adamantine. They could hang him by the eyebrows and be none the wiser.

They carry Yasmin away, home, leaving only one ugly little cuss to torture him. Depart, after the huskiest of the bandits, Ghabah by name, has sneered at him, called him a fool and told him that Yasmin has not loved, but only lured him. She is the official lurer for their company, Ghabah tells him.

He Waits Only for Revenge.

Along towards morning the faithful servitors appear on the scene and release the young marster, who goes immediately into a dark and revengeful silence, biding his time when he can get back at the faithless Yasmin. How should he know that Ghabah has lied—he. Ghabah being in love with the girl himself and insanely jealous of the son of the sheik?

His friends ask of his servitors: "What is the matter?" and are told it is just the old story of man who had putteth his faith in a dancing girl. They smile and wag their heads and prophesy he'll get over it. But does he? He certainly doesn't.

One day, while standing on a balcony he sees her dancing beneath him in the square. His time has come!

I don't believe I should spoil a perfectly good story for you by telling you what happens from here on. It's plenty, though, and if the sheik's encounters with Diana thrilled you, why it's safe to say you won't leave the theater while Ahmed and Yasmin are working out their own salvation.

Like "Don Q, Son of Zorro," "The Son of the Sheik" has son carry on after the manner of father, with father himself entering toward the last to proffer needed aid. Like the former film, the latter is full of fighting and fondness, with

Hymn to the Truth

By H. L. Mencken.

ON May 23 last, writing in this place, I told the strange, sad story of an article that I printed in the New York Evening Mail, a paper now happily extinct, on Dec. 28, 1917. That article, thrown off as a relief from the patriotic libido of war time, was, in substance, a burlesque history of the bath tub. I may confess that, when it was done, I fancied it no little. It was artfully devised, and it contained some buffooneries of considerable juiciness. I had confidence that the customers of the Evening Mail would like it.

Alas, they liked it only too well. That is to say, they swallowed it as gospel, gravely and horribly. Worse, they began sending clippings of it to friends east, west, north, and south, and so it spread to other papers, and then to the magazines and weeklies of opinion, and then to the scientific press, and finally to the reference books. Its transparent wheezes got themselves converted into sober history. It accumulated corroborative detail. To this day it is in circulation, and, as I say, has broken into the reference books, and is there embalmed for the instruction and edification of posterity.

On May 23, writing here, I exposed it at length. I pointed out some of the obvious absurdities in it. I confessed categorically that it was all buncombe. I called upon the historians of the land to take it out of their books. This confession and appeal was printed simultaneously in nearly thirty great American newspapers. One of them was the eminent Boston Herald, organ of the New England illuminati. The Herald printed my article on page 7 of its editorial section, under a four column head, and with a two column cartoon labeled satirically, "The American public will swallow anything." And then on June 13, three weeks later, in the same editorial section but promoted to page 1, this same Herald reprinted my 10 year old fake—soberly and as a piece of news!

Do not misunderstand me: I am not seeking to cast a stone at the Herald or at its talented and patriotic editors. It is, I believe, one of the glories of American journalism. It labors unceasingly for virtue and the flag. If it were suppressed by the Watch and Ward society tomorrow New England would revert instantly to savagery, wolves and catamounts would roam in Boylston street, and the Harvard Law school would be engulfed by bolshevism. Little does the public reck what great sums such journals expend to establish and disseminate the truth. It may cost $10,000 and a reporter's leg to get a full and accurate list of the guests at a Roxbury wake, with their injuries.

My point is that, despite all this extravagant frenzy for the truth, there is something in the human mind that turns instinctively to fiction, and that even journalists succumb to it. A German philosopher, Dr. Hans Vaihinger, has put the thing into a formal theory, and you will find it expounded at length in his book, "The Philosophy of As If." It is a sheer impossibility, says Dr. Vaihinger, for human beings to think exclusively in terms of the truth. For one thing, the stock of indubitable truths is too scanty. For another thing, there is the instinctive aversion to them that I have mentioned. All of our thinking, according to Vaihinger, is in terms of assumptions, many of them plainly not true. Into our most solemn and serious reflections fictions enter—and three times out of four they quickly crowd out all the facts.

That this is true needs no argument. Every man, thinking of his wife, has to assume that she is beautiful and amiable, else despair will seize him and he will be unable to think at all. Every American, contemplating Dr. Coolidge, is physically bound to admire him: the alternative is anarchy. Every Christian, viewing the clergy, is forced into a bold theorizing to save himself from Darwinism. And all of us, taking stock of ourselves, must resort to hypothesis to escape the river.

What ails the truth is that it is mainly uncomfortable, and often dull. The human mind seeks something more amusing, and more caressing. What the actual history of the bath tub may be I don't know: digging it out would be a dreadful job, and the result, after all that labor, would probably be a string of banalities. The fiction I concocted back in 1917 was at least better than that. It lacked sense, but it was certainly not without a certain charm. There were heroes in it, and villains. It revealed a conflict, with virtue winning. So it was embraced by mankind, precisely as the story of George Washington and the cherry tree was embraced, and it will live, I daresay, until it is displaced by something worse—and hence better.

In other words, it was poetry. And what is poetry? Poetry is simply a mellifluous statement of the obviously not true. The two elements are both important, and perhaps equally. It is not sufficient that the thing said be untrue: it must also be said with a certain grace—it must soothe the ear while it debauches the mind. And it is not sufficient that it be voluptuous: it must also offer a rock and a refuge from the harsh facts of every day. All poetry embodies a lie. It may be an objective lie, as in "God's in His heaven; all's well with the world." Or it may be a subjective lie, as in "I am the master of my fate." But it must be a lie—and preferably a thumping one.

Poets, in general, protest against this doctrine. They argue that they actually deal in the truth, and that their brand of truth is of a peculiarly profound and esoteric quality—in other words, that their compositions add to the sum of human wisdom. It is sufficient answer to them to say that chiropractors make precisely the same claim, and with exactly the same plausibility. Both actually deal in fictions. Those fictions are not truth; they are not even truths in decay. They are simply better than truths. They make life more comfortable and happy. They turn and dull the sharp edge of reality.

It is commonly held that the vast majority of men are anesthetic to poetry, as they are alleged to be anesthetic to other forms of beauty, but this is itself a fiction, devised by poets to dignify their trade, and make it seem high toned and mysterious. The fact is that the love of poetry is one of the most primitive of human traits, and that it appears in children almost as soon as they learn to speak. I do not refer here to the love of verbal jingles, but to the love of poetry properly so-called—that is, to the love of the agreeably not so. A little girl who nurses a rag doll is a poet, and so is a boy who plays at soldiers with a box of clothes pins. Their ma is another poet when she brags about them to the neighbors, and their pa when he praises the cooking of their ma.

The more simple minded the individual, indeed, the greater his need of poetry, and hence the more steady his demand for it. No poet approved by the intelligentsia ever had so many customers as Edgar A. Guest. Guest's dithyrambs are laughed at by the intelligentsia, not because the things they say are not so, but because the fiction in them is of a kind not satisfying to sniffish and snooty men. It is fiction suitable to persons of a less critical habit. It preaches the joys open to the humble. It glorifies their dire necessities. It cries down their lacks. It promises them happiness, and if not happiness, then at least contentment. No wonder it is popular! No wonder it is intoned every time Kiwanians get together and the reassuring slapping of backs begins. It is itself a sort of back slapping.

And so is all other poetry. The strophes of Robert Browning elude the Kiwanian, but they are full of soothing for the young college professor, for they tell him that it is a marvelous and exhilarating thing to be as intellectual as he is. This, of course, is not true—which is the chief reason why it is pleasant. No normal human being wants to hear the truth. It is the passion of a small and aberrant minority of men, most of them pathological. They are hated for telling it while they live, and when they die they are swiftly forgotten. What remains to the world, in the field of wisdom, is a series of long tested and solidly agreeable lies.

DENVER RECALLS OLD DAYS OF THE THEATER

By Burns Mantle.

DENVER, Colo.—[Special Correspondence.]—The day of reminiscence came suddenly upon me. I had been young till yesterday—young, if not peppy; and not too scornful of those who try to do the Charleston.

Then I walked into the lobby of the theater in Elitch's gardens, in Denver, and realized that here was not only the scene of my theater beginnings, but the very cradle in which had been reared the modern stock company movement from which the more modern Little theater movement has sprung.

FLORENCE ELDRIDGE
is doing her part to promote clean drama.
[Moody Photo.]

It was here, thirty good years ago, that Mary Elitch, owning a lovely garden which it had been the dream of her dead husband, John Elitch, one time minstrel, to make into a great family amusement park, decided to add a dramatic stock company to the attractions. James Neill and Edythe Chapman, now familiar to a new generation of playgoers through their motion picture successes, were the leading players, and from this company in succeeding years sprung both the Giffen-Neill company that carried the new drama to the Pacific coast by way of Salt Lake and the northwest, and the Tim Frawley company that started in San Francisco and afterward played around the world.

It was Mary Elitch's success with this company that inspired the formation of other stock companies through the west. And it was the standards of decency and respectability that she has maintained and guaranteed for thirty years that have set so definite a mark for all other amusement park proprietors to shoot at.

I met her the other evening, a cheerful little lady walking about the garden that others have taken over and honorably managed in her interests, and in accordance with her ideals. Children still flock to Elitch's unchaperoned and their mothers know they are safe. There is a great dance hall, but less funny dancing than there is in your living room. The plays in the theater are this year's plays, but any that might give offense are discreetly, rather than arbitrarily, weeded out. They were playing "Craig's Wife" the week I was there and "The Poor Nut" the week I left.

I saw the Kelly play with Cora Witherspoon giving a particularly sharp and interesting performance in the Chrystal Herne rôle, and I thrilled a little to find that old Elitch traditions were being maintained. It was an intelligent and technically even performance, staged in a week by Melville Burke, and without slavish copying of the Broadway original. Also it pleases me to report that it was the biggest financial success the Gardens theater has had in years. I should like to see this most worthy Pulitzer prize winner do well on tour.

Where People Demand Clean Plays.

I found another interesting development of the stock company influence out here. The sentimental regard in which the audiences hold the players practically guarantees the character and basic cleanliness of the plays produced. The people themselves put the burden of decency upon the actors and are plainly reluctant to forgive deliberate departures from a fairly straight path. They don't want to hear them swear and are most unhappy when they go wrong.

This evident respect for the cleaner plays has impressed the managers, and they have indorsed it. Manager Mulvihill, deservedly proud of his record in carrying on the Elitch traditions since the war, even draws the line at "They Knew What They Wanted." He neither wants Florence Eldridge, his leading woman, to play the Pauline Lord type of heroine, nor does he relish the risk of offending his loyal family trade.

This decision denies Miss Eldridge a part I know she could play most creditably, and the Denver playgoers a view of a well written, stirringly emotional, and vitally human drama. But I am not so sure both players and playgoers are not the gainers in the end.

Most of the great actors of our time have played at Elitch's. As Carleton Miles has written, it is the only theater in the west, outside of San Francisco, that can boast a real tradition. Mrs. Fiske played "Rosmersholm" there in the days when she was fighting the theatrical trust. Sarah Bernhardt gave both "Camille" and "La Sorciere" in the Gardens theater the year she made her famous tent tour of the west. David Warfield had a notable engagement there when he first took "The Music Master" to the coast. Henrietta Crosman and Blanche Bates have both played Rosalind in the Gardens, and I recall that for the Bates production they tore out the back of the stage and lighted up a very real Forest of Arden for the lovers to play in. When they revived "The Sporting Duchess" they opened the stage doors and drove a coach and four across the stage, while a summer breeze swayed the stage foliage.

First Among Stock Companies.

Of recent years they have had the pick of modern plays, such is the confidence of the profession in the company and the management. "Yours is the premier stock company of America," wired George Kelly, with his indorsement of the "Craig's Wife" engagement.

It is a bigger, handsomer garden today than it was when Mary Elitch and I and the Tom Long she married knew it first. But it can never be as dear to us again. Our love of the theater was youthful and keen then and there was an unforgettable pride in the things we hoped we were helping to do for the good of a cause. There was a real thrill in renewing a memory of Elitch's.

They are proud of their sons and daughters in this western country and a little vain of their eastern educations, which is human.

Mother invariably begins a family reminiscence with something like "When my oldest girl was home from Miss Spence's school last week she was saying——"

And papa's approach shot is usually something like "Ever get up to New Haven? The boy's at Yale. Like to have you meet him."

"My son loves the theater," one proud mamma told me. "We were really afraid when he left Cornell he would go on the stage! Imagine! And now my second son—tell me, Mr. Mantle, do you think college dramatics are a bad influence?"

"No," I answered, determined to be true to my alma mater. "No, I can't say that I do. I, for example, went to the Arapahoe Street school and sang 'Woodman, Spare that Tree,' louder than anybody, the day we dedicated City park. But I never had the least ambition to take up either opera or forestry."

"I suppose it all depends on talent," she sympathized. "Either you have it or you haven't."

In the Grip of Bicycling.

When I lived in Denver we were in the grip of bicycling and had no love of the mountain roads. The flatter the better and the faster. The foothill towns ten and twelve miles away were as far as we ever ventured and the nearby cañons were little known to us, save as points to visit on vacation day jaunts by train. Now the mountains are literally the playground of thousands.

We went up Lookout and picnicked on Genessee, climbing practically 3,000 feet from the Denver plains (which are only a mile high) in less than an hour. That night, over back of the hills, nature staged a deep blue-black sunset, ever so lightly shot with gold, that proved a supreme novelty. It failed to remind any one of Maxfield Parrish.

That night, too, we ate tenderloin sandwiches and stuffed eggs, sitting around a campfire. New York was 1,700 and San Francisco 1,300 odd miles away, according to the milepost at the forks of the road—just below a Rocky mountain silver fox farm with $300,000 worth of animated pelts behind its acres of wire netted pens.

We did not leave town until after 4 and were back down Bear Creek cañon and home again by 11. The motor car has completely changed life in the vacation state. It has turned what were once the most inaccessible and always the most

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

MR. MENCKEN, in a recent feuilleton in THE TRIBUNE, complained that in none of the encyclopedias could he find anything about the burlesque-shows, which he said he regarded as a significant and an important American activity. Letters referring to this minor phase of Mr. Mencken's interesting, valid, and characteristic paper ask me why it is that I have waited for that writer to point out something properly belonging to my department, and expressing a mild wonder that the newspapers do not pay a measure of attention to these exhibitions,—"which," Russell M. Kennett insists, "must have their merits in order, week-after-week and year-after-year, to draw millions of people into their far-flung chain of special theaters in the United States and Canada." Mr. Kennett adds: "Not that I care for these shows; but there is a lot in the theater that I don't like. I see no reason why, because I don't like something, it may not possess values according to its own standards."

LESTER ALLEN
He's in the show named Le Maire's Affairs, and is funny.

My answer is that I'm not in agreement with Mr. Mencken, even to the mild extent of holding that a first-class encyclopedia, to be comprehensive, should take note of the burlesque-shows. They don't mean anything: they lack character, definition, and aim, not to say design or form. I have seen nine or ten, maybe, in the last decade, and have found in none of them an incentive to see another. Since, about twenty years ago, these shows were subjected to a censorship by the magnates of the business and "cleaned up," they have been the worst and the most consistent bore in the entire field of stage-entertainment. I have not in at least fifteen years seen an audience at "burlesque" enjoy itself. The attitude of the spectators is always that of paired resignation, as if to indicate that they had paid their money, been cheated, and are without means of redress.

It isn't that the old-line burlesque-shows were unwholesome in their frank, naive indecency. They had their special clientèle, their knowledge of what was expected and desired, and their standards and, as the years rolled on, something like traditions. The notion that they were unfit for women to see is twaddle: there is more offense to be derived from four in five of the so-called "revues" than was to be seen or heard in ten seasons of pre-censor "burlesque." The comic men of those shows were bent on making laughter, and had no knowledge of any other method than being "raw" in speech and antic. The "clean" show of recent years is, somehow, immeasurably more indecent than was the old exhibit.

And this reaction is not peculiar to me. As a prosperous division of the theatrical business, the "burlesque" seems to be through, or nearly through. The theaters of the circuit are to be occupied many weeks of next season by plays that have had their day in the two-fifty field: "White Cargo," "Kosher Kitty Kelly," and ten or twelve more pieces are to be acted in alternation with the "burleycues," as they are called in the lingo. The word "burlesque" is to be dropped from use: the explanation is that the meaning of the word has been lowered through its use by managers not in sympathy with "clean shows." The correct sense of the word, as a matter of fact, was destroyed years ago by its use as a trade-mark for performances that had nothing to do with true burlesque: the word for a quarter-century and longer has connoted something else to the theater-going public. What two-fifty theater-goer would have gone to see "The Tavern" if Mr. Cohan had advertised it for what it was—a burlesque? How many theater-goers think of the delightful fun of the Weberfields as burlesque? Yet, that is what they gave: they and their companions made up the best troupe of burlesque-actors ever organized in this country. Richard Mansfield told me that he did not dare to do what he wanted to do in staging H. Greenough Smith's "Castle Sombras" when the public's fondness for cape-and-sword stuff of the Zenda pattern was at its warmest: that is, to advertise the play as a burlesque.

G. J. N. on His Own Business.

> In the career of the critic of the theater, there are three more or less distinct periods: first, the period in which he passionately believes and vehemently conjures the theater to be a lyceum of art; second, the period in which he passionately hopes and vehemently prays that the theater may be a lyceum of art; and, third, the period in which he rather good-naturedly comes to the conclusion that his view of the theater has been all wrong, and doesn't admit it.
> Does the play interest, and whom? This seems to me to be the only doctrine of dramatic criticism that is capable of supporting itself soundly. First, does the play interest? In other words, how far has the dramatist succeeded in expressing himself, and the materials before him, intelligently, eloquently, symmetrically, beautifully? So much for the criticism of the dramatist as artist. In the second place, whom does the play interest? Does it interest inferior persons, or does it interest cultivated and artistically-sensitive persons? So much for the criticism of the artist as dramatist.—George Jean Nathan in the American Mercury for July.

Miscellany.

Impending plays are named, respectively, "Americans All" and "My Country." Wallace Ford, here in the run of "Pigs," is to head the cast of the former. Frederick Burton, Miss Louise Randolph, Lee Kohlmar, and Miss Erin O'Brien-Moore are well-knowns cast for "My Country."

"Wet Paint," which the London press regarded as rather audacious, is to be acted in this country. It is by the Earl of Lathom, who has written a second piece, named "The Way You Look at It."

Frederick Lonsdale, author of "Spring Cleaning" and the stupid piece named "Aren't We All?" has written something named "On Approval"; and Mr. Dillingham is soon to stage it. . . . Mr. Lonsdale and Irving Berlin are not going through with their agreement to work as collaborators on a song-and-dance play.

George Grossmith, the London comedian, has taken Miss Anita Loos' "The Whole Town's Talking!" for his city. . . . He has been playing there in the long run of "No! No, Nanette!" in the rôle of the attorney, acted here for a time by Bernard Granville and later by Wellington Cross.

John Drinkwater has made a play from Thomas Hardy's fine and forgotten novel of "The Mayor of Casterbridge." . . . And St.-John Ervine, a London drama-critic who has written two or three good plays and at least as many bad ones, has the venerable Hardy's permission to dramatize "Jude the Obscure," "The Return of the Native" (another fine and forgotten tale), and "The Trumpet-Major." . . . Having made his own dramatization of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," the novelist doesn't care to have anybody else make one,—although I have an idea his bank-account is all the better for the one made in this country by the late Lorimer Stoddard and acted successfully by Mrs. Fiske.

"What Price Glory" Stirs War's Thrills

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Bursting bombs, sky scaling rockets, and the tick-tick of machine guns made the sky in Fox hills lurid for the night scenes being enacted of "What Price Glory."

Acres of hill and dale covered with the ruins of buildings, uprooted trunks of orchard trees, and half demolished country garden walls made a realistic setting for hundreds of war veterans clad in the khaki of war time who were doing charges and countercharges amid a deafening roar of shells. Real hazards of flying dirt and timbers were encountered by noncombatant observers and the banks of pungent smoke rolling over the scene smarted the eyes of spectators unaccustomed to the glare of the kleigs.

A large number of Hollywood folk turned out to watch the scenes being shot, as "What Price Glory's" war mimicry is most pretentious in extent and elaboration. Branch lined trenches with sand bag mounds above them wound over a considerable area, and let it be stated right here that the boys in those trenches needed something like the actual protection the sand bags afforded. No Man's Land was gutted with shell holes, some of which were occupied by clusters of soldiers manipulating machine guns with continual spits of sound and flame.

Perfect Realism.

Among the spectators noted were Sojin, the Chinese actor, and several of his friends; Miriam Cooper, wife of Raoul Walsh, the director, and formerly an actress herself with Griffith.

Realism had been carried out to such an extent that there was no comfortable smooth surface on the ground for visitors to sit on. One interested old gentleman in Sojin's party carefully spread his handkerchief to sit down on, but by the time he was seated he was not on the handkerchief at all.

The weinie and hamburger wagons that always hover on the edge of a night location were doing a thriving business, not a little of it being with Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen, the Sergt. Quirt and Capt. Flagg of the picture.

The boys are having a great time speaking the tough titles required by the story so that the lady visitors don't hear them.

Bebe Daniels Engaged.

Bebe Daniels' announcement to the effect that she and Charley Paddock, the athlete, are to be married within the year astonished all Hollywood. Charley can be found almost any time on Bebe's set watching her work when he is not working with her, for Charlie is vivacious Bebe's leading man in her present film, "The Campus Flirt."

Charley is Bebe's second athletic favorite. It still is in Hollywood's memory that before Jack Dempsey became interested in Estelle Taylor Bebe and he were announced as affianced. And still prior to that she was announced as engaged to Harold Lloyd. That was in 1918.

Bebe springs a new one on the muddy shoes gag in this picture. She goes boat riding with Gilbert Roland and when he gets funny she swims home. She does the swimming in a lovely fringed gown, so that when she emerges from the waves with her reputation intact she looks quite all right, for the fringes still hang nicely, although wet.

John Roche was faced with a problem of conduct in his work in "The Return of Peter Grimm," which he is making for Fox. He is supposed in the story to administer a hearty slapping to little Mickey McBann, who is a long standing friend of his. The two of them finally get it done to the director's satisfaction, but John is still fuming over the hard life of being a villain in pictures.

Over at the new Paramount studio every one is daily witnessing the touching devotion of the Cantor family. Eddie is busily engaged in making "Kid Boots" and every evening at the end of his day's work he is met by Mrs. Cantor and the four little Cantor girls, Marjorie, 11; Natalie, 10; Edna, 7, and Marilyn, 5.

As It Was in Russia.

Conway Tearle and John Miljan are sporting grand before the war Russian uniforms over at the Warner Brothers' studios, where Irene Rich is making "My Official Wife." Swanky bottle green coats, much laden with gold braid and insignia, are worn with small red hats banded with black astrakhan. Long, clanking swords protrude from under the coattails in a most martial manner and spurs clank merrily as they tramp about in the Muscovite inn, in which they find Irene. Miss Rich is discovered in a blonde wig with long braids and Russian peasant costume, which is vastly becoming to her.

Norman Kerry is suffering from sunburned knees. He has been marching at the head of his Highlanders for nearly a week in the blazing sun and it is well known that a kilt has little protection for the knees. It is the first case on records of such an ailment, but Norman says it's just as painful as sunburn anywhere else. Lillian Gish, fortunately, is so bebonneted and skirted in her costumes that no such danger threatens her. They are making "Annie Laurie."

Pat Tells This One.

Pat O'Malley, who recently completed "Perch of the Devil" with Mae Busch, is now enjoying a little leisure at his Taft avenue home with his wife and the three little red headed O'Malleys. Pat and his wife were hosts to a party of friends recently, and Pat's hobbies, which include Irish genealogies, were talked over with gusto. He is the proud possessor of several volumes of the history of Irish families, and during the evening told of some amusing adventures while he and Sidney Olcott were making pictures in Ireland before the war.

Pat was boarding at a little fisher's cottage on the coast, and after a time the diet of fish three times a day palled on him. When he made a trip to town he brought home some sausage as his bit towards varying the diet. His landlady seemed quiet interested in the sausages and asked Pat how they were to be prepared.

"Just the same as fish," said he. "Boil them or fry them."

In a little while a small voice called in, "O, Mr. O'Malley, I don't think you'll be liking your sausages."

"Why not?" said Pat.

"Well," said the fisherman's wife, "after I'd cleaned them out there wasn't a thing left but the skins."

Madame Glyn, champeen spellbinder on affairs of the heart, was at it again this week, lecturing at the Ambassador hotel for the day nursery fund on the subject of Spain. However, the preface of her talk was on dancing for grandmothers. Mme. Glyn says her one passion is dancing, and that she has a list of four or five eligible dancing partners with whom she takes her terpsichorean dozen.

The requirements for a young gentleman who aspires to get on this list are several: He must be young, and vigorous, and tall, and a splendid dancer. He must also forego conversation, for madame wishes physical exercise, not mental stimulus.

"I can recommend nothing better than dancing," said Mme. Glyn, "to all grandmothers who wish to keep young."

The Sixty club and the other dancing parties of Hollywood well know the form of madame on the dance floor, where she is an assiduous stepper at all times, seeming to have more vigor than many of the young featherweight beauties.

A Charming Party.

The social event of the week was the garden party of Agnes Christine Johnson, the scenarist, at her home in Santa Monica. One hundred and fifty guests sat down to supper at long tables arranged in the garden under the spreading branches of a huge pepper tree hung with lighted Chinese lanterns.

Vivid red cannas in a large bed at the base of the pepper tree lent a colorful note to the festivities, carried out around the tables illuminated by huge candelabra holding red candles. Great Chinese vases were filled with flowers.

Mrs. Charles Ray appeared with her golden hair in the wispy bob style now popular, beautifully dressed in a heavy white moire robe de style, so full and stiff it could "stand alone" as the boast was in the days of our grandmothers.

A GALAXY OF MOVIE STARS

Denver Recalls Old Days of the Theater

By Burns Mantle.

beautiful of resorts into gorgeous town gardens and country home dooryards. Sweltering in town, you take a sweater to the hills with you. And the driving is apparently safer than it is on the city streets.

They use a siren horn for the hairpin curves, as a warning of approach, and there is as much care and courtesy shown by drivers negotiating a narrow ledge as there could possibly be at a convention of French head waiters. Particularly by the driver on the outside. There is drinking in them thar hills, too, I'm told. A distillation locally known as sugar hootch is guaranteed by the true natives to lend enchantment to the view of snow capped peaks beyond and take the mind off the nearby ledge.

But there are comparatively few accidents. There are dancing pavilions and chicken dinners at all the nearby mountain resorts, and the girls and boys roll home from them at all hours without causing more than a normal family apprehension. The boys just have to drive carefully in the hills or the girls won't ride with them.

One party I heard of, noticing that the host of the evening was leaning a trifle heavily to port as he approached his car for the slide down Lookout, refused to ride with him. Piling into another and safer car they left him standing up near Buffalo Bill's grave trying to look at a persistently left handed moon over what he thought was his right shoulder. When they got home he had been waiting ten minutes for them and had come back the longer and more dangerous way.

However, if you have no objections, I will continue to do my mountain driving with the lads who know that alcohol and gasoline engines can never be friends. They may be successfully chummy for years, but one day the break will come and the results are bound to be personally disastrous.

Colorado, rightfully proud of what she has done for her tourists' comfort and safety, may some day station breath testers at the foot and on top of every mountain pass. To which I certainly lend my indorsement. But who, I ask you, will test the testers?

Fate Plays a Cruel Trick.

Fate is a trickster and often a cheat. I had a friend in Denver waiting my coming. He was nearing 70, and we both knew that this probably would be our last visit, though over a quarter century we had held to a stimulating philosophy that takes little account of the ageing body.

I talked with him Monday evening on the phone. We were to lunch together Tuesday and visit. I was at his office at 12:30 and waited an hour. I came back at 4 and found the room filled with a stunned and mystified crowd. My friend had been found dead in bed when they had gone to call him that morning. Two thousand miles of railroading to realize years of anticipated pleasure in the renewal of an old and a dear friendship and then to miss even so much as the handclasp and the smile by a day! Faith in eternal justice and a kind God wavered that day.

"STEVENS SURPRISED AT PLAYHOUSE
Unmasking of Keenan's Author—and Keenan's Modern Acting—Carry a Thrill
Robertson Drama Is a Good One. Black Velvet Excellent as a Play and a Performance.

I missed the first night of Black Velvet at the Playhouse, but enjoyed nothing less than a first night thrill at a later performance. . . . You will, I think, like Black Velvet as a play and as a performance. You will find the spell of its atmosphere undeniable. . . . And you will like the literate manner in which Mr. Robertson has spun his yarn, so easily, humorously, unpretentiously, and with such a sure curb on handsome language.

I feel that this is a favorite opportunity to congratulate and thank Mr. Keenan for throwing overboard so many of the treasured tricks of the so-called character actor. . . . One now feels the nervous power of characterization; for the prominence is from within, the grip seems to be in the mind rather than in the clenched hand and twisted brow. If I can get Frank Keenan's prescription and in the course of a season or so improve my work as he has improved his, you are going to read some very lively and human reviews in your Herald and Examiner."

after four years' absence from the repertoire, and Eugene D'Albert's "Tiefland" ("The Lowlands"), which will be sung in English. Weber will conduct, and the cast will be chosen with special care. The occasion will constitute Claudio Muzio's first appearance in an opera in English.

"Arrangements have also been made to repeat "Der Rosenkavalier" for a second season. The success achieved by the work last year leaves no room for doubt as to its popularity.

"There will be a number of interesting new artists to announce as soon as pending negotiations are completed. Thus far we have acquired Elsa Alsen, Wagnerian soprano of international renown; Manni-Marcoux, powerful actor-singer delineator of French and Italian character rôles, and Harold Lindau, a Swedish-American dramatic tenor of splendid voice and fine artistry. As I have previously stated, artists of the caliber demanded by American opera patrons are few and far apart, and between the Metropolitan and the Chicago Opera we have absorbed Europe's best. Giulio Gatti-Casazza is over here with other factors of the New York institution, quietly engaged in the same quest, but thus far I have not heard of any finds that they have made. It is becoming more and more apparent that the United States is producing the singers of the future.

Preparing to Return.

"We have some more auditions scheduled for the near future in Milan, and, perhaps, Vienna, and then hurry home. A general hegira of the musical element is in the air. This calls to mind that Henry G. Weber, "the boy conductor," and his mother are among the first scheduled to head homeward. They will sail for New York on Tuesday, July 27, on the S. S. Reliance. Rosa Raisa and Giacoma Rimini will follow on the Leviathan on Sept. 11.

"Charles Moor, the new Scotch stage director acquired from Germany, will emphasize the internationalism of his personality by coming down from the Swiss eyrie where he makes his summer home to sail on the De Grasse of the French line on Sept. 18, and on the 24th Maestro Giorgio Polacco and Edith Mason will sail from Italy on the Conte Biancamano.

"There will be a number of interest-Mary Garden's sailing, but although Miss Garden will begin her activities with the company much earlier than usual, this season, no definite plans have been made for her trip. The reason for this that following her recent great successes at the Opéra Comique, Paris, she has been besieged with all manner of unusual offers and has under consideration what may develop into interesting plans here prior to her return to Chicago.

"In any event, it will be only a short time, at most, before we shall all reassemble at the Auditorium to prepare for what we fondly hope and proudly expect will prove Chicago's greatest season."

Here and There in Music.

Among the concert appearances of the week will be a violin recital by Jacques Gordon at Kimball hall on Wednesday afternoon and a joint recital by Burton Thatcher, baritone, and Glenn Dillard Gunn, pianist, at Fine Arts Recital hall Thursday afternoon.

There is word of a musical event to take place this afternoon under the auspices of the German Club of Chicago at Jacobsen's Glen Oak Acres, on the Waukegan road north of Glenview. An orchestra concert will be conducted by Ferdinand Steindel at 2 o'clock, to be followed at 4 o'clock by a performance of Johann Strauss' "Der Zigeunerbaron." Rosel Frey, Anna Berneck, Anna Mueller, Max Bratt, and Robert Sonnenberg are named among the principals. The music committee consists of Charles H. Wacker, Henry G. Zander, Oscar F. Mayer, William H. Rehm, Dr. Otto L. Schmidt, and William A. Wieboldt. Charles Wurster is the secretary.

The American Grand Opera company of Portland, Ore., is preparing to add to the long list of American operas based on Indian themes. This one will be called "Winona," and it is by Albert Bimboni of New York.

The Chicago Civic Opera company has not made many announcements of joys to come during the next season, but Mary Garden is getting into the news sections by various more or less indirect angles. Musical America claims to have information from exclusive foreign sources that she will sing the name part in Honegger's "Judith" here in December, and that the composer will visit the first performance.

With the entirely praiseworthy idea of learning not to take opera too seriously, Ernest Rogers writes this plot of "Lucia di Lammermoor" in the Atlanta Journal. It is quoted in Musical America.

"Sir Henry Ashton, so 'tis said, was worried, blue and gloomy. Remorse had gripped his Nubian heart. And so we will assume he was thinking of the shady deal whereby he got possession of Ravenswood, a nearby tract, and fed his sad depression.

"Reports had also come to him about his sister, Lucy, who lately had been acting queer. She'd met a rather sprucy stranger in the nearby woods with whom her conversation had shown a marked affection and a touch of animation. . . .

"It now appears the fact leaked out that Henry, in a passion, had slain one Edgar's father in a most convincing fashion. Now killing father is a sport that's apt to be expensive, and it is little wonder that Sir Hen was apprehensive. . . .

"The noble stranger Lucy loves—or has that fact been mentioned?—was Edgar, son of Ravenswood, and he was well intentioned. He tells the girl he fain would wed her in an awful hurry before he takes a trip to France, or some such business worry. . . .

"But Henry had a lot of debts and thought to get the money by wedding Lucy to a lord—the idea was a honey. To save her brother from the sharks poor Lucy said she'd do it, although it was obnoxious and she knew that she would rue it.

"So after all the plans were set a goodly crowd assembled to see the ceremony done—but gosh, how Lucy trembled. She signed upon the dotted line—in those days 'twas the custom because the men were pretty wise and didn't dare to trust 'em.

"No sooner had the pact been sealed than Edgar came in, raving, and asked the gal what did she mean by all this misbehaving? . . .

"Now, in the meantime, Lucy's mind was getting rather woosey and so she kills her husband, for she really wasn't choosey. When Henry sees the works are shot, he flees to distant regions and Edgar's woes beset him too by phalanxes and legions.

"He hears that Lucy—mad by now—has ended her existence and so he cries. 'O, what's the use, misfortune's my subsistence. I don't know where my Lucy's gone, but that is just a trifle.' He blows his skull to smithereens with just a family rifle. . . .

"The story must conclude herewith—let's shout it from the steeple; for what's an author goin' to do who's killed off all his people?"

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE SIDE of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer, send stamped, self-addressed envelope—please!

Bursting into Print.

Dear Miss Tinée: I've often wished to write in to your oclumn, and now I'm going to do it.

Here goes: To begin with, I nearly always agree with you, and follow your advice lots of times. I agree with Renee, though, in THE TRIBUNE for June 13. I didn't like "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," either.

I live out of town, but we go into Chicago every Saturday, so I see a good many movies, that way, before they come here.

Mae, do you like plays as well as you do movies?

Why don't they ever have Jackie Coogan's or Baby Peggy's picture in the color section? I'd like one of "Our Gang," too. Tell them for me, will you?

This is a pretty long epistle, but will you print it, anyway?

Good-by and good luck to the column. PEGGY LOU.

Editor's note: Here's printing your letter, Peggy Lou. Love both movies and plays, when they're lovable. See what we can do about the pictures. Come again.

A Reply to M. L.

Dear Miss Tinée: I was angry with M. L.'s letter and just had to tell her a few things, so, here goes:

1. I thought Richard Dix just wonderful in "Let's Get Married." Don't think he can act any better, and furthermore, he isn't fat, he's just right. I think he's wonderful.

2. Colleen Moore is a darling. She isn't so beautiful, but is most attractive. Furthermore, he's a wonderful actor.

3. The picture Zasu Pitts played in was "Mannequin." I thought every one was wonderful except her. She reminds me of a half wit, exactly. She always acts so silly and perfectly dumb.

Well, Mae, I guess M. L. has no use for me, but I just couldn't help it, she got me sore.

Now, Mae, I wonder if you will do me a favor and tell me who played opposite Anna Q. Nillsen in "Her Second Chance?" I will be grateful to you if you will.

Must say "So long" for this time and wish you all the luck in the world. I think you're great. H. J.

Editor's note: Huntley Gordon played opposite Anna Q. Nillsen in "Her Second Chance."

"The Son of the Sheik" is a film no Valentino fan will want to miss and one, I should say, that might make fans of come who are not.

AND, by the way, in some of his scenes with Vilma, Rudolph has an expression I've never seen him wear before. See if you notice, and if you do—don't you like it?

See you tomorrow!

We Stand Corrected.

Dear Mae: Naughty, naughty! Musn't conjecture! Her reviews, "The Devil Horse" and says "Chief Plenticoos probably means plenty cows." When her theorizes her blunders.

"Plenticoos" is a corruption of "plenty coups" and the old chief is so called because his coup sticks have more notches, meaning accomplishments of prowess, than those owned by any other chief his tribe has had. And not long ago, because of his advanced age, he could not join in a trip to Washington but instead sent one of his greatly prized sticks to President Coolidge, which is akin to my sending Cal one of my front teeth or your giving up, well, suppose we say your spiffiest summer frock.

Trusting that Mae never, never never again attempts to explain an Indian name, I am,

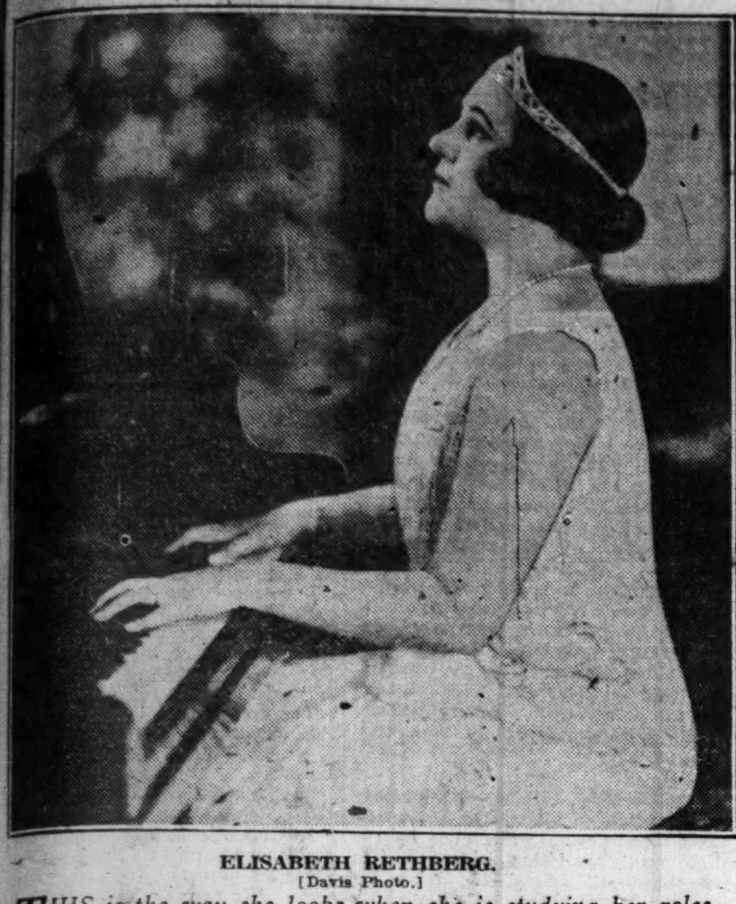
IN STUDY TIME.



ELISABETH RETHBERG.
[Davis Photo.]

THIS is the way she looks when she is studying her roles. She is quite a bit different when she sings them, except that she retains the good looks that are made public in the pictures. One of the aforesaid roles will be the title one in "Tosca" this week at Ravinia.

WOMEN THE WORLD OVER

Munich, Bavaria, has only two women professional landscape painters.

The new Japanese factory law does not prohibit women from working in the mines.

Dresden, Saxony, is the latest European city to inaugurate the system of women police.

Madame Melba, the operatic star, has retired after 40 years of remarkable music career.

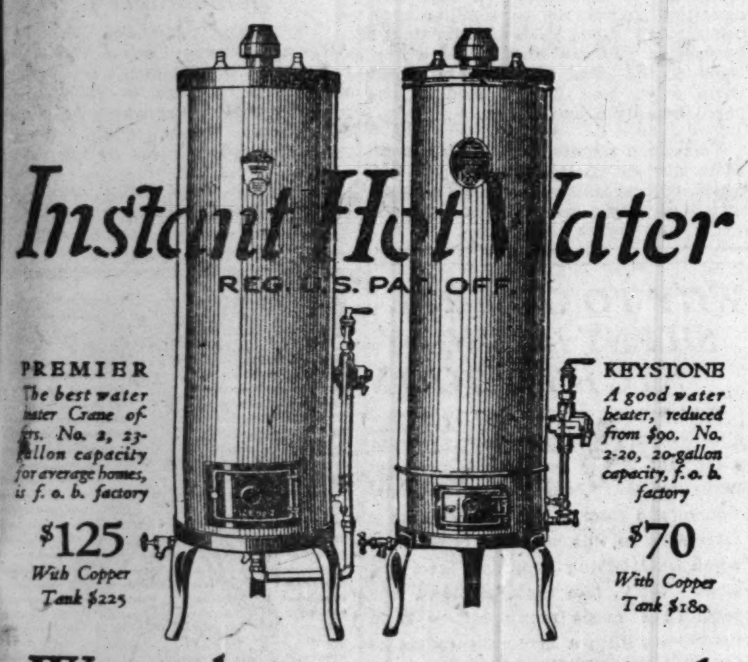
Miss Alexa Parr, a London stenographer, won $150,000 on the running of the English Derby.

Probably the smallest women's club in the world is the Women's Club of Moffatt Tunnel, Col. It has but two members.

Phon Diskul, a Siamese princess, will come to the United States to take up the study of nursing.

Near Trieste, Italy, there is a strange sect of religious devotees with a woman as "High Priestess" and 50 men followers.

Eleanor Mitchell of Southport, England, who holds the title of champion typist of Europe, is only 19 years of age.



PREMIER
The best water heater Crane offers. No. 2, 23-gallon capacity for average homes, is f. o. b. factory
$125
With Copper Tank $225

KEYSTONE
A good water heater, reduced from $90. No. 2-20, 20-gallon capacity, f. o. b. factory $70
With Copper Tank $180

Water heaters guaranteed by Crane

You may select a water heater bearing the Crane nameplate, as confidently as if a mechanical expert were at your elbow advising you. The name and its 71-year reputation tell you everything about design, materials, workmanship, durability, and economy.

This is how the Crane Premier and Crane Keystone work. A thermostat controls the water temperature in the big tank. As conditions demand, it turns the gas on or off, automatically. No other heaters have a more economical pilot light, nor a heating element more thrifty of fuel.

This gas saving is made certain by the heat-saving insulation of the tank, a blanket of asbestos which retains the heat as in a giant "Thermos" bottle. All day and all night, whether you open one faucet or many, as quick as your wish, hot water flows. And always at full pressure.

The Crane Premier supplies the finest hot water service. It is the best water heater Crane offers. The Crane Keystone resembles the Premier, and is for those who want a good water heater at an extremely moderate price.

Decide on the type and size you need after seeing them at the Crane Exhibit Rooms. Or ask to see them at your plumber's. He has or can quickly get for you the right one to give your home the comfort and health of plentiful, economical, instant hot water.

Write for a little 16-page book, illustrated, that discusses frankly the entire hot-water question

FOOTBALL COACH TO TEACH GAME BEFORE "MIKE"

Series of Lessons from KOA at Denver.

Denver, Colo., July 24.—[Special.]—Tom McNamara, nationally recognized gridiron star, coach and sports writer, has signed up for another course of football instruction over the microphone at KOA, Denver.

McNamara's lessons, to be featured throughout the season, are intended for college and high school players and parents and athletic instructors, and will be patterned after last year's course at the station.

3 Lessons a Week.

Lessons will be broadcast regularly three times each week and are designed to make better known the fundamental principles of football, it is announced. The course includes a series of special lectures on confidence, diet, the mental attitude, thoughts for beginners and parents, those in charge of beginners, charging, building an offense and forward passing.

Innumerable questions raised during McNamara's radio series last year will be reviewed in detail this season.

He is head coach of Regis college at Denver, and is said by sports writers to be one of the greatest quarterbacks in the history of the game in the east. He starred at Fordham, N. Y., as quarterback until the world war, went into the army, was injured, recovered and took a post graduate course at the University of Pennsylvania.

Writer on Football Subjects.

He was a member of the coaching and scouting staff at the university for four years, and in 1924 gained wide prominence when Pennsylvania's defense, built upon his scouting reports, turned back Coach Moran's Center college team. He has attained a national following as the author of a series of football and basketball articles, published by a national newspaper syndicate.

"McNamara's 1926-1927 football course over KOA represents the accumulated experience of a widely recognized authority," declares Freeman H. Talbot, studio director at the Rocky Mountain broadcasting station. "His microphone discussions will help materially to clear up many points which are now confusing to the beginner. Exact situations will be outlined and listeners will be told how to cope with them during this microphone series."

RADIO STAR IS YOUNGEST LEADER OF ORCHESTRA

Milwaukee, Wis., July 24.—[Special.]—Midwest radio listeners of WHAD frequently hear violin selections played by David Miller, director of the Tower theater orchestra, yet few of those listeners know that Dave is the youngest theater orchestra leader in the country. He is just 21.

His life is as colorful as his music. His graded and high school days were spent at Eau Claire, while his "fiddle talked" incessantly. Then come four years at the University of Wisconsin. These, too, were well rounded out with music, for Dave played in orchestras throughout his college years. When those days came to a close, he took his orchestra on a tour, not here in Wisconsin, but in the orient.

Coming back to Wisconsin and Milwaukee, Dave ably filled the part of first violinist of the Wisconsin Theater orchestra. When the Saxe interests opened their new Tower theater, Dave was picked to be its orchestra leader. He not only directs and takes the first violin parts in the orchestras, but also arranges the three overtures which feature the picture presentations of the theater each week.

500 ENROLL FOR SUMMER RADIO CLASSES OF W-G-N

Nearly five hundred students have been enrolled and are studying in the classes in elementary review being conducted on W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station, by Miss Colletta Deignan, an experienced Chicago teacher and graduate of the Chicago Normal college. Her work is dealing with corrective English and mathematics, with considerable attention to correct speaking, in which, it has been found, most errors are made.

It is surprising the large number of adult listeners that are enrolled in the class, despite the fact that it was designed primarily for children in the grade schools with regular work to make up. It is estimated that nearly 10 per cent of the students are adults.

NEW RECTIFIER WILL CUT RADIO POWER COSTS

Orlando, Fla., July 24.—[Special.]—Successful use of the mercury arc rectifier as a new source of power, and abandonment of the motor generator in radio transmission, was perfected here this week by broadcasting station WDBO, Rollins college, engineers in charge announced. It is believed to be the first successful use of this mode of power by a broadcasting station.

The adoption of the arc rectifier was made by Max Green Jr., son of Charles Maxwell Green, consulting engineer of the General Electric company, a pioneer in the invention and perfection of the mercury arc rectifier.

The new method of radio power will lower the present radio broadcasting power costs about half, it is claimed, be much more simple in operation, and afford less noise in radio transmission.

Direction Finder to Make Life Hectic for Smugglers

Life will be a little more hectic for the rum runners if they indiscreetly use their radio. The coast guard vessels are being equipped with a perfected type of direction finder, which accurately determines the direction from which any radio signal comes. Thus, two coast guard vessels some distance apart expect to be able to jointly determine the exact position of a rum runner, if the latter does not keep quiet at the critical time.

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Sunday, July 25.) (Chicago Daylight Saving Time.)

THE excitement of a ball game, the cheering and shouting in the grandstands, the bustle and activity on the field—all these will be described in the broadcast of today's game between the Cubs and Philadelphia from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. A play by play story of the entire contest will be given. Microphones placed at various parts of the field will bring the color and spontaneity of the scene to listeners, furnishing an ideal background for the words of the announcer. This broadcast will start at 3 o'clock.

The circus with all its fun and novelty will be brought to the radio audience today when Uncle Walt broadcasts the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey show at 2 o'clock. The antics of the clowns, the tricks and stunts of the elephants and all the beauty and wonder of the proceedings will be pictured for tiny fans and grownups alike.

The famous operatic star, Joan Ruth, will be featured tonight in the regular Sunday program brought by wire from New York. Miss Ruth made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and since that time her rise in the musical world has been rapid. For the season of 1923-'24, she was engaged by the Wagnerian Opera company and sang with this organization in Washington when less than twenty years of age. Tonight's performance will be a joint recital, the other star being Allen McQuhae, well known tenor. Nicolai Berezowsky's ensemble will provide the orchestral accompaniment. Following is the program:

Opening Air..............................
Mr. McQuhae and orchestra.
"If with All Your Hearts"—"Elijah" ....Mendelssohn
Mr. McQuhae and orchestra.
"Ah fors e lui"—"La Triviata"......Verdi
Miss Ruth and orchestra.

Mr. McQuahe, Miss Ruth and orchestra.
"Now the Day Is Over"..................Barnby
Mr. McQuabe.

Gilbert and Sullivan will be discussed in "Our Music Room" at 9 o'clock tonight. Excerpts from "The Mikado," "Pinafore," "Iolanthe," and "The Pirates of Penzance" will be a feature of the musical program given at this time. Also several of Sullivan's most popular songs are to be presented, among them "Will He Come," "Once Again," and "In the Night," and, best known of them all, "The Lost Chord." Listeners will find a visit to "Our Music Room" an interesting excursion into the world of music. Each Sunday night a new composer is discussed.

The first musical attraction on W-G-N this afternoon will be the recital by Ambrose Larsen, playing on the Wurlitzer organ. His program will be largely classical and semi-classical in content. Mr. Larsen's recitals are a regular feature, being given every Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Twenty minutes of favorite old songs will make up "The Million Sing" this evening at 7 o'clock. W-G-N artists will present several well known melodies and every listener is invited to join in. Prominent among the songs listed for this evening are: "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," "Kathleen Mavourneen," "Just Before the Battle, Mother," and "Abide with Me."

PRINCE OF WALES TAKES PORTABLE SET ON VACATION

Now Is an Enthusiastic Radio Fan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 24.—Prince of Wales has just bought one of the latest types of portable sets with self-contained batteries, with which he hopes to spend many an hour of relaxation during the summer holiday season. He takes the set with him on country journeys and has become as enthusiastic a radio fan as his father and mother, the king and queen, who have always been keen supporters of wireless.

Following the prince's example, thousands of automobiles leaving London for holiday jaunts are equipped with portable radio sets to add enjoyment to stops along the vacation road.

During the last few months a great deal of work has been done in perfecting communication between radio stations and aeroplanes in flight.

Most of these experiments have been carried out in the vicinity of Croydon Aerodrome and the most successful conversations have been carried out on a wave length of about seven meters. The conversation was as clear as if it had taken place over the telephone.

JAZZ NO LONGER POPULAR, SAYS RADIO ARTIST

Jazz songs are not generally popular with the radio listeners, according to the hundreds of requests received by Allen McQuhae, the Irish tenor, who is heard in concert over the radio each Sunday night from W. G. N., THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, in the Kent hour.

Old favorites of years gone by are most in demand and, Mr. McQuhae said, indicate that the radio programs reach the listener when he is thoroughly relaxed at home and in a more contemplative, reminiscent mood.

"But jazz is very useful," said Mr. McQuhae. "It is an outlet for the pent up emotions which many of us would not let go. The American is naturally self-contained about his emotions but let a good band play some of the old works made into jazz form and it makes him light and happy in heart and mind and he wants to dance. Jazz has its place, although many of the tunes are stolen from the old masters and revamped."

In classifying the requests with a view to singing first the songs most in demand, it is found that there are very few songs on the list of a hundred or more that have not been asked for many times, while there is a large group polling a very general demand.

W-G-N TO BROADCAST TEST PROGRAM FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS

Special classes, designed to show the value of radio as an additional educational arm, will be broadcast for the Teachers' Radio institute by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, on Thursday afternoon, July 29, between 1:30 and 2:30 o'clock.

The institute was organized some time ago to test the educational possibilities of radio. It is sponsored by the Chicago Normal college and the Chicago board of education. All of the stations affiliated with the Chicago Broadcasters' association have presented educational programs for the benefit of the teachers, who are receiving the special programs during their summer classes at the Chicago Normal college.

In order to present comprehensively the various educational features which W-G-N has been offering in the past, the hour's broadcast has been divided into five, eight, and ten minute periods. A musical number opens the program, and this is followed by a ten minute French lesson by Prof. Henri Croizard, whose successful series of French lessons was one of the W-G-N features during the spring and winter months. Miss Colletta Deignan, an experienced Chicago teacher, who is engaged in offering elementary review work for grammar students on W-G-N, will also give the teachers a ten minute idea of how she conducts her radio classes. Ten minutes is to be devoted to a W-G-N "piano lesson," given by Edward Barry, who at the present time is giving a half hour lesson weekly over THE TRIBUNE station.

Mrs. Bertha Armbruster, president of the Illinois League of Parent-Teachers' Associations, is to talk on the "Relation Between Parent-Teachers' Association and the Class Room." A talk on the "Possibilities of Radio Instruction" will also be given.

Uncle Bob on KYW Goes on 2 Weeks' Vacation Soon

Uncle Bob is going on a vacation trip. That means there will be no bedtime stories from KYW for two weeks, from Aug. 1 to Aug. 15. For the first week of his absence he will stay in Chicago with Mrs. Uncle Bob. The second week he will be fishing up in Michigan.

SENATOR TELLS SENATOR WHAT KILOCYCLES ARE

Considerable mystification was expressed recently by Senator Ashurst of Arizona over the frequent use of the term "kilocycle" in the radio discussion by Senator Dill of Washington. Finally, Mr. Ashurst ventured to say:

"I really ask the senator's pardon, but I would like to have him repeat the explanation about the kilocycle. It may be simple to the senator, but I did not understand it."

"It is not simple to me," Mr. Dill responded laughingly. "A kilocycle is a thousand cycles. A cycle is another name for a wave, or vibration, or frequency, or whatever we want to call it. I do not wish to mystify the senator, or seem to be wise in my attempt to explain it, but the radio engineers say that if we use one meter as a wave length, the transmitter will send out 300,000,000 impulses per second. I think no human mind can even conceive how fast that is, but that is the theory. A kilocycle is one ten thousandth of those 300,000,000 impulses or cycles."

POLAR SIGNALS FROM VOQ LURE TO RADIO HAMS

Museum Expedition Now in Arctic.

The station most sought after by radio amateurs this summer is VOQ, aboard Capt. Bob Bartlett's schooner Morrissey, cruising the polar seas off northern Greenland in quest of new arctic specimen for the American museum of New York.

Through the assistance of A. Atwater Kent of Philadelphia, the Morrissey was outfitted with special short wave radio transmitting equipment, with which the expedition hopes to keep in touch with stations of the American Radio Relay league throughout the entire trip. The radio work aboard the Morrissey is in charge of Edward Manley of Marietta, O., who supervised the construction of the sending equipment.

Manley's messages will be sent on wave lengths of 20 and 33 meters, for the most part. At the farthest point north, in the vicinity of Etah, 700 miles from the pole, experimental work will be done at 18 meters.

Radio reception aboard ship will be undertaken not only in international code, through a short wave receiver, but by the latest model sets.

To stimulate interest among amateurs in seeking contact with VOQ, George Palmer Putnam, the publisher, who accompanies the expedition, promises a handsome polar souvenir to the member of the league who scores highest in maintaining communication with the Morrissey. Whether this will consist of a polar bear skin, a set of walrus tusks or something else will depend on how successful the hunters are with rifle and harpoon.

HALF A HUNDRED COUNTRIES HAVE RADIO AMATEURS

A list of the countries of the world whose amateurs are now actively engaged in effecting two-way international private communication sounds like an index to the atlas. The present list, which is being added to, follows: Australia, Austria, Argentina, Alaska, Algeria, Belgium, Bermuda, Brazil, British Guiana, Bolivia, Canada, Chile, Canal Zone, Costa Rica, Columbia, China, Cuba, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, England, Egypt, France, Finland, French Indo-China, Germany, Greenland, Holland, Hawaii, Italy, India, Ireland, Japan, Luxembourg, Mexico, Morocco, Mesopotamia, Madeira Islands, New Zealand, Norway, Newfoundland, Portugal, Porto Rico, Philippine Islands, Russia, Spain, Scotland, Sweden, Switzerland, Samoa, Tasmania, Uruguay, Union of South Africa, and the United States.

COLUMBUS PARK CONCERT FROM WLS WEDNESDAY

WLS will bring another breath from Chicago parks to the radio audience on Wednesday evening when the band concert from Columbus park, on the west side, will be broadcast. The concert will go on the air about 8:30 and will be heard frequently throughout the evening. In addition to the band's playing there will be soloists. The first of these band concerts from Chicago parks was broadcast two weeks ago and was enjoyed by the radio audience in Chicago as well as by the audience through the middle west.

This broadcasting of the Columbus park band concerts is made possible by the coöperation of the west parks commission. The concerts will be continued by WLS throughout the summer months.

Leroy M. E. Clausing New Radio Engineer at WBBM

Leroy M. E. Clausing, a former member of the United States Naval Radio Research laboratory of the bureau of standards at Washington, D. C., is the new chief engineer of station WBBM. Clausing came to his new position from WEBH, where he had been chief engineer since he installed the transmitting station there. He spent a number of years at the Great Lakes naval radio laboratory and at the trans-Atlantic recieving station at Belmar, N. J. He is one of the few radio research experts in the United States.

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

THE war is on! "The next war," they used to tell us, "will be in the air." And lo! it is upon us—the War of the Air. The cannonading is already booming afar.

War dispatches from the various radio fronts come crackling in on every breeze. The latest bulletins follow:

Keokuk, Ia., July 24.—Another civil war was averted today when Theodore Toobe, a radio operator of station KOOP, was caught after stealing the wave length of KNOB of this city. He had been seen to leap from a window of the radio station and run headlong down the middle of the street. A crowd of passers-by took up the chase and he was captured when he committed the error of misinterpreting a "stop" and "go" light. The coveted wave length was found in his overcoat pocket.

East Transit, O., July 24.—Station WIMP today attempted to justify its taking up arms against station WASP by declaring that a man's wave length is his castle, and that the appropriation or the use of that wave length by another is as unethical as the appropriation or the use of his toothbrush or his buggy whip. Station WIMP earlier in the day had made a stealthy raid on the enemy's sector and had taken a number of prisoners—in fact, a whole quartet—by the clever use of the deadly bean blowers.

Duluth, Minn., July 24.—Stations KWUP and WOOP were fighting it out on a 500 mile front last night, both struggling desperately to gain control of the 160 meter wave. KWUP opened the battle by shooting point blank at the enemy a lecture on astral chemistry and WOOP retaliated with a withering fire of soprano solos. For almost a half hour KWUP tried to gain ground by a shrapnel volley of Swedish dialect stories. The heaviest casualties occurred among innocent and neutral listeners.

Albany, N. Y., July 24.—Station WRECK was the victor in a hot skirmish last night with station WURST for possession of the 201 meter wave length. WURST, during most of the encounter, had the enemy retreating by broadcasting all evening a chorus of howling dogs, but just at the climax of its triumph the local electric power plant went goofy and Jim Sands, the electrician, was out of town fishing.

Detroit, Mich., July 24.—Station WHIP of Detroit today commenced broadcasting on the wave length owned by Station CLUK, Ltd., of Canada. This may lead to international complications, as it is considered a violation of the Monroe street viaduct. Heavy casualties are reported in Detroit, because the Canadians are firing across the river heavy rounds of ammunition, the most dangerous of which are the quarts and pints of rye and bourbon.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 24.—Station WONT won a two hour concert against station WHY here this evening, fighting to a finish on the same wave band. The din over the countryside was terrible, and local citizens fled to their storm cellars. Static bombs were employed by both contestants.

Baraboo, Wis., July 24.—The ghastly effects of three Milwaukee radio stations broadcasting all at once on the same wave are being shown in this neighborhood. Cattle and fowl are lying dead in the fields; milk is turning sour before it can be removed from the barns; one native has had his false teeth drawn from him by an unseen force; and three children have come down with mumps.

Atlanta, Ga., July 24.—The two radio stations in this state, WHEE and WHOA, which have been fighting it out on the same wave all summer, have declared a temporary truce, or armistice, or something, and are now devoting themselves to sending each other nasty notes. Each director draws grotesque pictures and comic valentines of the rival director and mails them every half hour. And so the fierce hostilities are waged.

Very soon we are to publish a complete history of the War of the Air, which will be sold over the soda fountains for two dollars down, and the rest if you bother to pay it.

IF YOU LIKE JAZZ JUST TUNE IN ON PEPPER PARTIES

Thousands of listeners who like jazz music are enjoying the weekly Pepper Parties sponsored by W-G-N. The next of the parties is to be staged Wednesday evening between 10:30 and 12:30 o'clock. Jazz music is the chief feature and no party is complete without at least three jazz bands to follow one another with groups of selections. As a result of one of the announcers' requests to "Join the party and cut yourself a piece of cake," a young woman each week sends an angel food cake to the station.

WLS Announces Ministers to Handle Family Worship

The ministers who will have charge of the family worship broadcast each day except Sunday from WLS at 7:30 under the auspices of the Central department Y. M. C. A. and Chicago Church federation are announced for the month of August as follows:

WGY TO OBSERVE SILENT MONDAY NIGHTS SOON

Schenectady, N. Y., July 24.—[Special.]—Every Monday evening, beginning Aug. 2, will be observed as silent night for WGY, the Schenectady station of the General Electric company. Exception to this rule will occur only when outstanding programs are possible. WGY, like most stations, has received a great many letters from listeners within a fifty mile radius of the station requesting that transmission be suspended one night in seven that they might dial distant stations. It is to meet the requests of ambitious distance dialers that WGY is voluntarily leaving the air Monday nights.

MARIO CARBONI TO SING FROM WQJ TONIGHT

Mario Carboni will be heard at WQJ tonight between 8 and 10 p. m. Mr. Carboni has sung many leading baritone roles in opera houses of Italy and South America and has toured the United States and Canada in concert. Although of foreign birth and education, he is an excellent interpreter of the English language, singing it with perfect diction and understanding.

IN summer, when your radio set is frequently idle for long periods at a time, you want an "A" battery that has long shelf-life.

In winter, when the "juice" is on longer and oftener, you need a battery that has recuperative or come-back ability.

This Ray-O-Vac "A" battery No. 1211 has staying power of both kinds to a remarkable degree.

THIS is the new Ray-O-Vac "A" battery No. 1211—especially made for radio use. Size: 2½" diameter, 6⅝" high; screw binding post terminals.

When idle, this battery holds its strength, and after being used it begins to rebuild its voltage the instant the current is turned off.

A voltmeter cannot tell you how long a battery will last. So to be sure you are getting batteries with staying power ask for Ray-O-Vacs. There are all sizes of Ray-O-Vac "A", "B" and "C" batteries made especially for radio use.

RADIO CHEERS MISSIONARIES IN FAR NORTH

Montreal, July 24.—[Special.]—Evidences multiply daily regarding the useful service rendered by radio to the people of Canada who live far from the populous centers. The most recent testimonial of this character comes from Chesterfield Inlet in the north of Hudson bay.

In that remote area priest and lay brothers of the Oblate order labor among the scattered peoples, and ordinarily these missionaries have few contacts with more advanced civilization, and such contacts are separated by long intervals of time. Now modern science through the medium of radio is bridging these spaces, and how this is done is best told in a letter which has been forwarded by A. R. McEwan, director of radio, Canadian National railways.

The writer of the letter is Brother Pigeon. In acknowleging reception of a program from CNRO, Ottawa, he says.

"Let me tell you a few words about radio. A charitable person gave us a receiving apparatus so that we can better enjoy our dreadful solitude in these ice deserts. Here are a few results. We hear Ottawa and Montreal often. What a joy for us all in hearing of our homes. We knew the results of the last federal elections as soon as you did yourself. We also gathered a message sent to the Hudson Bay company asking for help for the Eskimos living in Southhampton Island who were threatened by a famine because the boat could not reach them with food last summer.

"Could we have a few items of news from your locality we would indeed be pleased if you would broadcast them. Since we can pick up your station it is a delightful pleasure to hear 'voices from home.'"

CNRO has been very successful in reaching a wide area from Ottawa and has furnished programs of news and entertainment over a vast territory throughout the north. The station has now resumed broadcasting after an interval of a fortnight during which time new apparatus was installed making the station the most modern in Canada.

Arthur Ainsworth New Announcer at WSAI

Cincinnati, O., July 24.—[Special.]—After an absence of more than a year from the microphone, Arthur Ainsworth has returned to WSAI as announcer. Mr. Ainsworth will assist Mrs. Grace Raine, musical director, in handling programs during the absence of Paul A. Greene, who will make a tour of the country in lining up the winter auction bridge series. Mr. Ainsworth formerly was director of station WMH, now WKRC.

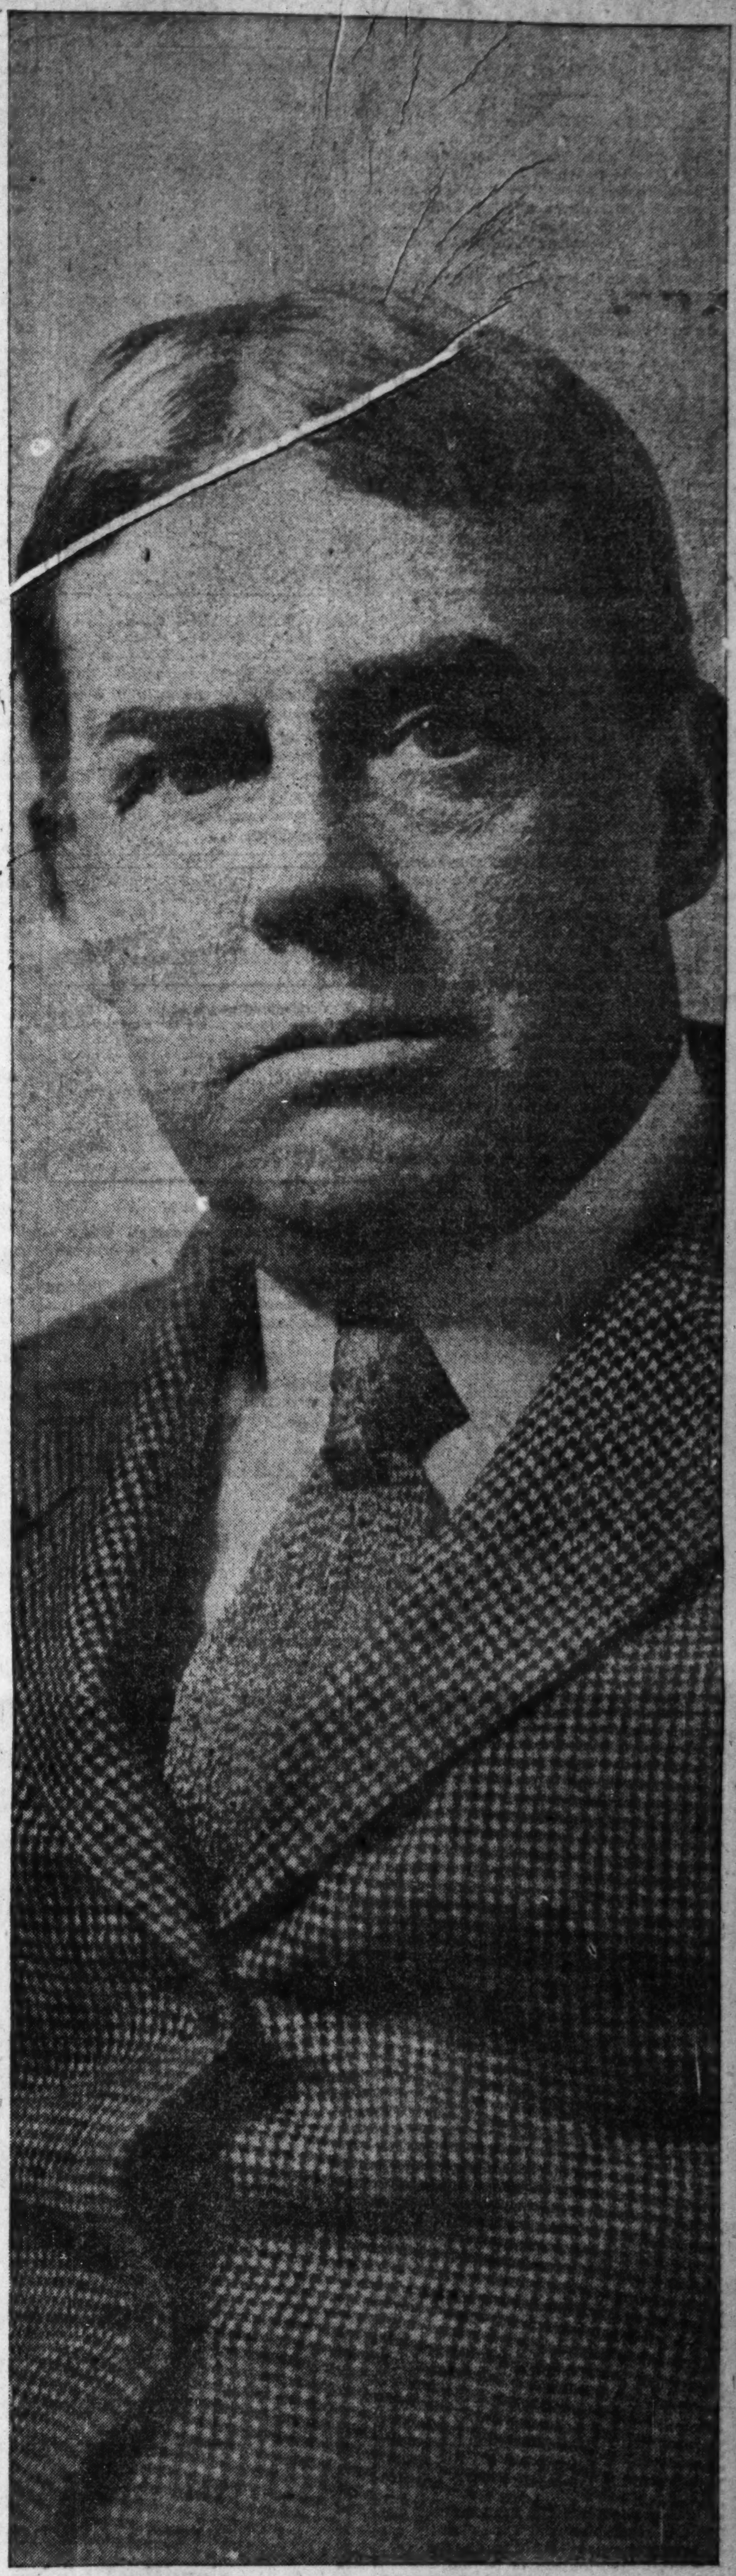
James O'Donnell Bennett says . . . "We have turned our backs on our historical heritage!"



JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT

He has been writing for The Tribune for twelve years. At his best when he writes of the big historical aspects of an event or of a community. His new series promises to surpass even the great stories he has done in the past.

SOMEWHERE there is a poem which begins: "Ever we yearn, ever for what is far, here is this beauty quiet at our feet."

We have waxed great in the industrial life of the nation. Our produce, our manufactures have carried the fame of this inland empire to every corner of the earth. We have won a fortune and forgotten our historical background!

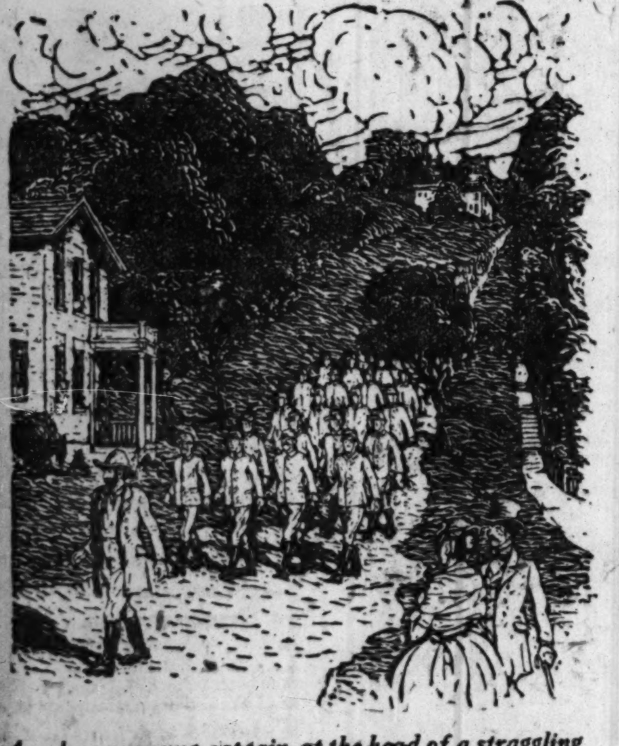
What of our silent, sacred places close by where our heroes lie buried? How many of us have seen the humble home in Galena which Ulysses S. Grant left to lead a regiment to war and to become president of our country? What of the little-known spot where rests Ann Rutledge, the early love and the inspiration of Abraham Lincoln? The two-room shack in the hills where Mark Twain first saw the light of day? The craggy bluffs from which Black Hawk led a forlorn hope against the invasion of the white man? the quaint river town which was once the home of Mormonism?



An obscure young captain at the head of a straggling company of volunteers marching down the quiet streets of Galena, Illinois, on the way to war . . . . five years later the triumphant return as commander-in-chief of all the armies of the United States! Few pages in history can offer a more amazing story than the career of Ulysses S. Grant. The little brick house in Galena which he left, to become immortal, is one of the historic spots of this country.

Why is it that a man will stand for hours in a drizzling rain for a glimpse of the fourth son of a deposed European monarch, and then yawn if someone asks him to step across the road to pay homage at the resting place of a Lewis or a Clark, who won for this republic a territory far greater than all Europe? We've sought our thrills too far afield. We've been doing a spiritual rip van winkle. Our roads are crowded with motorists going North, South, East and West, but do they pause for even a moment for a glimpse of the glories that lie at our very gates?

If "Made in America" means more to you than a label on your box of safety matches; if you've ever felt a queer tremor run up and down your spine when the band played "Home, Sweet Home" —we've got good news for you!

The Tribune is sending one of the greatest reporters in the history of American journalism, James O'Donnell Bennett, on a tour of the Middle West to visit and describe the historical highlights of Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri and Wisconsin. He will help us to know and to love our historic hinterland.

Bloomington, Springfield, Old Salem, Hannibal, Peoria, Nauvoo, Keokuk, Galesburg, Galena, Dubuque, Moline, Davenport, Beloit, Kenosha, Grand Detour, Dresden Heights, Petoskey, Harbor Point are a few of the towns James O'Donnell Bennett will visit and describe.

Every Tribune reader will want to read and save these articles because of their description of his home land, for reference in planning motor trips and to help him to a better understanding of that part of our country which is above all else our own.

Beginning Tuesday, July 27, James O'Donnell Bennett will tell of the storied places of the Middle West. Don't fail to read every article!

Frenchman Tells of Odd Syrian Customs

A FRENCHMAN on tour at Chicago, where he came to take part in the Eucharistic congress, sends us these notes on Syria, where he lived more than twenty-five years. The readers of THE TRIBUNE will read, perhaps, with pleasure these lines on the customs in Syria and Mount Lebanon:

On the birth of babies the people rejoice for eight days, or have a big feast if it is a boy. If it is a girl they do not have much celebration. Especially is this true among the Moslems.

The baptism of Christians is conducted with great pomp, particularly in the homes of the Greeks. Marriage of Christians is performed with a striking solemnity. The participants feast, dance, sing, and rejoice for from eight to fifteen days. An endless series of visits take place, during which the newlyweds receive the homage of the visitors, but maintain an absolute silence. That is the custom. The bride remains seated, impassive, without a smile, among the deluge of eulogies only the orientals know how to say.

Koran Is Accommodating.

In the homes of the Moslems the newlyweds, who do not know each other, according to the custom and the order of the Koran, see each other the day of the marriage for the first time, and if they do not suit each other they can easily separate. The Koran permits them to do so.

Today the Moslem women in the orient are secluded less than in the past. They can discontinue wearing the veils which hide their faces completely, and can go out more easily then heretofore. The men are no more obliged to wear the national tarboosh. Indeed, they are strongly urged to stop wearing it and wear a hat instead, Mustapha Kemal Pasha having declared lately that the Moslems must dress like western peoples.

However, the hat is not convenient for the prostrations of the faithful at the moment of prayer, which must be said with the head covered. Many have solved this difficulty by putting in their pockets a tarboosh, which they wear at the moment of prayer. Some others carry casquets, of which they turn the visors to the rear at the time of prayer. The Moslems feel the need of modernizing themselves and becoming like Europeans and Americans. The young Turks say there is need of it. The old Turks are not of the same opinion.

Hired Mourners.

Funerals in Syria are held with much pomp and with cries and lamentations at the moment when the body is put in the ground. In Moslem homes, but not in Christian, the custom is still practiced of having mourners follow the coffin with heads covered with cinders, crying in loud and educated voices and wearing long black veils. They go often to the door of the hospital, all dressed in black, awaiting the death of a sick person, so they may take the rôle of mourner at the moment of the funeral.

At the homes of the Christians they are content to mourn and to cry, but this custom seems lately to be disappearing, as well as the custom of uncovering the coffin before the burial so that they may contemplate for the last time the face of the departed and bestow upon it a final kiss.

Moslems do not salute Christians on the streets, but they respond to the salutations of each other, while the Druse salute first, and with lively courtesy, both Christians and Moslems. The Catholic clergy observe celibacy. The Greek priests, called "Orthodoxes," who are in the parishes and form the secular, are all married, but not the regular clergy, who observe celibacy like the Catholics.

The Greek priests who are married cannot remarry if they lose their wives. Therefore, they take great care of them and surround them with great attentions.

Greek bishops, who are all part of the regular clergy, are never married.

The Cedars of Lebanon.

Mount Lebanon is celebrated, they say, for its magnificent cedars, which served Solomon for the construction of his temple in Jerusalem. North of Mount Lebanon there is a beautiful bouquet, about 400, of these gigantic trees. They are surrounded by a high wall, in the middle of which is a beautiful chapel all in cedar, for the Catholic faith. On one of these trees one sees written the names of Lamartine, the celebrated French poet, and his daughter.

Mount Lebanon, 2,000 meters high, is covered with eternal snow at its peak. Up to 1,200 meters there are some beautiful hotels and the rich of Syria and Egypt come there to spend the hottest months.

The Arabian poets say of Mount Lebanon: "It is a giant, which has the winter at its head, the summer on its shoulders, the autumn at its waist, while the springtime reposes at its feet."

Other poets say the mountain of Lebanon resembles a sultan, slightly extended, the feet bathing in the sea. Oriental imagination is fecund.

Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Efficiency.

Young Husband—Dearest, what is that white powder you are dropping in the fire?

Young Wife—Why, that's baking powder, stupid. I'm ready now to put the cake into the oven. K. L.

He Was Model.

My wife had asked me several times—conservatively estimated—to do some repair work around our home. At last I got started at it and rather gloatingly asked, "Do you appreciate what a model husband you have?"

"Especially, since he's a working model." L. B. W.

That Was Why.

My husband always has the habit of teasing me about my nose. So one day I asked him why he married me if he did not like the looks of it. To my surprise he said, "O, just for amusement." H. E. O.

Sage Advice.

After a picnic supper of a decidedly mixed character I had a restless night, including a nightmare. It was one of the "squealing" variety. In fact, I made such a noise I awoke.

Hubby seemed awake, too, for he asked, "Whatzamatter?" and I answered crossly, "Nightmare."

"Why dontcha ride it?" was the swift reply. And he still insists he was not awake! C. C.

Just Imagine!

My chum and I were freshmen at college and had a mutual dislike for the dean. One noon we were sitting in a supposedly deserted chapel poring over a book, "Making Faces for Beauty."

"Oh," said my chum, "I'd feel foolish just making faces at myself."

"Just imagine you're looking at Dean R.," I answered. "That will make it easy."

Just then a figure rose from a dark corner nearby. It was Dean R.!

Embarrassing? Too mild a word! O. M. T.

Hasty Remark.

Some new tenants moved into the building where we live, a mother and daughter, and as they are employed they are away all day. For this reason they have just got their apartment straightened up, and yesterday being a holiday, they thought it would be a good day to do their washing. I went down into the basement and hearing a noise in the laundry thought it was the landlady, so I called out smartly, "Well, I have my opinion of any one who will do a washing on a holiday."

Not receiving the cheery come back I expected, I stepped around into the laundry, and came face to face with the new tenant whom I had never seen before. I didn't even wait to explain, but got out of there as fast as I could. B. H.

Her First Appearance.

I can say, truthfully, that the most embarrassing moment of my life was the occasion on which the young man who is now my husband was presented to me.

I had been invited to spend the evening at the home of a friend. My hostess had taken me upstairs to remove my wraps and we were coming back down the flight of steps, talking gayly. Suddenly I surprised myself exceedingly by catching the heel of my shoe on a step, bouncing downward in a forceful manner and thrusting my feet through the bannisters, thus knocking two of the upright pieces into the room. There I sat, dangling my pedestal extremities through the opening and blushing with embarrassment. In the same room, gazing smilingly at me, sat the young man who had been waiting for my appearance. Could anything be more embarrassing? N. T.

Changed Her Mind.

While visiting neighbors, a young married man and I agreed to play a game of checkers to decide who was to purchase a brick of ice cream. His wife seemed rather enthusiastic about her husband's prospects of winning the game and watched it with considerable interest.

When she realized I had won and her husband had to pay for the brick of ice cream, she said, "Don't you think it is too cold to eat ice cream?" E. H.

Had Some Herself.

It was examination day in general psychology class. Ten to a dozen sheets of paper were neded to write the examination. One of the students in front of me asked if she might borrow enough paper to write the exam. I hesitated, not thinking I had enough for myself.

"O, well, I'll just use some of my own," she replied, opening her notebook, which contained at least three new packages of paper.

I consider that real cheek, don't you? M. E. M.

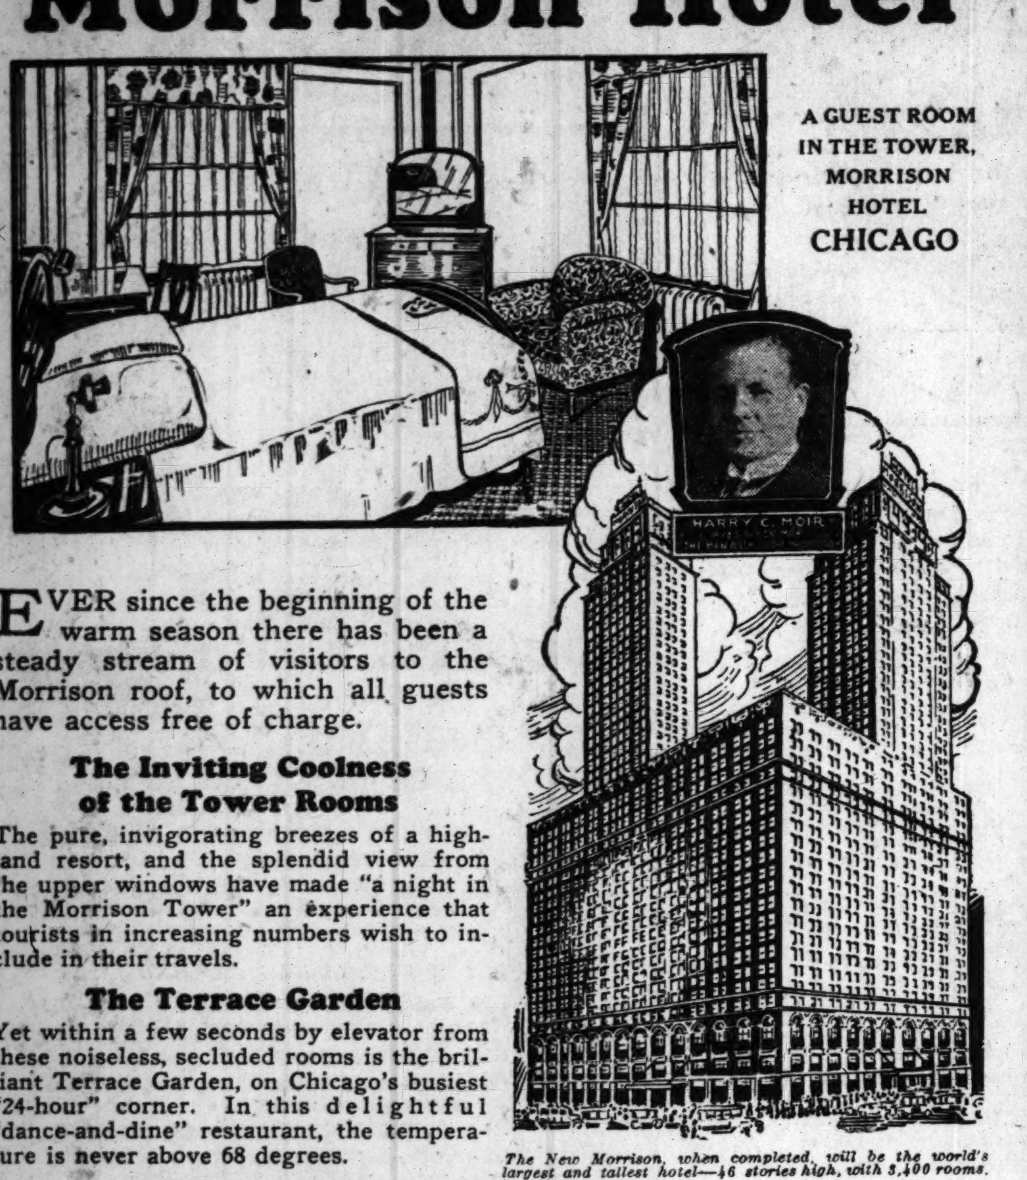
An Ideal Refuge From July Heat The 46-Story Tower of Chicago's

Morrison Hotel



A GUEST ROOM IN THE TOWER, MORRISON HOTEL CHICAGO

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel—46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

EVER since the beginning of the warm season there has been a steady stream of visitors to the Morrison roof, to which all guests have access free of charge.

The Inviting Coolness of the Tower Rooms

The pure, invigorating breezes of a highland resort, and the splendid view from the upper windows have made "a night in the Morrison Tower" an experience that tourists in increasing numbers wish to include in their travels.

The Terrace Garden

Yet within a few seconds by elevator from these noiseless, secluded rooms is the brilliant Terrace Garden, on Chicago's busiest "24-hour" corner. In this delightful "dance-and-dine" restaurant, the temperature is never above 68 degrees.

Rates, $2.50 Up, at Chicago's Most Central Hotel

The Morrison has 1944 outside rooms, each with bath, running ice water, bed-head lamp, and Servidor. Every floor has its own housekeeper, and all guests enjoy garage service. Yet rooms are rented for $2.50 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 elsewhere; at this location—the very center of the city—the valuable subleases pay all the ground rent, and the saving is passed on to the patrons.

Three beautiful dining rooms and a convenient coffee shop serve the good food for which the Bismarck is justly famous.

MRS. CARL B. STIBOLT.
[Paul Stone-Raymor Photo.]

MISS DAISIANNA SMITH.
[Raymor Photo.]

MRS. THEODORE DE WITT MATTHIESSEN.
[Paul Stone-Raymor Photo.]

THE marriage of Miss Martha Morse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse of 60 Scott street and Lake Forest, to Carl B. Stibolt, son of Mrs. Albert Stibolt of Davenport, Ia., took place yesterday afternoon at the Morse estate, "Fairmore," in Lake Forest.

Miss Daisianna Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin P. Smith, is active in the younger Lake Forest set. She is to depart this week for a stay at the H. F. Bar ranch in the west.

Mrs. Theodore DeWitt Matthiessen was Miss Elizabeth Small, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Small of 170 East Pearson street before her marriage on July 17 to Mr. Matthiessen, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Matthiessen.

On Ridding Summer of Stinging Insects

By Mme. X.

IT isn't as if the elimination of the mosquito were still in the experimental stage. It is not. It is an exact science. It was first solved nearly twenty years ago in Panama, when these pests so seriously interfered with the building of the canal that its prompt completion was menaced and that now famous graveyard which lies midway on the southern bank grew in its grim way from week to week. That remarkable pair, Col. Goethals and Dr. Gorgas, tackled and conquered the problem. Their methods have since been copied and improved on, so that it is now possible entirely to rid a community of these dangerous and obnoxious pests, as is proven by the region near Oyster Bay, where the Marshall Fields III. have built their stately summer home.

Mrs. Frank Remington, an ex-Chicagoan, who lives not far from the Field estate, told the writer two years ago about the rescue of that district from the anophylus pestiferosa. So inescapable and deadly were these insects that a previous owner of the land now composing the Field estate sold it for less than he had paid for it and in spite of having put costly improvements on it because he couldn't stand the "skeeters." The lives of people in that neighborhood were rendered miserable, even unendurable, by the stinging, buzzing, pestilential plague.

Starting a War.

Unable to endure it longer, the inhabitants combined and raised a fund to be used in the extermination of the summer's worst enemy. So successful were they that Mrs. Remington said they were able to dispense with screens at windows and doors.

They included also in their warfare a campaign against flies. Think how delicious life would be in this part of the land if we could dispense with screens!

The work of extermination has to be begun by the middle of May and is continued until September. It has to be done each year.

The state authorities have experts in this line who will instruct us and supervise any efforts in this direction. To be effective it would have to be an intercommunity enterprise, as it would be useless to exterminate the mosquito in one village when its next door neighbors were permitting the brutes to breed and multiply. The mosquito can only fly of its own volition a mile, but the wind—and this is a breezy region—can send it much farther.

The only citizen that I know of who has made any determined attack on them hereabouts is Louis Eckstein. He has spent thousands of dollars to rid Ravinia park of them and has succeeded wonderfully when the indifference and carelessness of neighboring villages is considered. Personally, I haven't been conscious of any mosquitoes in that dark, cool, delicious temple of music, though others have mentioned them. If they have been bothered by them those so troubled may have brought the nuisances with them in their hair or garments. The buzzers may be home grown, not raised in the park. For a mile round Mr. Eckstein's mosquito fighters have cleaned out possible breeding places and oiled stagnant pools.

We are deprived of the summer's chief pleasure, life in the open air, through our slovenly short sightedness. Mosquitoes breed in still water. Three-quarters of their short but vigorous lives are spent under water. Oil on the surface of the water suffocates and kills them. Flies lay their eggs and breed chiefly in stable refuse. Screening manure piles prevents or impedes these processes and by so much helps rid the neighborhood of these filthy, disease breeders. A special assessment on property owners or a voluntary subscription would quickly raise enough money to finance this double campaign. Imagine being able to sit in a comfortable seat in your garden, in the shade of your own vine and fig tree, reading or chatting with visitors, or having luncheon or supper set out on the lawn, or enjoying the sweet countryside without being beset by buzzing and stinging tormentors! It would make of everyday life an exquisite idyl.

To rid the country hereabouts of flies and mosquitoes is a man sized job, but if the men sidestep I vote that the women tackle it. They can handle it. If all the garden clubs in this region were to undertake it they would be doing more to make gardens an intimate part in family life than anything they could do in the way of developing rare blossoms or a taste in correct landscape design.

The Hegira Begins.

The summer, if you reckon this blessed season from June 1 to Sept. 1, is more than half over. But, as with us, warm weather usually continues up to and beyond mid-September, we can still look forward to many happy weeks. Perhaps if we should rid the countryside of its winged, stinging, buzzing pests, some of our local aristocracy, folk with lovely summer places, would be more willing to stay here through the pleasant open air, blossoming weeks which lie between now and frost. So many of this ilk are taking flight, or have already done so, that it makes sizable holes in the set known as "pretty people." [That term for them sounds Michael Arlenish.] Mrs. Noble Judah and her gay and growing twins, Catherine and Anne, departed last Tuesday for their Adirondack camp, where they will stay until September. Mrs. Ralph Poole and her four youngsters will join her soon. They have a nearby camp. A rustic, picturesque, but comfy abode in that district is always called a camp, so as to permit the simple, delightfully free, open air, early hour life that those seek who frequent the Adirondacks.

Mrs. Charles Schweppe and Mrs. Walter Brewster are, I hear, at the moment in search of houses at Bar Harbor. Bar Harbor, these days, has a vogue beyond that of any other summer resort, and to be likened only to that of Palm Beach in January and February. This will close for August four charming Lake Forest places, a loss to the society of that fashionable suburb.

Mrs. William McCormick Blair is another Lake Forester who is to be found in Bar Harbor next month. She and her children will be with her mother, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen.

Others who are planning trips away next month are: Mrs. A. B. Dick, Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, Mrs. Charles Edward Brown, and the Joseph T. Ryersons. The last named have taken a house at Narragansett Pier for a month, where they expect to settle their three children while they make a flying trip to France.

Mrs. Brown, authoress of that gay party night before last, is going to visit Mrs. Judah in August. Mrs. McBirney is to be the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Stimson Jr., at Rye, N. Y., and then will visit an old friend, Miss Annie Laurie, of Williamstown, Mass. Mrs. Dick will make one or two visits, but will be back by the middle of the month.

Mrs. William G. Hibbard of Winnetka, who has been a faithful attendant at the summer school of international politics at Williamstown, Mass., is going this season to the source or fount of inspiration of this school. She is sailing soon for Europe and will go direct to Geneva, Switzerland, where she has taken a house for the duration of the coming conference of the league of nations.

An Opportunity for Children.

None of these wanderers and absentees will find on their travels anything to compare with the operas and concerts being given seven nights and three afternoons a week at Ravinia park. The concerts are, in their way, as delightful a treat as the operas with their casts of great artists.

Those parents who do not arrange for their children to go regularly to the Thursday afternoon concerts at Ravinia are depriving them of a matchless opportunity. The great lack in the education of American youth is the absence of stress on the esthetic. It is too utilitarian, with the result that they are cut off from the high and exquisite pleasure to be derived from music, art, literature. The only recreation left them for their hours of leisure is sport, and when, in the course of time, an American comes to that period of his life when he can give up the long hours he has devoted to work, he has no interesting occupation for his leisure. It is a serious omission in our scheme of training the young.

For Lovers of Music.

Last Wednesday Lee Pattison gave the final one of four morning musicals which have been drawing Lake Forest lovers of music together each midweek. He is to repeat the Chopin and Bach concerts in Winnetka, in the charming music room in Mrs. T. H. McInnerney's Italian villa on the Indian Hill grounds. The first one will be given on Wednesday at four in the afternoon; the second one a week later at the same hour.

Mrs. McInnerney's house is one of the recent additions to that attractive group of houses which fringe the outer acres of the club's green expanse. It is filled with choice things brought from Italy and will make a lovely setting for these two attractive musicals.

Three Amateur Airmen.

The spirit of the age is manifested by three Chicago lads, sons of well known families, who are, as it were, the heralds or advance guard of the coming fad, or sport, or, perhaps, just the popular mode of locomotion, airplaning. Julian Farwell, Paul McBride and Ralph Isham are becoming expert airmen. Young Farwell has his own airplane, while the other two share one. Their flying machines are kept in Lake Geneva, Wis., though they have flown to North Shore suburbs. They fly from Lake Geneva to Lake Forest in forty-five minutes. Probably in a few years this will seem slow going.

They would visit their friends and families in this part of the land oftener if it weren't for a dearth of safe and convenient landing fields. There is a good deal of flying up over Lake Geneva and at almost any hour of the day one can hear there from the upper ether the drone or roar of one of these giant mechanical birds.

It is quite to be expected that the son of Arthur Farwell should be a pioneer in this new form of getting from place to place. It is only about twenty-eight years since Arthur Farwell nearly turned Lake Forest upside down by introducing there the first automobile to be driven in that region. So menacing was this innovation considered that the village passed a law requiring any one driving such a death dealing contraption to be preceded by some one on a bicycle blowing a horn and waving a flag. I don't think this amazing piece of legislation was ever taken off the records, but still stands on Lake Forest's tablets.

So alarmed were the residents, whose customary mode of progress was behind spirited steeds, that they were in the habit, before going out for a drive, of calling up the Arthur Farwells to ask if the latter were going out in their automobile, and if so, along what roads, so that the drivers of horses might avoid them. Only once did a wayfarer express any approval of the Farwells' strange, new, snorting, horseless vehicle. This was a man in a buggy whose horse had bolted up a steep embankment at sight of the first motor car. Instead of the customary abuse, the owner of the horse said to Mr. Farwell, "Thank you, stranger! That's the first sign of life from that hoss in a coon's age."

So Julian Farwell is merely following in the footsteps of his illustrious parents, only his footsteps are in the air.

That the air, however, is a more sinister factor in life than our good, solid old Mother Earth is evidenced by the recent tragic end of that good looking, gallant, charming young couple, the John C. Dawsons Jr. Their sudden annihilation on that air trip to Prague is one of those catastrophes that make one stop aghast and ask of life:

"What's it all about?"

Just before setting out for the trip abroad that ended in such shocking fashion both Mr. and Mrs. Dawson made their wills. In hers Mrs Dawson specified with probably unconscious prescience that in case of the death of both herself and her husband their three children should be put in the custody of her young sister, Maroussa Russell. Accepting this serious and sacred charge, Miss Russell, who was one of last winter's debutantes, has moved from her parents' residence to the Dawsons' house on Westminster avenue in Lake Forest and taken up her abode with the three tragically orphaned children, the eldest of whom is under six years of age.

The nature of the catastrophe which resulted in the apparently simultaneous deaths of the parents has left an unusual quandary to be solved by the lawyers in charge of probating the two wills. When acting on the last testaments of a man and wife who die together, the law has to decide which probably passed away first. As a rule, I believe, when there is no conclusive evidence in the case, it is decided that life lasts longest in the man as he is supposed to be physically the stronger. In a shipwreck, for instance, where both are known to have drowned or died of exhaustion in the water, a man's hold on the spark of life would be longer than a woman's.

The inevitableness of death is something we accept verbally—and inwardly reject vehemently.

·ART AND ARTISTS·

Two Summer Shows Hit Opposite Notes

By Eleanor Jewett.

SUMMER has leaped upon us with a vengeance. The Art institute lies docile in the glare of the noonday sun; the lions stretch their thick tongues to lick the last drop of moisture from the wind that blows hot and dry through the streets. That is the story of the façade. Go through the hospitable doors and you will find coolness and a depth of shadow that soothes the dart of fire ridging your brow with beads of sweat.

Downstairs there will be relief; upstairs, well, upstairs—those galleries in the east wing can be the hottest spot on earth, making a Turkish bath by contrast seem but a mild orgy of tepid vapors. On the other hand, it may happen that today and tomorrow will not be so hot, and in that case the galleries, with deft imitation, will also be cooler, and the summer shows which decorate their length will be harbors of refuge in which to linger, not purgatorial lanes through which to plow.

A Nightmare Collection.

The Forsberg and the Manoir exhibits were discussed at some length in this column last Sunday, and today two markedly different exhibitions demand first mention. These are the exhibitions of paintings by Flora Schoenfeld and Frances C. Greenman The two are hung together in the same room. Flora Schoenfeld divides her paintings between landscapes and portraits; the Greenman paintings are entirely portraits.

These portraits are extraordinary, weird affairs. It is hard to believe their prototypes could be found anywhere except in dreams, wild dreams that ride the brain with fury after a midnight indulgence in hot cheese or broiled, spectacular lobster. The several persons concerned are startlingly odd. Horrors pile on horrors as a survey of them focuses each detail more sharply on a wondering brain. There are green tinged women and yellow tinged women; society women as thin as rails and lumpy scrub women, for whom the Matisse tradition may be responsible.

There is one thin nosed woman, the skin drawn tightly over that unprepossessing feature, who might be a Shylock revived, concerned with nothing but herself, inconsiderate of all else; demanding and making full sure of her pound of flesh, sucking the last drop of blood from its aching vitals. Such a vampire does not need the wings of a bat to make her characteristics prominent. She shows her real self in the words and acts of every day. Had I not met this character this summer in the flesh, it would be difficult not to think the artist had overpainted the part.

There are two portraits by Frances G. Greenman which run apparently along lines laid down as conventional in an every-day world. One of these is of a charming little boy, robust and wholesome and the other is of a little girl, maybe 10, with big brown eyes and bobbed sleek hair. But for the rest, they are probably modern portraits, and modern portraits need no other quality than that of oddness. Two undeviating rules guide the delineation of figure: If the sitter is a woman of fashion, make her thin; if she is a working woman, make her vast, absurdly bulging. These rules have been carefully followed, and the color inflicted with a keen vision of that which would startle.

Color Is Needed Here.

The paintings by Flora Schoenfeld hang on the opposite walls. From the yellows and lemons and thin reds of the portraits by Miss Greenman we are thrown abruptly into a rather somber pit of browns and dull shades. There are two pictures frankly labeled cubist, but the riddle they present does not have to be read, for neither one is given a descriptive title. There is a fine still life, vegetables, which conveys something of Miss Schoenfeld's power as a painter.

The most delicate work, and that which is most charming, is found in the little group of water colors on the west wall. Among them are "Ronda, Spain" and "Southern France." One or two paintings of flowers are vigorous and real. The "Easter Lilies" is a strong piece of work.

However, leaving these, it does almost seem as though the life were drained from the colors on this painter's palette. The "Santa Fé Landscape" is a gloomy affair. The blasé, amusing boy, his eyes a blank behind the huge rimmed spectacles; "Portrait of an Artist" is entertaining, though done with dead paints. The "Italian Woman" is a sorry soul.

It is hard not to feel that a dash of Miss Greenman's spice would be a godsend to Miss Schoenfeld's shadows. The somber tones need the leaven of reckless sunshine, rubbed in with a careless hand. And to tone down the exuberant lemons and yellows of the portraits a feeling for darker colors would not detract one whit from their vitality. A judicious jumbling of the two palettes would bring forth—what? It would be interesting to see.

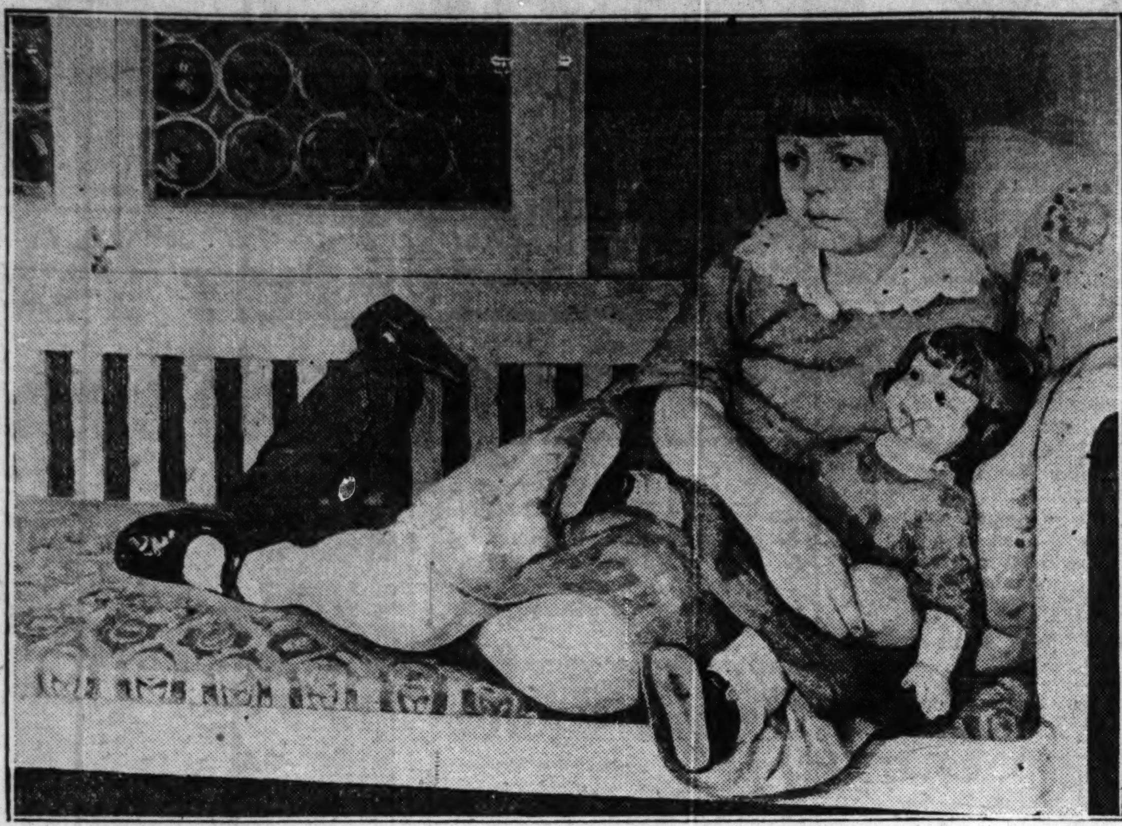
Our Latest Civic Wonder.

In Grant park a great fountain is being slowly erected, to be given to the city through the generosity of Miss Kate Buckingham in memory of her brother, Clarence Buckingham, a former trustee and benefactor of the Art institute. Due to its immense size and the amount of work it still calls for, in all probability it will not be finished for many months. However, as it is rising steadily on the lake front and as many people are curious as to what is being built there, the construction architects and city planners, Bennett, Parsons & Frost of Chicago, who are doing the work, have advanced the following information:

The fountain will be in a garden 600 feet square, with four minor pools surrounding the central fountain. Three fountain basins, one above the other, occupy the center of the main pool, which is about 300 feet across. The three basins rise, one above the other, the lower basin 100 feet in diameter, the middle basin 60 feet and the upper basin 24 feet. The height of the fountain will be about 25 feet above the level of the park.

There will be seventy-two jets in the main fountain, the largest number of which will spurt from the outer basin into the middle basin, and from thence to the top basin, from which a great column of water will rise vertically into the air to a distance of seventy to ninety feet. As the water descends it will flow into the lower basins in spectacular sheets, forming a great domelike structure of sparkling water.

On the outer area there will be four enormous pairs of double seahorses projecting water into the central basin. These are now being modeled and will be cast in Paris by M. Loyau. When in full play the fountain will flow about 5,500 gallons per minute. It will have a scheme of illumination at night with colored lights that will make it wonderfully beautiful. It will be the largest fountain of its type in the world. It will be another wonder of Chicago to make visitors forget our first fame rested upon the stockyards.



"MARGARETHA, Aged Eight," by Elmer A. Forsberg, in his one-man summer show current at the Art Institute. The majority of these paintings are of scenes in Finland, painted by Mr. Forsberg last year when he revisited his native country. He shares the gallery with Irving K. Manoir, and the combination of canvases is one of the most successful to be found in the museum.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Methodists Close 67th Annual Session

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Bishop Charles E. Locke of St. Paul, Minn.; Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Chicago area, and Dr. Horace G. Smith will be special preachers today at the Des Plaines camp ground, which closes tonight its sixty-seventh annual session. There will be sermons at 10:30 a. m., 3 and 7 p. m. A class meeting will be held at 9:30 a. m. led by the Rev. F. F. Farmiloe, 80 years of age, who has a clear voice and a vigorous personality. The choir from Franklin Park church will sing in the morning and the orchestra from the Garfield Park church will give a musical prelude to the afternoon service.

At 6 p. m. a union young people's service will be held in the Swedish tabernacle, led by the Rev. James O'May, pastor of the Sheridan Road church. The Des Plaines camp meeting has adopted as an additional name the summer assembly of Chicago Methodism.

Last Sunday the attendance was 7,000 with 600 automobiles parked on the grounds and a larger number is expected today. The Rev. H. Clifford Northcott is general chairman of the program and Raymond G. Kimbell is president of the board of trustees of the camp meeting association. Dr. Smith will preach at 10:30, Bishop Locke at 3, and Bishop Hughes at 7.

The Rev. Edward Shillito of London, England, will speak this morning at 11 a. m. on "Christ in Modern Literature" at the Kenwood church, interdenominational, 4600 Greenwood avenue.

The women of Des Plaines camp ground are organized into a society to aid in improving and beautifying the grounds. Mrs. W. H. Carwardine is president. A meeting will be held on the grounds Wednesday at 2:30. The women have raised $6,000 since their organization. Last year they raised $1,400 of this amount.

Next Sunday will be observed in all Roman Catholic churches as a day of prayer in behalf of Mexico. The day was selected by his holiness Pope Piux XI., as explained by his eminence Cardinal Mundelein, because it is the feast day of St. Peter in Chains. A letter has been written by Cardinal Mundelein in obedience to the pope's authority to be read in all the churches today which describes the action of the Mexican government in its restrictive laws against religious teachers, the press and schools as stupid and certain to fail, although bringing on the people burdens which can be remedied only by world wide prayer.

The Rev. Frank David Lawyer, pastor of the Ogden Park Methodist Episcopal church, 68th street and Loomis avenue, has been appointed pastor of the Central Methodist Episcopal church, Portland, Ore., and the pastor of Central church, Dr. J. C. Spencer, will come to Ogden Park. The transfer will take place within a month.

Dr. W. R. Wedderspoon, pastor for the last ten years of the St. James Methodist Episcopal church, Ellis avenue and 46th street, will preach today his farewell sermons. This morning his subject will be, "The Keeper of the Gate" and this evening "The Changing Road." Dr. and Mrs. Wedderspoon will leave at once for an extended vacation in the east. On Oct. 1 he will begin the pastorate of the Bryan Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, Miami, Fla. Mrs. Bryan, widow of the late William Jennings Bryan, has been a life long member of the Methodist Episcopal church, while her husband was a member of the Presbyterian church. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan frequently attended the Foundry Methodist Episcopal church in Washington, D. C., while Mr. Bryan was secretary of state, and Dr. Wedderspoon was pastor of the church. The acquaintance formed then has resulted in the present appointment.

Dr. Weddespoon has had a notable career as a builder of churches. He led in the erection of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Asbury Park, N. J.; Emory church, Pittsburgh, and three smaller churches previous to these large ones. The present $600,000 St. James church, dedicated a few months ago, is his latest achievement. Dr. Wedderspoon was given a farewell reception by the church last Wednesday evening and an engrossed testimonial of appreciation and affection was presented him on Monday at the Chicago Ministers' meeting on the Des Plaines camp ground. He is widely known by his lecture on "The Bonnie Brier Bush" and other interpretations of the Scotch, and by his sermons.

Joseph Jellyman, a member of the first vestry, is still serving the church. Nine of the boys of the parish have entered the ministry, two of them being sons of Frank D. Hoag, treasurer of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. Five of the young women devoting their lives to the service of the church. Former rectors of the church were the late Bishop Arthur Williams of Nebraska and Dr. Charles Herbert Young, rector-principal of the Howe Church School for Boys at Howe, Ind.

The Rev. J. J. Martin, C. M., assistant priest at St. Vincent's church, Chicago, has been appointed pastor of St. Patrick's church, La Salle, Ill. He will take charge next Sunday. La Salle is Father Martin's birthplace and his pastorate will be a homecoming to him. He was president of De Paul university in 1909 and of St. Vincent's, Giradeau, Mo., in 1910.

The Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension society announces through its president, F. E. Reeve, the resignation of Dr. J. R. Nichols as superintendent and the election of the Rev. Ernest G. Guthrie, for twelve years pastor of Union church, Boston, as his successor. Dr. Nichols has served ten years as a director and five years as superintendent of the society, which is more than forty years old. Dr. Nichols presented his resignation owing to his belief that a successor should be chosen at once in view of the enlarged plans of the society made possible by the bequests of the late Victor F. Lawson, which he said needs a man to enter into the planning of a policy which will look forward for fifteen years. The society has not as yet received any money from the Lawson bequests, it was said, but expects as its share something more than $4,000,000. Mr. Lawson's bequests totaled nearly $12,000,000.

The directors have agreed on the establishment of a bureau of methods and research, a larger coöperation with the training schools of the church, and the employment of a man who will give all his time to the property interests of the society. Current statements that Mr. Guthrie comes to Chicago to head new work are misleading, it was said, as his position is the one already in existence with, however, enlarge opportunities for work owing to the Lawson gifts.

Chief Constable Samuel Dickson of Toronto, who, as president of the association, presided at the thirty-third annual convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, which closed Thursday at the Congress, was an usher at the organization of the United Church of Canada a little more than a year ago in Toronto. "Some people seem surprised at a chief of police acting as usher at a church gathing," said Chief Dickson. "But I do not see why a chief may not be a good citizen and a good Christian as well as a chief of police."

The Rt. Rev. A. F. Winnington Ingram, Anglican bishop of London, who is to visit Chicago early this fall under Episcopal auspices, is recognized as the leading bishop of the church whose particular appeal is to young men. He frequently has been called upon to speak to students of Oxford and Cambridge, not only because of the wisdom and substance of his addresses, but by reason of the informality with which they are delivered. His method is to avoid the formal lecture for an informal discussion.

Writing of his coming visit to a friend, the bishop made this suggestion: "You might arrange for me to play tennis, or squash, rackets, or golf with some of the young men, as I am still playing all of these pretty well." He is 68.

Among the chaplains at the Illinois National Guard encampment, which opens at Camp Grant this week, will be the Rev. Frank R. Myers, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Mediator, Morgan Park, and the Rev. Frank H. Weichlein, rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, Maywood. The former is chaplain of the 131st Chicago infantry and will have charge of all the amusements and athletics, as well as religious services.

A country fair staged on the grounds of Robert G. McGann at Lake Forest for the benefit of the Church of the Holy Spirit netted the church $3,250 which will be applied to the parish debt. Mrs. Farwell Winston was chairman.

Carlos Cagigas, a Cuban boy, has just been graduated from St. Alban's Episcopal school for boys at Sycamore, with highest honors of the school, although four years ago, when he came to Sycamore, he could not speak or understand English. He was awarded the school popularity medal for three years by vote of the student body, and won high athletic and scholastic honors.

Eighty boys, 16 to 19 years of age, will sail this week for a tour of Europe, under the auspices of the National Council of the Young Men's Christian association, according to announcement of John A. VanDis, director of tours.

These boys represent thirty-two states. The Illinois representatives are Alvah Moffett, 619 Montana street, Peoria, and Thomas L. Griffin, 413 Linden avenue, Centralia. Candidates are especially selected for these tours, a given number being allotted to each state. Their expenses are paid in many cases by Rotary clubs, De Molay lodges and similar organizations.

Moffett was elected at the state conference of high school boys of Illinois and Griffin at the state meeting of employed boys under the auspices of the Illinois Young Men's Christian association.

The purpose of the tour is to promote international thinking, good will and education, and Christian world brotherhood. The itinerary will include England, Scotland, Norway, Finland, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Holland, Belgium, and France.

While in Finland the boys will attend the world conference of the Y. M. C. A. and camp out with the boys from thirty-two other nations, while attending the meetings. Boy members of the Young Men's Christian association in the various countries visited will serve as hosts to the American boys and competition will be afforded in athletics and various sports.

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Taking the Jump.

I lived by the river where the railroad bridge crossed. I was attending high school across the river so I had either to use a skiff or walk one-half mile up the river to the bridge. So I always crossed in the skiff. One evening as I was returning home the skiff was gone. As I was tired and thought no train was due at that time I decided to walk across the railroad bridge. Although I knew the danger I started across.

When I was half way I hear a shrill whistle. I turned and saw a train close upon me, so close I had no time to think. I knew there were just two things possible—to be killed by the train, or to drown. I chose the latter and jumped from the bridge just as the train whized past.

A man happened to be close by in a skiff and heard my cries for help and rescued me as I was going down the third time. That was the greatest thrill I ever experienced. F. E. S.

Through the Ice.

One afternoon I took my ice skates and went out to a deep pond. Just as I reached the middle I broke through the ice and went under up to my arms. There I was, all alone, holding myself up with upstretched arms. I screamed for help, but no one heard me. I was nearly frozen and exhausted thinking every moment was the last.

Imagine the thrill I experienced when my brother, who was in a barn nearby, heard my cries and came to my rescue. Seeing that the ice was cracked all around me, he could not venture near, but he ran quickly to the barn, secured a rope and threw one end to me. I caught hold of it, and with his help slowly crawled out. I never went skating alone again. MRS. T. A. H.

Richenda, escaping her husband's prison, finds the man she loves unconscious in the African jungle

Quite unintentionally she had overheard the confession . . . Startled and dismayed, she decided to run away. While making her wild escape through the jungle she came upon the man she loved, helpless, in the dense African brush. Overcome, after a desperate struggle with a lioness, he lay before her—unconscious.

Richenda Peterson, unsophisticated orphan, working desperately in a London office . . . transplanted, with fortune suddenly thrust upon her, to an unknown wilderness . . . confronted by Angus Brodie on his African ranch, and Brett Fairways, the impetuous lion hunter. Which was the man?

This is an unusual and most interesting serial story of an English orphan girl who learned much about love and sacrifice in uncivilized Africa.

Here is a daily serial of love and adventure; a triangle of intrigue and uncertainty; a hasty jungle wedding; escape and capture; imprisonment, freedom, understanding.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Polo's Popularity Is Mounting Higher

By Howard White.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Polo has always been a popular sport with society since it was introduced into this country years ago, when the Belmonts, Foxhall Keene, Thomas Hitchcock, the father of the famous internationalist, Thomas Hitchcock Jr., and others were prominent in the game. It later was brought into more popular favor by Harry Payne Whitney, the Waterbury brothers, Devereux Milburn and Louis E. Stoddard, now president of the National association. It is now becoming a great sport at the summer resorts. Beverly, Narragansett Pier, Newport, Rumson, Seabright, all have numerous teams. On Long island, now the scene of all the big matches, half a dozen games were played in one day a week ago at Meadowbrook and at Sands Point.

Clans Begin to Gather.

With the polo matches at Hurlingham, London, over, members of the different polo teams who will play at Rumson, Philadelphia, and Meadowbrook will sail for New York on the Homeric on Aug. 4. Among those who have already booked passage are Maj. Vivian Lockett, a former member of the British international team; Stephen Sanford, Capt. C. T. I. Roark, Robert E. Strawbridge Jr., Lord Wodehouse, Wing Commander Wise, Frederic H. Prince Jr., and Harry East.

The Argentine poloists, headed by Lewis L. Lacey, also will be on board. They include Jack D. Nelson, Manuel Andrada, C. N. Land and A. M. Pena. The Argentine players will go to Rumson, N. J., where they have several games scheduled at the Rumson Country club. Later they will play in Philadelphia and at Meadowbrook.

The polo tournament at the Point Judith Polo club, Narragansett Pier, soon to start, will inaugurate a series of luncheons, teas, dinners and dances. James C. Cooley of this city, who is to manage the tournament, has arrived there and is busy with the preliminary arrangements.

One of the features of polo week will be the annual bridge tournament of the Village Improvement association at the Carlton early in August.

A SINCERE SALESMAN.

We have no $25,000 a year jobs for salesmen.

No salesman can become one of our executives in a month.

We are not looking for the quick, slick, clean-up salesman.

We do not sell real estate, insurance or house-to-house.

We call only on Executives in business.

We do have AVERAGE salesmen earning $8,000.

We do promote salesmen with Sales Records to Executives.

A connection in this organization means securing a permanent territorial franchise with a nationally known organization. A proven future without investment, except your brains, for active salesmen between 27 and 40 years of age.

I will interview privately and employ two men for nearby territories, so do not consider this unless you are prepared to start AT ONCE should a connection be agreed upon.

Let's get down to "brass tacks." We only want to interview salesmen who are sincere in their desire to make a permanent connection. Remember, no quick cleanup here, but an opportunity which you will immediately recognize after talking it over with me.

OPPORTUNITY.

The Williamson Heater Company, at Cincinnati, a nationally known manufacturer of heating apparatus, has an opening in this city for a man to handle the Snow White Cabinet Clothes Dryer, salable to new homes, professional builders and architects.

Snow-White dries, sterilizes, and bleaches clothes in a few minutes. It permits washing and ironing to be done the same morning. It prevents fading of clothes exposed to sunlight. It prevents damage to clothes by wind. It makes the housewife independent of weather conditions. No more unsightly displays. Every woman appreciates its advantages. It appeals to the professional builder, for it enhances the salability of his buildings. It appeals to the apartment owner or builder in eliminating the backyard problem. Space heretofore used for drying can be used for other purposes. To the man owning or erecting a high grade home it sells itself. The price is less than any other laundry equipment. $35 WEEKLY TO MEN WHO WANT TO LEARN TO SELL REAL ESTATE.

Real estate selling is on a mighty firm basis. For the men willing to work, all the chance has been taken out of this business and real estate offers great opportunities for making good in a big way.

In other lines most men work on definite salaries with little opportunity of increase. Our men work on commission with a $35.00 weekly drawing account. Many of them earn over $100 per week.

Our business is good. We need more salesmen to work on new properties. We are willing to teach these men how to sell real estate and place them on a drawing account while learning. This is a real opportunity for earnest workers in any line. Sales experience is not necessary. Call after 9 a. m. Monday.

Live in Streeterville

Hamilton Smyth Lived the Active Life of a Sportsman.

Hamilton Smyth, in the vigorous nineties, lived north of the river, away from the tiresome din of the city. An early horseback ride fitted him for a strenuous morning of business; then a leisurely luncheon at his club before an afternoon at the links or the turf.

Streeterville today is the home of many athletic people who have time for sports; its immediate environment encourages this.

180 East Delaware
Adds convenience of living to this convenience of location.

LOCATION—

In the heart of a most elite residential section, only one-half block east of Chicago's principal thoroughfare, 180 E. Delaware is within walking distance of the great metropolitan shopping, business and theater centers, select private schools, and renowned churches. In its immediate neighborhood are the Drake and Lake Shore Drive hotels, as well as the homes of Chicago's social leaders. The Casino Club is directly across the street.

BUILDING—

Its exclusive character, intrinsic beauty of design and execution, and convenience are the outstanding attributes of this new group of luxuriously conceived apartment homes. The building incorporates the ultimate in tested and approved appointments of unquestioned good taste. On the ground floor will be an exquisitely furnished lounge, an Old English tea room with excellent cuisine, and a commissary.

APARTMENTS—

They will be unfurnished — three, four and five rooms, convertible, if desired, into six and eight. The apartments are arranged to give infinite comfort and efficiency. The walls will be canvased and paneled. Marble mantels and period design lighting fixtures will grace the living rooms. Crystal lighting fixtures, maids' call in the dining rooms. Chambers will have full length mirrors and large closets. In the bathrooms—colored tile wainscoting, showers, and shampoo sprays, Venetian mirrored medicine cabinet, linen closets. The kitchens will be equipped with mechanical refrigeration, all white cooking ranges, and enameled steel cabinets.

SERVICE—

Maid service will be optional. High speed elevators of micro precision, operated by efficient attendants, will whisk you in a few seconds to your floor. A vacuum heating system will regulate precisely the temperature and humidity throughout your apartment. Rental will include mechanical refrigeration, electric light, gas, laundries, and driers.

Prospective tenants, of course, are being chosen with discrimination.

180 East Delaware
offers the essentials of hotel service at a cost far lower than is possible in hotels. 3, 4 and 5 room apartments, convertible, if desired, into 6 or 8 rooms: $165 a month upwards.

The multiple advantages of location and facility afforded by these apartments have already given rise to a spirited demand for choice reservations. We counsel prompt action.

Personal representatives of the management are on the premises from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. to show you the features and a model apartment decorated and furnished by the French Shops, Incorporated, Chicago, under the personal supervision of Mr. Pierre J. Morel.

AQUITANIA
Unfurnished Apartments
ON THE LAKE SHORE.
AT 5000 NORTH.
"DISTINCTIVE"

This single word expresses a woman's preference for the luxurious apartment homes in the Aquitania. A preference so firmly established that the Aquitania, although a comparatively new building, is today Chicago's outstanding fine apartment building.

The Aquitania Apartments are distinctive, not merely because they have one or two outstanding advantages, but because all the splendid features that characterize a truly livable home are to be found in these exquisite apartment residences.

Furthermore, the peace and quiet, the freedom from noise and congestion, and the cleanliness of its location makes life in the Aquitania more pleasant and healthful.

A delightfully cool and refreshing place to live—on the shore of Lake Michigan.

CO-OPERATIVE APT.

More practical and comfortable than a house; cheaper, lower upkeep, and a more desirable location. It will increase in value more rapidly than a house, because building locations are limited in the Lincoln Park district, where most of these co-operative bldgs. are located.

We now have a 4 rm. apt., near the lake, east of Broadway, large, light rms., in-a-dor bed, which provides an extra sleeping room. An investment of $5,600 and $36.21 per month for all operating cost gives you a permanent home in the most desirable neighborhood in the city.

Why have Chicago families who formerly paid rent, bought $100,000,000 of co-operative apts.? Our co-operative owners are 100% satisfied and none has sold his apt. except at a profit. Terms if desired. For further information see of reasonably priced beautiful co-operative apartment homes we have developed a building of four and five rooms, such as you would expect to find only along the Lake Shore-dr. at $5,000 to $6,000 more than our prices.

There are four and five rooms having large canvassed living rooms and big paneled dining rooms with Spanish bracket lights. One and two bedrooms, bright kitchens with built-in cupboards, large Universal gas ranges, and genuine porcelain enameled refrigerators.

A glistening white tile bathroom with showers, pedestal lavatory, built-in bathtubs. Excellent closet space; also cedar lined chest closets and other ultra-modern features.

The construction throughout the building, the halls, lobbies, etc., is the very best. Storage space and modern laundry facilities in the basement. The very latest Kewanee heating plant.

Can you imagine all this, in the best section of beautiful Rogers Park, two blocks from the lake, with cash payments as low as $1,000 and monthly assessments as low as $47.50?

We have representatives there all day to answer your questions, but they will not urge you to buy. The apartments are at 1522-28 Fargo-av., one block from the Jarvis-av. L station and the Sheridan-rd. busses.

We sell to discriminating people only and invite your thorough investigation.

The MISTY PATHWAY

By

FLORENCE RIDDELL

WITH this story, "The Misty Pathway," THE TRIBUNE introduces to its readers a new author, Florence Riddell. It is the story of a modern Cinderella, a charming tale of love replete with smashing adventures. From a drab office in London the heroine finds her way to the wild coast of eastern Africa. She meets there a bewildering romance—a triangle of intrigue and uncertainty, a hasty jungle wedding, escape and capture, imprisonment, freedom, and finally understanding. Read this first installment now and continue it tomorrow in the feature pages of Monday's TRIBUNE.

INSTALLMENT I.

A Modern Cinderella.

"MY godfathers!" Richenda Peterson's teacup clattered suddenly down on her breakfast tray with a terrific rattle as she scanned the amazing letter which trembled between her agitated fingers. "My godfathers!"

The mists of sleep had been heavy on those wide, dark eyes but a few moments before, when, hard upon ten chimes from a nearby tower, the small maid of the Bloomsbury boarding house had insinuated herself through the narrow doorway bearing the morning meal with its accompaniment of a solitary large white envelope which bore a printed Fleet street address on its back.

Ten o'clock! It was not often that a week day found Richenda breakfasting in bed and at such an advanced hour of the morning, but, as her summer holiday had been unduly shortened by the illness of her immediate superior in the city office where she spent her busy days, Richenda had arranged to take the week's leave, which was still due to her, in odd bits during the autumn.

Today was one of the bits, and Gladys Ann had been given strict orders the previous night not to wake Richenda a single minute before 10 o'clock. She wished to take full advantage of this lazy morning.

At first she had not noticed the letter. The room was cold, so she had turned on the little gas fire, donned a fur bordered dressing jacket and a rose hued boudoir cap (Richenda loved color) and slipped back to her warm bed preparatory to tackling the bacon and tomatoes which formed her favorite breakfast. She would have liked mushrooms and kidneys as well, but, as she philosophically decided, one must subdue mushroom and kidney inclinations when one has only a boiled egg income!

And now the hot tomatoes were becoming duller in hue, the bacon a little cold and gray, and Richenda, her lacy cap suddenly shot to the back of her head as she ran puzzled fingers through her disordered thatch of rioting short hair, was sitting bolt upright, away from the comfortably arranged bank of pillows at her back, mouth agape, eyes wide in amazement—gasping.

Of course it couldn't be! There was some mistake. She hadn't even bothered to consider those silly industries properly. She had just put the fifteen names on paper and dabbed a pin at them, chanting childishly: "Ena, deena, dinah, doh, catch a nigger by his toe . . ." until she had one by one reduced them to the numbered order decided by the old rhyme. Then she had sent the list, accompanied by a five shilling postal order, up to the newspaper office. And now—this marvelous letter!

The words danced up to her amazed eyes again:

" . . . glad to inform you that you are adjudged the winner of the first prize of £5,000 (five thousand pounds) in our Blind Ballot Competition. As no other competitor gave exactly the same order of industries, the prize is undivided and goes wholly to you."

Five thousand pounds! Five thousand pounds! FIVE THOUSAND POUNDS!

"My godfathers!" said Richenda Peterson, for the third time.

SHE hurled herself off the bed in a gasping heap, her meal untasted, delved hurriedly into the drawer that held her extra specially fine set of pink crêpe de chine undies, did some hurried splashing at the tiny washstand, wrested her newest gray costume—which was some eight months old—from its hook, dabbed a thistledown powder puff over her features—excitement makes the nose so shiny—crammed a red felt hat on her excited head, grabbed a purse in one hand and gloves in the other, slammed the door, and shot down the narrow stairway like a miniature whirlwind. For the first time in her life she didn't stop to turn off the fire—and there was still a pennyworth of unconsumed gas to run through the meter pipe. Reckless Richenda! But who stops to catch a mouse when they are intent on hunting elephant?

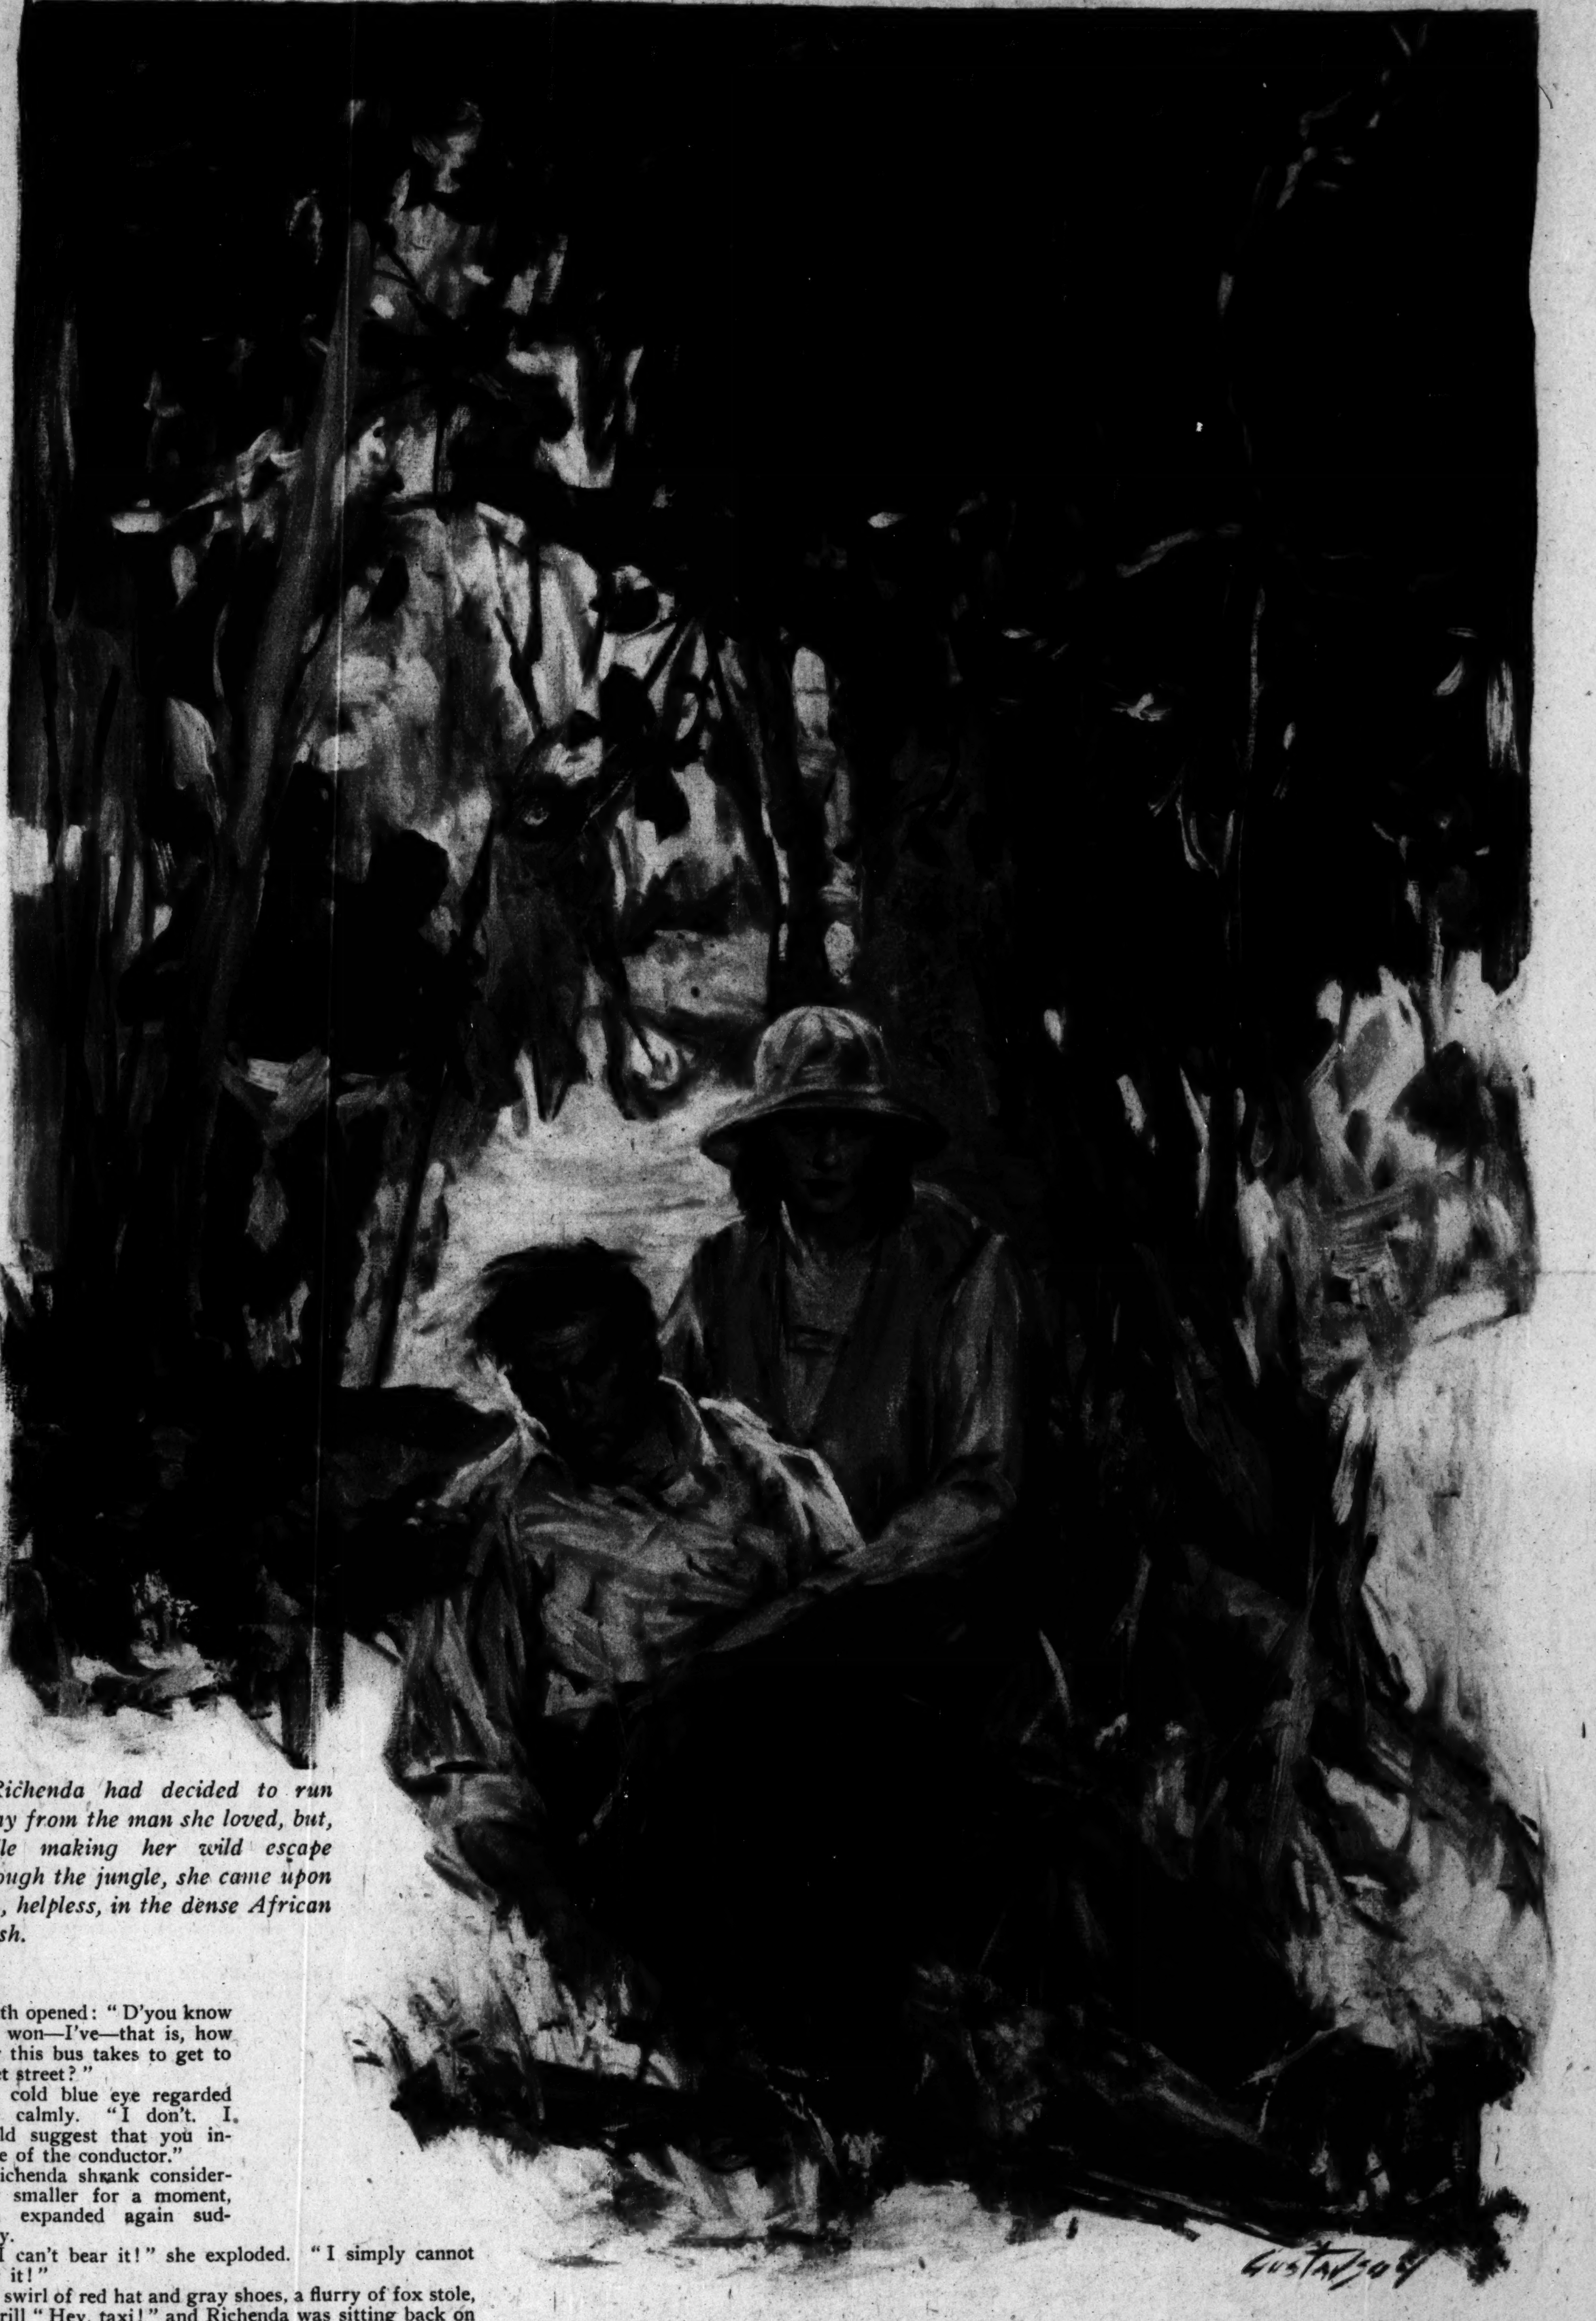
Richenda was after that five thousand pounds before it melted into thin air!

Was ever bus so slow—did ever the careful old ladies take so long to cross the road? And the wretched driver! Chattering to the conductor when he should be getting on . . on . . .

Fleet street must be miles away still! And her five thousand pounds! She'd never be able to breathe evenly again until she'd really—really got it!

She wanted to tell somebody about it—to tell everybody—and she wanted to sing it to the heavens—to yell it with the whole force of her lungs—"I've won five thousand pounds! I've won—five thousand POUNDS!"

That woman on the opposite seat with the imitation sables, what would she say if she knew? Richenda's mouth opened: "D'you know I've won—I've—that is, how long this bus takes to get to Fleet street?"



Richenda had decided to run away from the man she loved, but, while making her wild escape through the jungle, she came upon him, helpless, in the dense African brush.

A cold blue eye regarded here calmly. "I don't. I would suggest that you inquire of the conductor."

Richenda shrank considerably smaller for a moment, then expanded again suddenly.

"I can't bear it!" she exploded. "I simply cannot bear it!"

A swirl of red hat and gray shoes, a flurry of fox stole, a shrill "Hey, taxi!" and Richenda was sitting back on shiny leather cushions, still gasping.

"Mad!" said the conductor of the deserted bus. "Poor young thing!"

"Drunk!" said the lady of the sables. "Perfectly abominable"

And both of them were, up to a point, quite right, for great and sudden joy is known to have an unbalancing and intoxicating effect.

But Richenda, singing shrilly in the seclusion of the taxi, did not care what people thought, for the burden of her song was, "I've won five thousand pounds!"

More than one passerby shot a curious glance at that excited face. A strong young face it was, handsome—the word is old fashioned, but somehow pretty or even lovely did not suit the girl so well—handsome in a half boyish way. Her skin might once have been fair, but now it was tanned to a delicate bronze through which a red flush of perfect health rose on her gently curved cheek. The rather wide red mouth, finely cut and sensitive, was usually held in lines of strong repression—lines which could suddenly break into infectious laughter that brought unexpected dimples in its train, dimples which, one would have thought, could not lurk about the lips of this young Venus of the rather solemn expression and the brooding dark eyes. But rebellion sang from the rioting waves of her dark bobbed hair, self-will spoke in the set of her slim shoulders, a sense of humor proclaimed itself from the faint network of lines round both mouth and eyes, and strength showed in every line of her slender figure. And behind all lay a feminine allure of which Richenda Peterson herself was never conscious.

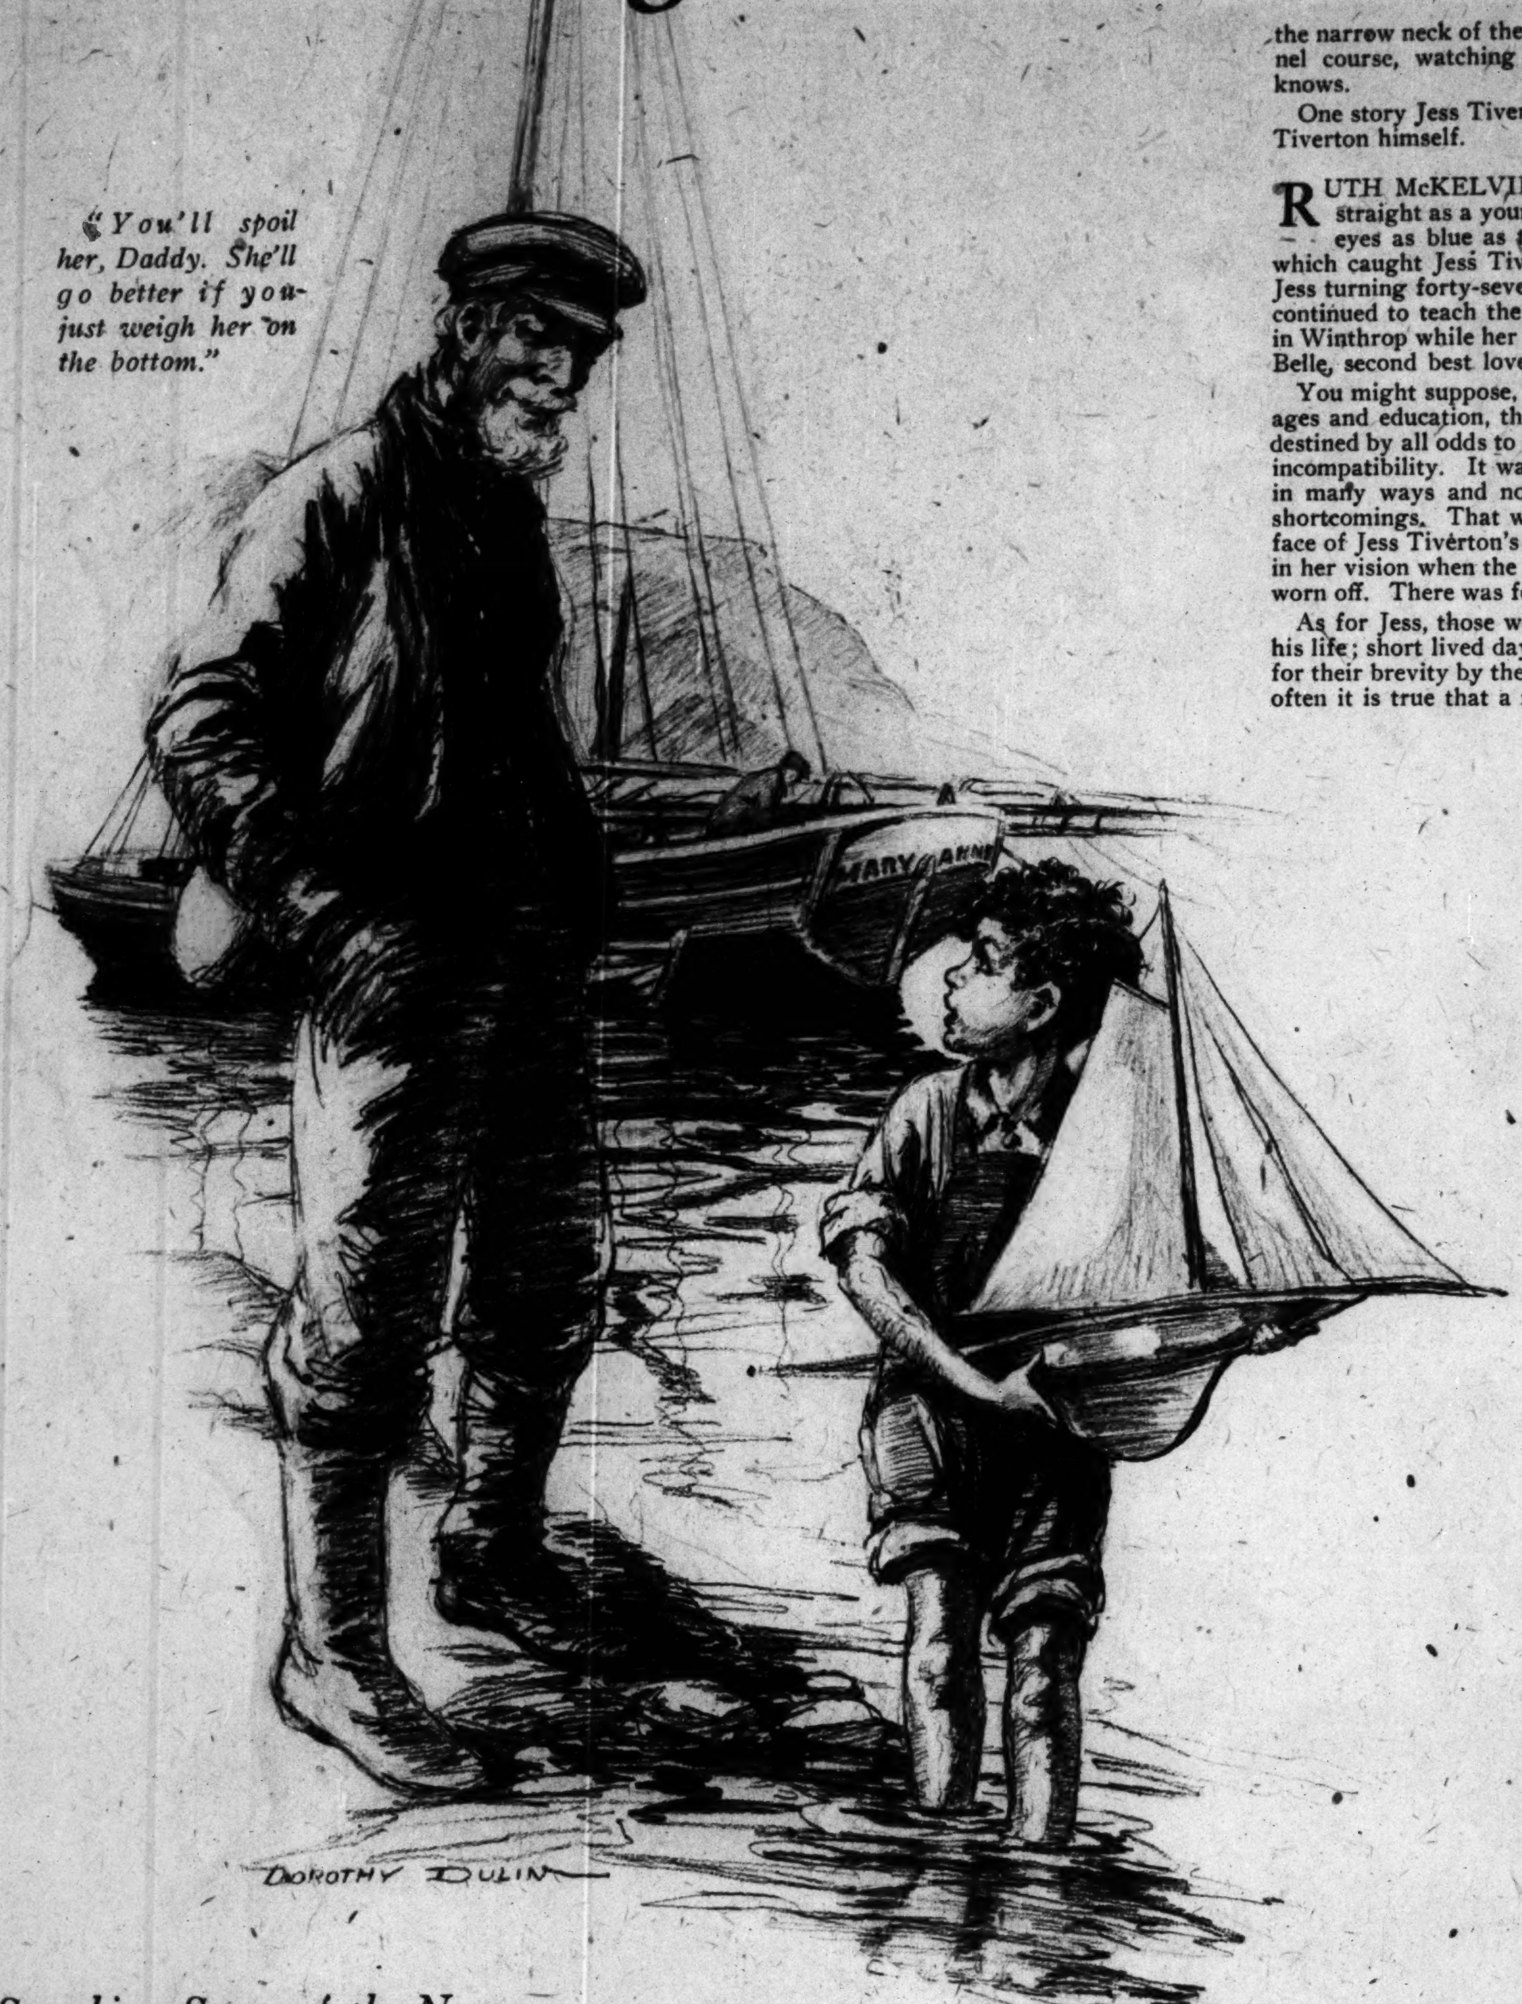
Imaginative and idealistic, she sought to model herself on the calculating, businesslike young woman of today—sought thus and, as far as the outside world could judge, succeeded. But deep in her twenty-six year old heart there were smoldering fires, the existence of which so far nobody who knew her had ever guessed—ideals, hopes, strange restless longings that she could not put into words.

"Life is going to mean something to me," she told herself, "something wide—big—tremendous! It must! It must!"

[Copyright: 1926: By Florence Riddell.]

Richenda's dream came true. The prize was real. What she did with her newly acquired riches provides a serial story that grows in interest and excitement with each new installment. Continue this fine tale tomorrow in the feature pages of Monday's TRIBUNE!

The Story of Jess Tiverton by Win Brooks



"You'll spoil her, Daddy. She'll go better if you just weigh her on the bottom."

A Smashing Story of the New England Fishing Fleet---a Story That Will Thrill You as Few Stories Have the Power to Thrill.

"I MIND the day," old Jess Tiverton will begin, rolling his bit of dark plug in ludicrous fashion between his toothless gums, "I mind the day Sibley Carew shook a reef out of a foresail in a hurricane of wind on Peter's Bank and ev'ry man was drowned."

Jess is always "minding the day." Then he'll squint up at you sideways from his trawl tubs and await a word of encouragement. If you know Jess and have heard the story you'll shut him off quickly enough.

"Fine day, Jess. Had any word from George Suttle?"

Or, more abruptly, if you lack reverence for an old man of the sea who has lived many of the experiences in the relating of which he takes a keen delight: "Pipe down, you old wharf kibby! I've heard that one three times now."

He'll shake his head at that last and return to overhauling gear. But in another minute, unless you've passed on, he's squinting up at you again, that same eager light in his gray eyes.

"Ever heard tell the Sassadowne? Thomas Bailey's boat in the days when young snipes kept a hot tongue between their teeth." Undaunted by rebuff, he's off again on another tack, charged with the spirit of the adventure vivid in his mind.

"Man, couldn't he sail her! Why, say, I mind the day . . ."

Old men, you know, and their talk. Old men of the fishing fleet are no exceptions. Rather, it seems, these fishermen, by nature given little to idle talk, grow suddenly more verbose than all the rest when the years begin to weigh heavily upon them and they are no longer young enough to work their shares of a trip.

Anywhere in the wide world where there is green harbor water and an old pierhead and the masts of sailing ships close by you'll find old sailor men living in a past adventure rich and sparkling with romance and finding their happiness at last in the telling of these tales. Hearsay, some of them; warped, barnacled, salt crusted barks blown down the quick years. A few are fiction. Yet the yarns they best love to spin are true enough despite the incredulity with which they are ofttimes greeted.

A Bank fisherman, Jess Tiverton, in the years now gone. A master in his day, his halcyon day when the Blue Belle, her fish in ice and her windward rail above the level of the deckhouse, raced many a market home from Georges, Brown's, and the Grand Banks of Newfoundland. Old age caught him suddenly one trip and he never sailed again. And because he had never saved his earnings and owned no share in the vessel of which he was master right up until his last trip to sea—or perhaps for a reason deeper and more subtle—Jess Tiverton became a hanger on about the wharves.

His fishing days ended just about the time of the passing of old T-wharf as the home of the Boston fleet. When the new Fish Pier was finished and the familiar boats began to tie up there Jess began to haunt the place, finding for hands a little weakened and unsteady, although yet skilled, some measure of employment the remuneration for which was sufficient to keep him in chewing tobacco.

He became one of those talkative old men with always a ready story for an appreciative ear. Sail carriers? He has known them. Torrey Libbey and his Sue. Gene Ackerton and the Wanton Miss. John P. Doyle and his Flagaloon. And others.

Some of them sailed their masts out; some drowned themselves and their men; not a few of them are still alive. Best of all he likes to relate those stories of captains who refused to shorten sail on their well founded vessels. Many a trip of fish in a gale of wind he'll spin you and there's butter in your marrow if you fail to thrill to the telling. Driving masters, weak masters, shoal water men, good "fin" men and bad. He has known them all, and about each, if you give him half a chance, he'll tell a story.

But there is one story Jess Tiverton does not tell. Hint, lead him with questions as you may, he'll pretend old age has caused him suddenly to become stone deaf. His turn then to parry.

"What's that, mister? Yes, a bit of swell on." It's the Blue Belle you've asked him about!

He'll maybe start mumbling to himself and you'll think him daft; others thought so once. He'll lift his eyes to the narrow neck of the harbor, gazing off down the channel course, watching for the glint of a sail he well knows.

One story Jess Tiverton never tells. The story of Jess Tiverton himself.

RUTH McKELVIE was fair haired, wind freckled, straight as a young tree. It was her eyes probably, eyes as blue as the zenith of a winter sky at sea, which caught Jess Tiverton. She was twenty-five then, Jess turning forty-seven. After they were married Ruth continued to teach the fifth grade of the Bradley school in Winthrop while her husband sought fish with the Blue Belle, second best love.

You might suppose, considering the difference in their ages and education, that theirs was a course precarious, destined by all odds to end up on some submerged reef of incompatibility. It was not so. She was a woman wise in many ways and not without a knowledge of man's shortcomings. That which she gleaned beneath the surface of Jess Tiverton's rough exterior remained foremost in her vision when the false glamor of courting days had worn off. There was for her no disillusionment.

As for Jess, those were no doubt the happiest days of his life; short lived days, to be sure, but made up in part for their brevity by their overwhelming sweetness. Very often it is true that a man who has not known womankind until comparatively late in life discovers in the companionship a happiness and understanding more complete than his fellows.

He was a good man on the fishing grounds; his was a well faring, contented crew, the Blue Belle one of the stanchest and fastest of the fleet's two masters. Never a man to drive, he had yet accomplished much, and in the record of fish tonnage and quick trips his vessel stood high.

Never a man to drive; on the other hand, never a man to quibble. What orders Jess gave aboard ship were spoken in quiet tones save when necessity ruled otherwise. In the quality of his voice in those days, however, there was a note which commanded respect, and respect he had from his crew and his associates in the Banks fleet. And, for a long time, admiration also.

Tripper Tarboy, George Suttle, and one or two others will tell you that the two years of Jess Tiverton's married life were supremely happy ones. A strangely silent man for the most part heretofore, although good humored enough for a fishing master, he became a whistling, singing captain—an uncommon occurrence in the fleet—ready always to pass a little better than the time of day with any member of his crew, never hesitant in lending a helping hand where he deemed such aid to be needed. Not a marked change, for Jess Tiverton had never been other than a good fellow, but an obvious surface indication of an increasingly pleasant frame of mind.

A crew accepts its master as it finds him. Or finds another master. Give a fisherman an inch and he'll take just that. No more. The Blue Belle's crew took their captain's new happiness just as it was proffered them, nor attempted to encroach upon his good nature; they allowed that good nature to expand and envelop them. The results were immediately apparent. Jess Tiverton and his Blue Belle brought increasingly larger hauls of fish in shorter periods of time than ever before. There were no changes in the personnel of the vessel's crew, ever an indication to careful owners of a money making boat.

The second autumn following their marriage Ruth Tiverton failed to return to her teaching, and aboard the Blue Belle there ran a rumor that Jess had high hopes of a prospective member of his crew. The man himself, of course, made no allusion to the affair, but they marked that he ceased his whistling and was given to long periods of silent thought.

On December seventeenth, when the Blue Belle had been two days only on Brown's Bank, there occurred that which men who have grown old with Jess Tiverton still speak of in hushed tones and with a wagging of sage heads.

It was a fine, clear day for winter fishing, a light breeze out of the southwest and a comparative calm upon the sea. Twenty-eight men of the vessel were over the side in their fourteen dories, the farthest of them not a mile away. They worked fast and sure with a promise of Christmas ashore.

Jess was below; besides himself only his mate, George Suttle, a capable Gloucester man, and Farley Manser, the cook, remained aboard. A little past noonday Jess came up forward where Suttle was idly splicing cable line. Beneath the brown of the captain's features the mate distinguished an alarming pallor.

"Get your horn going," Jess ordered. "We're heading home."

Just like that! Two days on the Bank, a hold not beginning to fill with fish.

"You're sick?" Suttle asked.

"Don't ask me questions," Jess snapped. "Get your horn going!"

The mate, filled with wonder, complied—two long blasts on the fog horn, repeated at intervals of a minute for five minutes.

To windward where the dories worked men ceased their pulling of trawl lines and, themselves wondering, made a course for their ship, standing plainly within sight.

In almost shorter time than it takes to tell the Blue Belle's dories were aboard and stowed, the anchor broken out, mainsail, foresail, jib, and jack set and drawing, and she was off for Boston.

Only a light breeze out of the southwest, as I told you, and it gave little evidence of growing stronger. Yet it was a homing wind, and the Blue Belle, light in her ballast with only her ice, gave her lee rail to the sea and made off on a port run. A fast boat always, more so in a fair blow and to windward, but speedy in any breeze, she was not fast enough for Jess Tiverton that day.

A changed man, he paced the windward deck of his vessel, barking orders in a language the key to which they never believed he possessed. Now and again he took the wheel himself, trying to draw out of her every bit of speed of which she was capable. Fair time they made; no better.

ABOUT sunset the wind swung to the southeast and came on to blow, a strong breeze at first, with the darkness a moderate gale. The Blue Belle went hard over, and as the seas began to make they broke steadily over her bows, racing aft across the gurry kids and smashing against the deckhouse. She needed a reef in jib sail then to keep her head up.

"Be better going if we claw in one forward," Suttle got up courage enough to suggest.

"You'll take no reefs, mister," Jess answered. "Not this night. She'll sail as she be or she'll not sail at all. And I'll need no help as to her handling."

That was enough for Suttle. Enough for any man, for that matter. They sailed her that night with no reef in any sail, while Jess stood his deck with neither food nor sleep. It blew a moderate gale, a half gale, a full gale, and Jess Tiverton, who no longer whistled and said kind words, cursed his crew to greater efforts. It was an all hands job with life lines rigged fore and aft, for nearly every sea was a breach, and no man slept. The wonder of it is she carried through without mishap of any kind.

That crew asked no questions, received no information. The men knew only that they must get home, that Jess Tiverton was in a hurry.

The Blue Belle beat up past the Graves at daybreak of as nasty a winter morning as you'd care to see. When she swung alongside T-wharf Jess was the first man off.

Some say he reached home before his wife died, that he was with her at the end, his strong, brown hands clasping hers. Others tell you Ruth died during that night. Jess himself never said.

There was a baby who could not live, the doctor predicted. Jess Tiverton thought otherwise. For three months he did not go to sea; when he sailed again Young Jess was as healthy as any youngster of his age, well cared for in the home of the captain's sister.

It early became apparent, following Jess Tiverton's return to his vessel, that his whole heart and soul were centered in his boy. The love and the adoration which had belonged to the woman with whom he had found happiness were transferred to Young Jess.

Never once aboard the Blue Belle did Jess make reference to the loss of his wife. Nor did he ever speak of that driving trip home in a gale of wind from Brown's Bank.

How had Jess Tiverton known that his wife needed him that day? The men of his ship asked that question among themselves, not of Jess. And the answer to it was ever a mooted one, although most agreed it could be traced to a premonition inspired by a knowledge of her condition. Perhaps Jess himself would not have answered differently.

The story of that trip got around, as such stories are bound to get around after a fashion, and it was told on other vessels out of Boston. All who heard had occasion some years later to recall it.

The Blue Belle's captain became a counterpart of his old self in the days before he had known Ruth McKelvie. Gone the whistling and singing; gone also the willingness to fraternize to such an extent with the members of his crew. A good skipper he remained. And a good "fin" man. Which covers the necessary qualities of a leader in the Banks fleet.

It was when his boy was about a year old that Jess first began to speak of him to George Suttle.

"I got a fellar growing up to home who's going to push you for your job some day," he told the mate one trip.

"Well, now, I wonder," George retorted. "Got sea legs yet? And a sense of fish?"

"Got big blue eyes like . . . like . . . Sea legs, hell! Wait till he's growed, man."

That was the nearest he ever came to mentioning his wife's name in Suttle's presence. But reference to the boy became an almost daily occurrence after that.

"Getting big," he'd say. "Ought to heft him now."

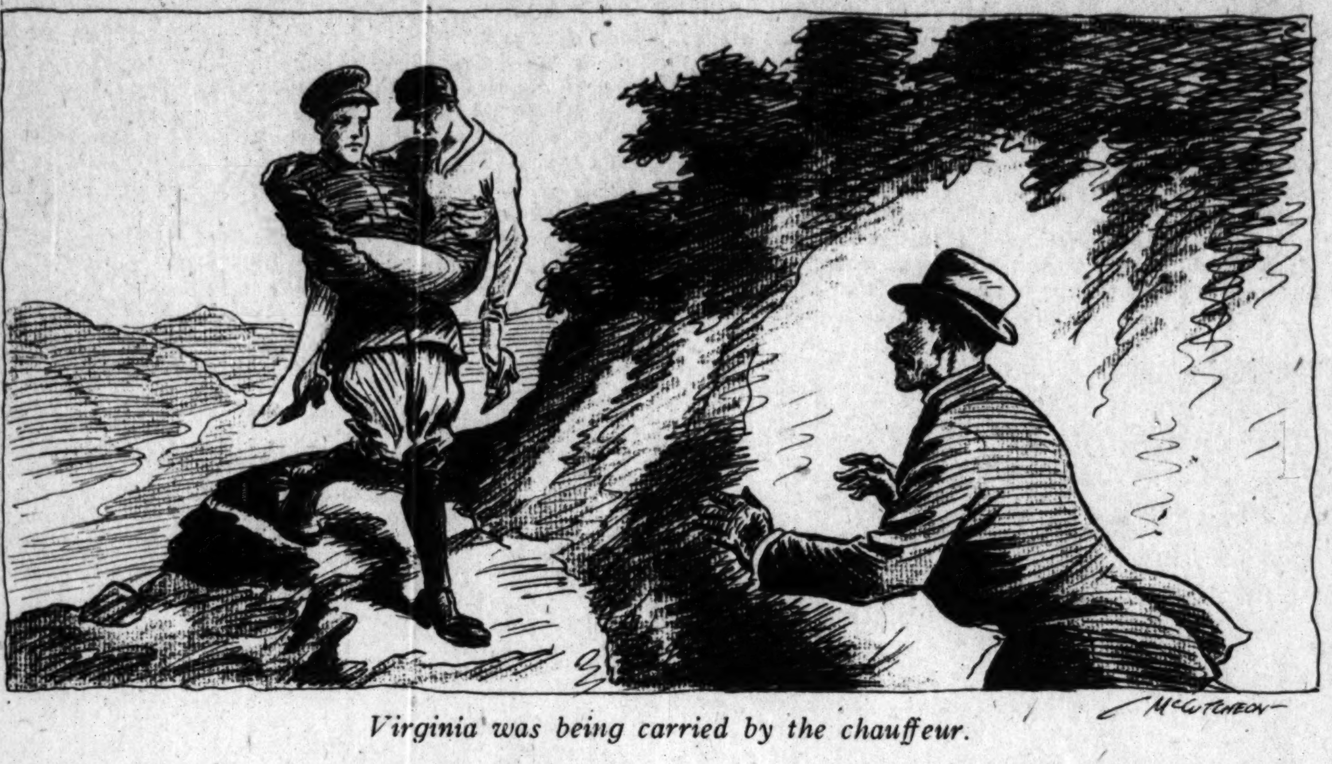
BLACK AND WHITE Beauty Creations

CROSSED WIRES BY John T. McCutcheon



Virginia was being carried by the chauffeur.

THE STORY SO FAR:

A WEALTHY American family, the Craytons, meet a worthless Frenchman, Pierre de Barsac, in Paris. He tries to win Virginia and her mother favors him, but Mr. Crayton is suspicious. He arranges to have a young American, Rasher, accompany them back to America. Virginia becomes interested in Rasher, but is shocked when he says he has been a truck driver. Her father hires him as a chauffeur. In New York Virginia invites de Barsac to accompany them on the motor trip home. Rasher's real name is Bacon, and he is extremely rich. The trip begins with Rasher driving. They are held up and Rasher is wounded trying to protect Virginia. She visits him at a hospital and finds she loves him. Mrs. Crayton summons Mr. Crayton. Richard Wellborne is called by Rasher to take his place as chauffeur. Mr. Crayton is threatened with financial disaster. His wife offers to save him with her own fortune, but only if he will consent to Virginia's marriage to de Barsac. A telegram informs Mr. Crayton of a mysterious credit of $600,000 which will save him. Keeping it to himself, he departs for New York. Wellborne decides he can help Rasher best by diverting Virginia's attention from the count to himself. He brushes up, and proves such a handsome chap that Virginia is interested immediately. The journey continues after Virginia has agreed to sacrifice herself and marry de Barsac, so that her mother's money may save Mr. Crayton's fortune.

INSTALLMENT XXVI.

The Count Is Irritated.

AS Celeste, glowing with animation, detailed the luncheon table argument with the new chauffeur, Virginia observed that she was now revealing an unsuspected and quite attractive side to her nature. Hitherto, in the machinelike efficiency with which she performed her duties as a lady's maid, she rarely smiled. Now she was genuinely amused and Virginia wondered, a little enviously, at the change this good looking chauffeur had wrought in her in such a short time. Her eyes, usually veiled and inscrutable, were now frankly sparkling.

"But, mademoiselle," she exclaimed, "he says Abelard and Heloise were married! How absurd! As if I didn't know my Paris better than that! Everybody knows they were not, but he insists they married in Brittany and Heloise afterward denied the marriage. I could not convince him."

Virginia smiled. This chauffeur was also revealing an unsuspected side to his nature.

A few minutes later, as the latter started out with the Count and Virginia to climb the neighboring eminence, so rich in historic significance, Virginia was conscious that Celeste was gazing wistfully after the young man, who seemed unaware of the impression he had made upon her.

The path led abruptly upward.

The first few hundred yards were across the valley, after which the path led abruptly upward. Two or three times Virginia and young Wells, who were climbing vigorously, were obliged to wait until the Count, breathing fast, caught up with them.

"I like to stop occasionally and enjoy this wonderful view," gasped the Count, mopping his forehead with a perfumed handkerchief.

"Shall I lend you a hand?" asked Wells, with a solicitude that intensely irritated the Count.

"No! I've climbed mountains many times before," he retorted shortly, and Wells thought to himself, "I'll bet he's climbed Montmartre many times." Virginia, noting the Count's ill humor, thought it best to conform her pace to his, and when they resumed the climb she let the chauffeur walk on ahead. She had nerved herself to perform a hateful duty. To save her father's fortune she must consent to marry this man, and the sooner she consented the better. Perhaps he would propose today, and she resolved to make the opportunity for him.

They proceeded slowly, and when Wells had reached the top he turned and saw that they had seated themselves on a fallen log and were deep in conversation.

"I've got to bust that up," he thought. "I'm here to sidetrack that frog in the interest of Hank—so to speak —Rasher, and here's where I begin." So he called out, "Here's a grand view!"

Count de Barsac welcomed the interruption. His sixth sense, that of divining a woman's moods, told him unmistakably that Virginia Crayton, for some reason, had decided to accept him. Her present cordiality allowed no other construction. She was markedly kind and gentle, for the first time in days. He knew that he had only to speak the word and they would be engaged. But that word he now withheld. It was necessary first to know the extent of her father's financial reverse. So he deftly switched the trend of conversation to impersonal channels, an evasive maneuver which Virginia instantly sensed. It piqued her and set her to wondering.

The Count arose. "Come! It is only a few paces further up," and they resumed the climb and presently joined the waiting chauffeur.

"It was here," said Wells, "that the French and Indians poured their shot down on Washington's small and devoted force, an attack that later led to Washington's capitulation."

The Count was again irritated by the linking of the French and Indians. It seemed a challenge.

"Well," he said slowly, "though it was a victory for the French, it turned out to be a Pyrrhic victory. One of our poets, La Fontaine, has said, 'There are some defeats more triumphant than victories.' This seems to have been one of that kind."

Wells glanced quickly at him and he could not resist uttering the next words.

"I think it is Montague, and not La Fontaine, whom you are quoting."

BOTH Virginia and the Count stared at him, the latter exceedingly annoyed and uncomfortable.

"Damn the fellow," he muttered. Virginia was impressed in spite of herself. She should instantly have reprimanded this chauffeur for daring to correct her guest, but the moment passed.

She was conscious of an electric current of mutual dislike between the two men. The extremely good looks of the chauffeur were an irritation to the Count, while the Count for some reason not apparent had aroused the bitter antagonism of young Wells.

Virginia, piqued by the Count's recent unflattering evasiveness, decided it might be good strategy to punish him by a display of interest in this prepossessing youth, and so, under pretense of gaining a more favorable spot from which to survey the hills and valley, she asked Wells to show her the spot where the capitulation had taken place. This led the pair some distance away, and de Barsac, left behind, glared moodily after them as they disappeared behind a slope in the hill.

He lighted a cigaret and reflected bitterly on the turn events were taking.

What a mess the whole venture had become! When he and Celeste, weeks before in Paris, had decided upon a campaign wherein he was to marry the Crayton heiress, it had seemed a simple matter. The Craytons were midwestern Americans and therefore eagerly susceptible to the appeal of a titled marriage. The mother had succumbed at once, but the father had developed unexpected obstinacy. Celeste, his ally, had gotten herself employed as a lady's maid, thus gaining a vantage point in the family circle.

Then had followed this wretched trip to America, where one infernal complication after another had arisen. First, the foolish girl had fallen a victim to a steamer infatuation with a young man who turned up later as the Crayton chauffeur. This should have been enough to kill the romantic glamour, but that confounded automobile holdup and the wounding of the chauffeur had revived her interest in him.

The Count shrugged his shoulders with disgust. And now, having got rid of that chauffeur, here she was showing a growing interest in the new one.

Why not throw up the whole enterprise? If the Crayton fortune was shattered by the recent reverses—providing they really were reverses and not merely a crafty invention of Crayton to get rid of him—then he wouldn't want to go through with the marriage.

He gloomily lighted another cigaret and impatiently awaited the return of this capricious girl who showed such a predilection for chauffeurs.

"What the devil is keeping them?" he muttered. For a moment he thought of following them, but this he dismissed at once. Time after time he glanced at his wrist watch. Confound it, this thing of waiting was insufferable. It was humiliating. He resolved that if he ever married this infernal girl he would give her a lot of opportunities for waiting.

It was while in this savage mood, with vanity, his most vulnerable trait, grievously hurt, that he saw them appear. He started violently! Virginia was being carried by the chauffeur and her white face was twisted into a sorry attempt at a smile.

De Barsac ran forward.

"Mademoiselle, you are hurt?"

"A turned ankle," she said bravely between set teeth. "How could I have been so awkward!" She glanced up into the eyes of young Wells, eyes now serious with anxious concern. "Please let me down," she said. "I'll try to walk."

"Don't try," he pleaded in a low tone. "The trip down would be agony. I can easily carry you. It won't take long and I'll do it slowly."

"I shall carry you, Virginia," cried the Count. "O, how I suffer to see you in pain." He attempted to take the girl, but Wells swung her away from him.

"That's all right, Count. I can manage it. You might hurry on ahead and have a doctor ready. We'll soon be there."

Without waiting an answer from the infuriated de Barsac, Wells began the steep descent of the hill, picking his steps carefully. Virginia's eyes were closed, but her tightly pressed lips indicated the pain she was suffering. The chauffeur had taken command of the situation and the Count had but two courses to follow. He could come behind or he could hurry on and secure a doctor. He hurried on, so angry that he would gladly have seen both of them slip and go crashing down the rocky hillside.

"It is only a few paces further up."

THE STORY OF JESS TIVERTON - By Win Brooks

with Tripper Tarboy, an old man who had sailed with him for years.

"Have to come up to the house and see him when we get home, Trip. 'Most as big as a trawl tub now. And strong as a gale of wind off Provincetown."

Old Tripper, who was lank and brown as an ancient mast and had a lower jaw shaped like the bow of a clipper ship, would nod his grizzled head in sympathetic understanding.

When the boy was six years old Jess Tiverton bought for him one of those little model sailboats which are the delight of every child. The next trip he was on Suttle's ear with an account of the happening.

"Held that boat in his hands just looking at it all morning. In the afternoon I took him down the beach and showed him how to sail her. But he didn't need much showing, I'm telling you. She only capsized two or three times and she's got no keel to speak of.

"You want to know what he said to me after she went over the first time?" he asked, pride in the rising inflection of his voice. "'She needs weight on the bottom, Daddy.' What do you think of that?

"I suggested he could take off some of her sail and what do you suppose he said to that? 'You'd spoil her, Daddy, taking the sail off, and she'll go better if you just weight her on the bottom.'"

"He'll take no reefs," Suttle chuckled.

"That he won't," agreed Jess, and went forward to hunt up old Tarboy and tell the story all over again.

After a while he talked so much about his boy that men at the wharf got in the habit of hailing him with, "How's the youngster, Jess?" "When you shippin' that new mate, Tiverton?" or just "How's the new mate makin' out to home?" They poked no fun at Jess Tiverton because of his enthusiasm; they knew the man too well for that. And Jess, recognizing their interest as sincere, basked in the sunshine of their friendship and his own hopes.

When Young Jess was twelve years old he took his first trip to sea on the last voyage the Blue Belle ever made. It was July, with schooling at an end until autumn, and Jess figured the boy was old enough to make a start. He had been talking about it for weeks, making up to Suttle, who by this time knew from the captain's telling the youngster's every mood and characteristic.

With his father, Young Jess went down to the boat at T-Wharf late one afternoon when the Blue Belle was iced and had her herring aboard ready to sail when the breeze sprang up at sundown. He was a little fellow for his age, with fair hair inclined to curl down over his forehead and eyes as deeply blue as his mother's. His father took him aboard and introduced him all around.

"A good hand and bound to be a real fisherman," Jess said.

"Think you're goin' to like shippin' on a smelly old fish boat?" Tripper Tarboy asked him.

"You bet I am," the little chap answered.

BEFORE the Blue Belle sailed word got about the wharf that Jess Tiverton's prospective mate had finally arrived and a number of men from the other boats came over to wish him well.

The vessel went down the harbor with the sunset, old Tripper Tarboy at the wheel and Young Jess by his side.

"You swing her over like this," Tripper was saying, "and keep her foremast leanin' onto that island there; that's Peddock's. Here, feel of her."

Not tall enough to stand over the wheel, Young Jess spread his arms and scarcely touched the spokes on either side. George Suttle happened along and stood for a while watching the fun.

"He's a-sailin' of her right enough," cackled Tripper, his wrinkled hands holding the helm steady.

"That he is," said George. "I'm thinking I'll have to be looking for a new berth shortly."

It was the Grand Banks that trip and Young Jess had experienced his spell of sickness and caught his sea legs before they passed Sable Island. He had the spare bunk aft in the cabin with his father and Suttle, and what they did not attempt to teach him about a ship's handling and rigging wasn't worth knowing. He was a capable as well as a lovable chap, and the manner in which he would repeat aloud their instructions would have been laughable but for the sincerity of his efforts.

The Blue Belle's captain elected to fish the south outside shoals of the Grand Banks and met with fair success. Young Jess went as third dory mate with Tarboy and Clem Halliday and learned from those old timers how best to snub his hooks, bait and lay his trawl lines, and, what is more important, pull them afterwards.

The avidity with which he seized upon every little detail of knowledge, his eagerness to learn, and his ability to retain what they taught him pleased Jess in no little degree. Nor was the boy's father the only one to experience pleasure in the teaching of Young Jess; Suttle and other members of the Blue Belle's crew, particularly Tarboy, took a keen interest in his advancement.

"Think he's going to make the grade?" Jess asked Suttle one evening of a day when the fish had been coming particularly well and the outlook was excellent for an early trip home.

"I'm ready to step out after this trip," the mate replied, smiling. "He knows as much as I do now."

There is an element in the life of the Banks fisherman, however, more treacherous than hurricane or mountainous sea, shoal water on the sands, or quick water on the ledges. It is fog.

Men who have spent nearly all their lives upon the water may speak to you lightly of wind and rough weather, yet tell you they know fear when fog sets in. Heavy as a sea may be, blow a gale ever so strong, you can see what is ahead, have a definite knowledge of what to expect and prepare for. Not so in a fog.

Fog shut down on the south shoals of the Grand Banks on the seventeenth of July when the Blue Belle was fair loaded for a run home the next day. There may be spots on the Atlantic where fog sets in more quickly and with greater density than upon the Grand Banks of Newfoundland. But they have yet to be located.

Jess Tiverton had smelled fog coming; no boat of his vessel was over the side when it arrived.

"We'll call it a trip, I guess," he told George Suttle. "When it lifts we'll get along for home."

THE Blue Belle rode at anchor that night in thirty-six fathoms, with a calm sea and a fog as thick as a horse blanket. From the deck the masthead lights were barely visible. There was a double watch, and the foghorn was sounded every sixty seconds. Below deck forward men played cards or reclined in their bunks, smoking, and talking of the prospects for a fair voyage home.

At exactly eleven o'clock Farley Manser, who had been Jess Tiverton's cook for years, was serving a round of coffee and pie in the forecastle to men who laughed when old Tripper Tarboy spilled his cupful of steaming liquid down his pants leg and into his boot, and jocularly intimated that Tripper was becoming too old to "handle his vittals."

Fifteen minutes later the Blue Belle, or what remained of her, rested on gray sand at the bottom of those thirty-six fathoms of water. Eleven of her crew were with her. Tragedy that night for many homes. Greater tragedy for Jess Tiverton. For Young Jess drowned on his first trip to sea.

Out of the darkness and the fog, off her course, and speeding between fourteen and sixteen knots, against all maritime regulations governing the movements of steamers in a fog, came the Triumph, pride of the Barthlemess line, New York bound from Cherbourg, and overdue.

The watch of the Blue Belle saw her lights only when the thirty-two thousand ton express loomed immediately above them. Time only to shout an unheard warning. Time only to sound the foghorn in one quick, anguished wail. The steel bow of the liner split the fishing schooner from starboard bow to port 'midships, snapping her foremast like a stick of brittle coral. Men were crushed to death and men were drowned by the flooding sea even before the Blue Belle sank. She went down almost immediately, however, while the Triumph, only jarred by the impact, slowed down, reversed her engines, and came finally to a dead stop an eighth of a mile away.

No need to describe the horror attending that scene nor the manner of Young Jess' death. Let it suffice that none could have saved him.

The liner, her havoc wrought, steamed splendidly up, brought her battery of searchlights to play on the wreckage, and lowered her port side lifeboats. They picked up the survivors, recovered what bodies it was possible to recover. Two hours later the Triumph was again steaming toward New York, speed undiminished, and her wireless was flashing the first cryptic message of the disaster to a world where fishermen count but little in the day's news.

It would have been melodramatic had Jess Tiverton fought against his rescuers. He did not do so; there was in his nature no melodrama of the sort. Nor would he take advantage of the Triumph's offer to send his own version of the tragedy through the air.

"Jess Tiverton will never sail again," they said along the waterfront. In Boston, Gloucester, and Nantucket, men who knew his story shook their heads.

"The sea has beaten him," was their verdict in so many words.

"All his heart and all his soul, if a man has a soul, were given to that youngster," George Suttle told old Tarboy. "A man can only fight so long," he added, significantly.

Josiah Mulvaney and James Tempor, the Blue Belle's owners, sent for Jess to come to Salem.

"There's talk you'll never take out another boat," Mulvaney put it straight up to him.

"I have no boat to take out," Jess answered simply.

"Which means, I take it, that you'll sail again providing you get the boat?"

"Why not?" Answer enough there.

"We're going to build a new boat. You're the man to have her if you want to," Tempor said. Then they asked him for specifications and whether he had any ideas of his own he might wish to incorporate in the new vessel.

"Have her built from the Blue Belle's prints," said Jess. "There's no better boat afloat than she was"

And Mulvaney, who was an understanding sort of man despite an exterior as sharply cold as cracked ice, advised: "Go down and help them build her. And name her what you wish."

But after he had gone, Tempor remarked: "Jess Tiverton is getting old. He will not sail any boat for long."

"He is past sixty," Mulvaney said. "Too old a man to hold up against his loss.

Jess Tiverton was getting old; sorrow laid gaunt hands upon his shoulders and weighed them down. But he went down to Sib Benton's shipyard at Gloucester and superintended the building of the new craft he was to sail. He never left till she slid down the ways one raw March day when it seemed that spring must never come.

George Suttle was there at the launching. And Tripper Tarboy. They were near enough to Jess to hear him say: "I christen you Ruth McKelvie. Good luck and a bundle of fish, and God be with you."

So they painted "Ruth McKelvie" along her bows and across her stern in fine gold letters. Then they stepped a mainmast into her, and later a foremast, and bent on her new bleached canvas sails.

They had ten days of fair fishing and iced upwards of one hundred thousand pounds before bad weather struck in. Then it blew three days steadily out of the northeast and the sun failed to break through the low hung, driving clouds. On the afternoon of the third day it fell a flat calm for an hour and a new breeze followed, out of the southeast.

Jess had been below the greater part of the afternoon, but he came on deck before the wind shifted. Mark what he said to Suttle:

"We been talking it over down below and we think it's going to come a blow. Let's get for home."

"Talking it over," Suttle began. "Who you been . . . ." He stopped suddenly. Something in Jess Tiverton's eyes held his tongue.

The mate went forward and passed the word. Not until they were laying off for Boston did he seek old Tripper out.

"He said they'd been talking it over and had decided it was going to blow. What do you think of that, now? Who'd he been talking it over with?"

No man to intrude, Tripper; the years had taught him discretion.

"It's none o' my business and little o' yours," he answered. "You let Jess be. He's missin' that boy some."

"You should have seen his eyes when he told me to get sail up," Suttle protested. "It was like I wasn't there."

"Maybe you wasn't. Maybe you wasn't there. For him anyway. We'll do as we're told and leave Jess be."

An hour later it became apparent that he from whom Jess Tiverton took advice had displayed good sense. It blew a screaming late May gale out of the southeast all night, but the storm found the Ruth McKelvie in deep water. A Gloucester ship went on the shoals that night and four men were drowned; a Gay Head fourteen-tonner lost her single mast and helmsman; other vessels came to grief in lesser degree.

The Ruth made heavy weather, but her reefs were in and her dories stowed, and she ran off that blow like geese flying down wind from the futile guns. Jess Tiverton sailed her himself; he held her wheel in water sometimes to his waist.

"Sail her, sonny, sail her!" he cried above the noise of wind and sea.

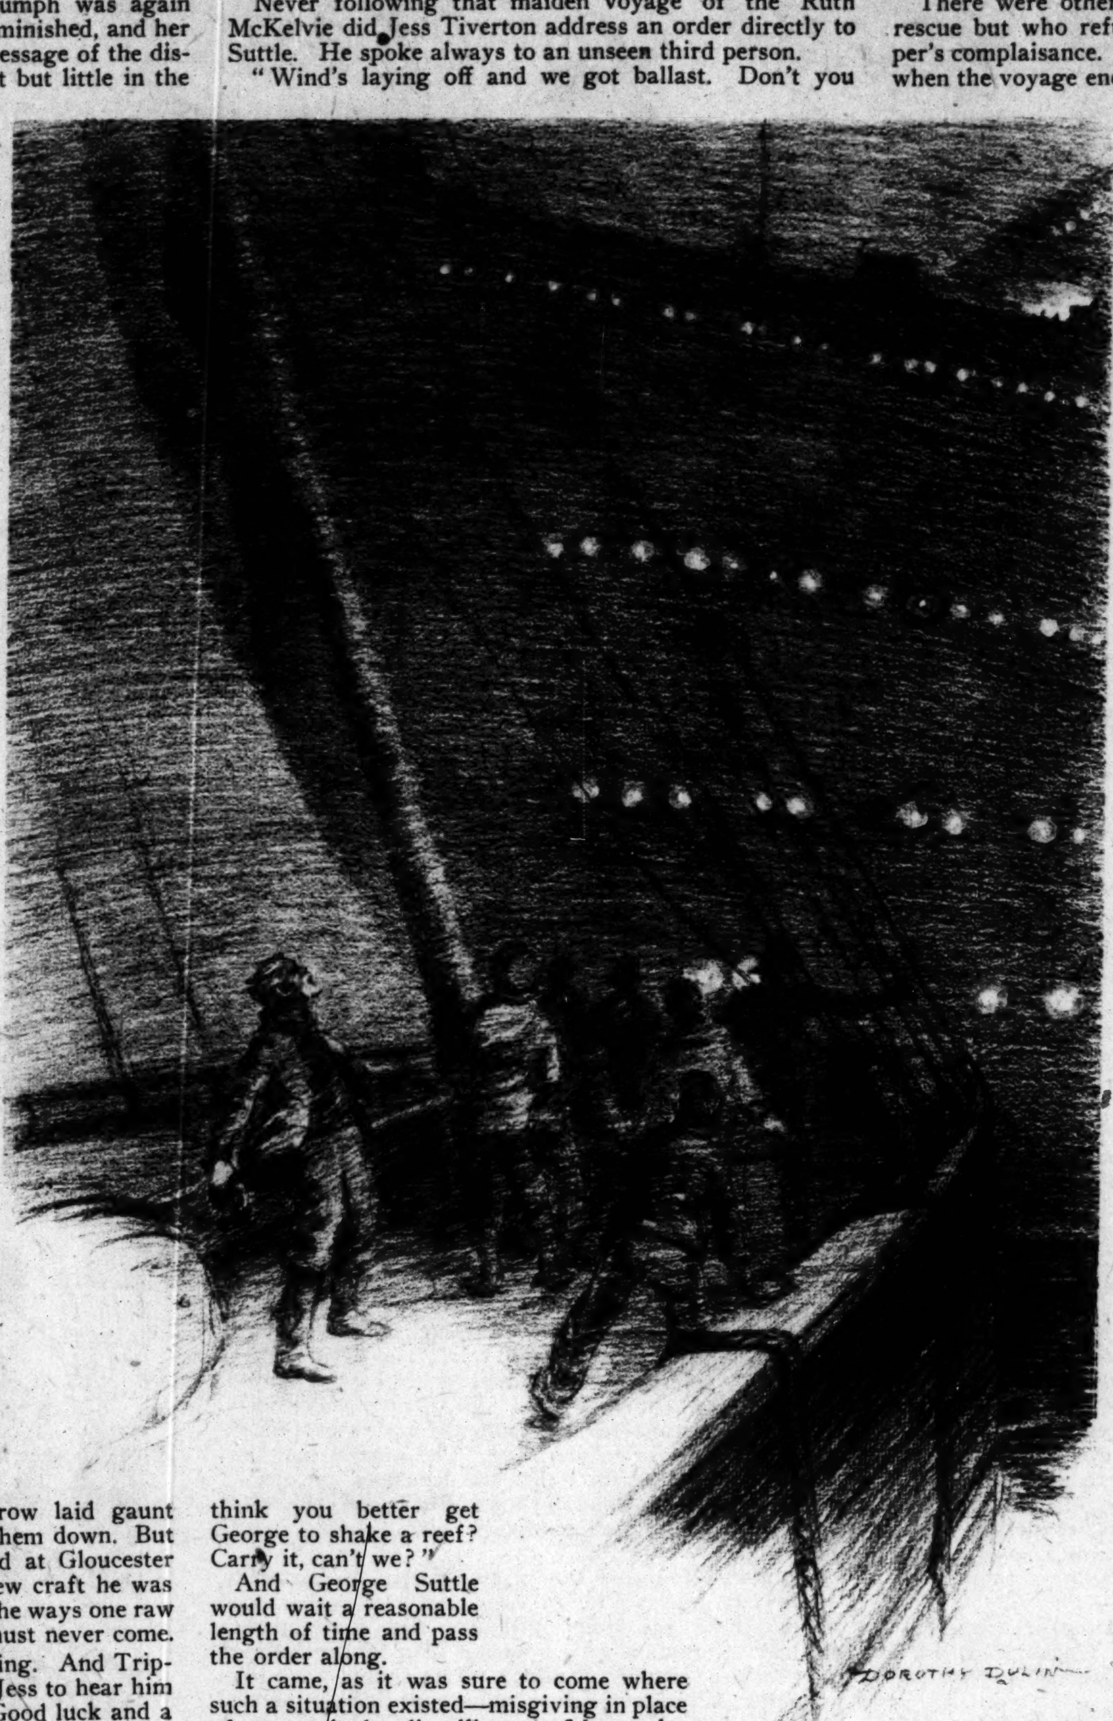
Once he turned his head to where Suttle stood just at his elbow. "Tell George," he shouted, just as if George wasn't there—"Tell George he better spike in his jib or the sea'll carry it out. What do you think?"

George Suttle knew better than to answer. That question was not meant for him. It was Old Jess at the wheel, Young Jess by his side.

THAT voyage marked the beginning of as queer a story as ever was repeated in the North Atlantic fishing fleet, the story of Jess Tiverton and his mate, Young Jess, who had drowned on his first trip to sea. George Suttle continued to sail aboard the Ruth McKelvie, mate in name only, because there had grown in his heart over a long period of years a great and a sure love for this captain whom sorrow had claimed. He continued to occupy the cabin with Jess, although he knew that for the Ruth's master another slept there also.

Never following that maiden voyage of the Ruth McKelvie did Jess Tiverton address an order directly to Suttle. He spoke always to an unseen third person.

"Wind's laying off and we got ballast. Don't you think you better get George to shake a reef? Carry it, can't we?"



A hundred lights snapped out of the fog!

And George Suttle would wait a reasonable length of time and pass the order along.

It came, as it was sure to come where such a situation existed—misgiving in place of trust, doubt dispelling confidence, incredulity displacing stoicism. Aboard his own ship they began to talk about Jess Tiverton. Young fellows who had no understanding of the cross he was bearing.

"Me? I think the old fellow's nutty, if you ask me. Mumblin' all the time to himself and never speakin' outright to his mate. What's he got a mate for, anyway?"

And: "Believe me, I wouldn't stand for it if I was in Suttle's boots. No, sir, not me."

They went on thus, but when wrinkled Tripper Tarboy was around they kept their mouths closed.

"Put a lock on your tongue, young feller, or I'll sure hand you one," he'd threaten them. And they would, too, for the old man's fists had lost none of their weight and speed.

One day at the wharf Jess was hailed by Torrey Lamberts, a New Bedford motor swordfisherman.

Lamberts called: "I hear you got two mates aboard that vessel of yours, Tiverton. How's to lend me one? I need a good man."

There was no reply forthcoming from the Ruth's master. But he went chalk-white and his fingers clenched. A month later Jess Tiverton took his new boat on the Nantucket shoals in the dead of a pitch black night and a gale of wind that blew her jib out, and rescued a half dozen of the crew of Torrey Lamberts' ship which had gone ashore with a stalled engine in the storm. Lamberts himself was drowned.

But it was the manner of the Ruth's going to the rescue rather than the rescue itself which afforded a topic of conversation. Jess Tiverton's vessel was caught with others in shoal water when the storm broke without fifteen minutes' warning. She had, however, ample opportunity to get rigged and into deeper soundings and was well into twenty-five fathoms when Tiverton came to Suttle, who was at the helm.

"He says he sees flares," Jess called above the storm. "They'll be in a couple of miles off your starboard on the shoals. We better run in, he says."

So they ran her in while those of the crew who were skeptical of their captain's mentality cursed him for a fool. Even George Suttle's faith was strained that night. No lights showed; there was no sign of any vessel in distress, but Jess gripped Suttle by the arm.

"It's Torrey Lamberts and his Sleepwalker, you say! Well, we'll get them just the same, sonny."

The lead showed six fathoms of water when they made out her single masthead light. She was hard on, with the seas breaking over her, but Jess took the wheel away from his mate and brought his own vessel in as close as he dared. Then he floated two dories on lines, down wind to the beached swordfisherman. One of them was swamped. The other brought back six of the Sleepwalker's crew.

When the Ruth was safe in deep water again George Suttle turned to one of the rescued men and asked, "How long had you been burning flares?"

"We didn't burn no flares," came the answer. "We didn't have none."

None asked Jess Tiverton how he knew there was a vessel in distress. No man inquired from Jess Tiverton from whom he learned it was Torrey Lamberts' boat there on the sands. Tripper Tarboy shook his head when Suttle told him the facts.

"It's as I told you. I've heard o' such things before. The boy is with him all the time."

There were others who thought the same after that rescue but who refused to accept the belief with Tripper's complaisance. The Ruth lost eight men of her crew when the voyage ended.

"He's a madman," one of them said in explanation.

THE Ruth's trips became of increasing duration; her hauls smaller. The boat was hardly paying; not paying well enough to keep a steady crew under normal conditions. Such a situation is not allowed to exist for long without some word from those chiefly interested financially.

Tempor was in Boston at the conclusion of one of the Ruth's unprofitable trips, and with Jess Tiverton held a conference in the cabin while the ship was being unloaded. It lasted upward of an hour, and when it ended Tempor left the ship alone.

George Suttle, going below, paused outside the closed cabin door at the sound of Jess Tiverton's voice.

"They're finding fault with us, sonny. Perhaps they've reason to, but it ain't your fault. It's mine. But I'll give you a little more time and you'll be ready."

Suttle heard no more, for he turned on his heel and left. That night the mate had another talk with Tripper Tarboy, but found little solace in the old fisherman's words.

"Tempor's right," Tripper said. "You and I know the reason's for his actions right enough, but others don't. And every crew's a worser one and we ain't pullin' the fish. It's lookin' blacker."

To the story of Jess Tiverton there remains but one more episode, the last trip he made as master of the Ruth McKelvie. Autumn fishing passed with conditions going from bad to worse, and the Ruth went down the harbor one morning late in October with as rough and poor a crew as ever sailed on a Banker out of Boston. Hangers on about the wharves, most of them fellows who were down and out and saw a bed and food board the ship. The longer the trip the better they would like it. Fellows who had heard the stories of Tiverton's eccentricities, yet took the jobs because they needed jobs badly, not because they had a glimmer of understanding of the captain's sorrow.

"Imagine those rats forward aboard the Blue Belle in the old days," said Suttle disgustedly to old Tarboy.

"You've little call to kick," answered Tripper, taking a liberty born of long years and of friendship. "I've to sleep along with 'em."

On the trip down some of them overheard Jess talking to himself, and one, a burly Swede shipping his first trip, made free to mock him behind his back. Suttle overheard and swung once with his big right fist, setting the fellow down and knocking a tooth out.

"I'll teach you manners to your captain," the mate gritted. "You won't ever stand knee high to him if you live a thousand years."

That ended that and the others took cognizance, yet it was the first time George Suttle had used his fists aboard any boat in nearly twenty years; there is in the fishing fleet small necessity of brutality; his action was a bad sign.

The Swede was a vindictive sort and he made small talk in the forecastle, and such was the crew that he soon had organized a little clique of trouble makers.

The vessel had fair weather until she made easterly of Sable island on the outside run, when a cold northerly blow set in for two days. Followed another spell of clear days, with a bit of excellent fishing for a change, and then an easterly, accompanied by fog. When the shroud lifted there was a full week of fine, calm weather, and Suttle drove the men in the knowledge that Jess Tiverton's Ruth needed a good trip in order to set her master right with the owners. He recognized the difficulties of overcoming any handicap with such a crew as was given him, but he did his best with men who took no interest in the size of their shares.

He drove them and they cared not for the driving. The Swede and his dory mate pulled the smallest hauls; others, influenced by the fellow, soldiered at their work and accomplished as little as possible without incurring the anger of the mate.

They awakened one morning to a light drizzle of rain, a flat calm of sea, and a promise of fog. The rain ended at noonday and the fog set in; the dories, which had been ordered to work close at hand, came over the side.

Jess Tiverton went to his cabin and stayed there, and, because he hesitated to intrude, Suttle ate his dinner alone. Later he played cribbage with Tripper Tarboy, and they had, as usual, some talk of the captain.

"It's a fog like this'll take his memory back," said Tripper. "He'll be makin' bad weather of it there alone. Maybe you better go in with him."

With the dusk the fog set in heavier than before and Suttle named the watches, doubling them, for every two hours. He retired early, leaving the captain reading half aloud by the light of the big lamp swinging from the center of the ceiling beam.

Suttle fell off to sleep quickly enough, for Tiverton's reading was a habit of long standing to which he had become accustomed. He was not due on deck himself until one o'clock, and his was the faculty of being able to waken at any hour he chose.

Jess Tiverton's voice brought him sitting up in his bunk. The lamp, still lit, was dying, and beneath it and within its sickly, shifting glare Jess stood staring past the shadow of his own bunk.

"Quick, sonny! Quick now!" he cried. "Call all hands and get sail on her!"

Suttle swung his feet on to the floor. "What's up?" he asked.

Jess Tiverton never looked at him. "All hands!" he shouted again. "Get her anchor broke out!"

Suttle glanced at the clock nailed beside his berth. Its hands showed five minutes of midnight. Midnight, and a wool fog, and a skipper calling for all hands and sail!

The mate looked once more at Jess Tiverton and had a flashing thought of Torrey Lamberts. He pulled on his boots and ran on deck, where the watch was smoking and using the fog horn to good effect.

"All hands!" he roared. "Rout 'em out and set her jib to break her anchor out. We're moving in a hurry!"

The spark of a cigaret butt went spinning over the side and somebody drawled, "God's sake! Listen to the man."

Suttle paused, undecided whether to knock the man down, and then made a rush for the forecastle, half tumbling down the ladder and shouting as he went. Men crawled out of their bunks, cursing, and the mate felt Tripper's hand upon his sleeve.

"What's wrong?" old Tarboy asked.

"You know as much as I do. Jess is carrying on again. He says all hands and sail on her in a hurry."

The big Swede paused in the act of pulling on his sou'wester and remarked, "Ay ban tink he capain baffy." He got no farther because Suttle hit him again.

Somebody in the half darkness said, "To hell with Tiverton and his crazy notions. I'm goin' back to sleep." Tripper Tarboy's hand reached out and caught the man by the throat.

"Git up, you scum, or I'll bash your head," threatened Tripper.

On deck again Suttle found the watch, aroused, setting the jib. Only a faint breath of a breeze, but the sail filled and carried the bow around, breaking the anchor loose. They had it in.

JESS TIVERTON was on deck then. They heard his voice, a new note in the fog: "Tell 'em to get mains'l up, sonny. Tell 'em quick, now. Hurry!"

Most of the crew stood dumb, aghast at the madness of it. A young voice called, "Pipe down, you old nut!" but Jess Tiverton did not hear.

They got her mainsail up, Suttle and Tripper doing most of the work and Tripper wasting a lot of breath to swear at the good-for-nothing crew. The big sheet filled and the Ruth McKelvie started to lay off.

Then, right above the schooner's deck and a little off her port side, there came the weird scream of a liner's siren and a hundred lights snapped out of the fog! She came rushing towards the Ruth, was off her stern for a moment, on the starboard the next. And was gone! They felt the breath of her as she passed scant feet away. Scant feet to spare.

From the time that racing liner shot out of the fog until she had disappeared again in the void—a matter of less than a minute—no word was spoken aloud aboard the Ruth McKelvie, nor was the fog horn sounded. Men who had mocked Jess Tiverton were in turn mocked by that silence.

As the Ruth dipped forward in the wash her captain's voice rang clear along the ship: "You did a nice job, sonny. I guess you're ready."

The vessel didn't drop anchor again that voyage. Old age had caught Jess Tiverton that night. He was an old, old man.

"We'll go along in, George," he told Suttle. "I've sailed my last trip to sea and I guess you and Young Jess can look after her alone now. And do a better job." He laid his hand on Suttle's arm and his voice was that of a pleading, old man. "We ain't been making good trips, George. All on account of me and my goings-on. I've known all along. But I had to be sure he was ready to take her over. I had to be sure, didn't I, George?"

George Suttle answered, his own voice a little shaky: "I guess you ain't got no cause to worry."

That is why, between his stories at the new Fish Pier, if you ask old Jess Tiverton about himself he will mumble and look off up the harbor and out to where the green water merges with the deeper blue of the sea itself. His boy, Young Jess, is out there with George Suttle on the Ruth McKelvie. Young Jess is the skipper now. He's a-sailin' of her.

THE BLACK ABBOT by Edgar Wallace

THE STORY TO DATE:

HARRY, LORD CHELFORD, occupies Fossaway Manor with his half brother, Dick. Chelford is engaged to Leslie Gwyn, whose brother, Arthur, is his solicitor. Dick engages a detective, Puttler, to investigate the rumored appearance of the Black Abbot, supposed to haunt the ruins of an old abbey. Some one fires several shots at Leslie as she walks the grounds. The hidden Chelford treasure is sought by Gwyn and by his clerk, Fabrian Gilder. Gwyn discharges Gilder. The latter, writing with vanishing ink, promises to marry Mary Wenner, Chelford's former secretary, if she will lead him to the treasure. The girl restores the letter to legibility after it fades. A masked figure frightens Gilder and Mary from the treasure room in the abbey. Later Gilder finds that the cylinders, supposedly filled with gold, have been removed, except one, which contains an art treasure, a priceless missal. Leslie, in love with Dick, breaks off her engagement to Chelford. Thomas, a footman and an ex-convict, is discharged when detected in theft. Gwyn has gambled away Leslie's fortune of 250,000 pounds and 50,000 pounds in securities from the estate of Chelford's mother. Thomas learns by eavesdropping of Arthur's predicament and reveals it to Gilder, who has enlisted the ex-convict's aid. Gilder proposes to Leslie, offering to square Arthur's accounts if she will marry him. Leslie posts a letter of acceptance to Gilder, but it is destroyed in the letter box by Thomas as he tries to rob the box. Then Thomas is found slain and Chelford disappears.

Arthur tricks Gilder into giving him a letter of credit for 50,000 pounds, then disguises himself and flees to Paris via plane. Mary Wenner visits the manor, and betrays the fact that Chelford often was absent mysteriously whenever Dick was away. A note found on a tree tells them Chelford is safe, but warns them against seeking him. The note is signed "The Black Abbot." Mary conceives the idea that Chelford is in the secret vault, and leads Leslie and Dick there. Dick enters, sees something in the light of his flash, and forces Leslie to leave. Later he returns to the vault, and from a distance Leslie sees him come out finally, his head on his arm, like a broken man.

INSTALLMENT XV.

Mysterious Intruders.

HURRYING back the way she had come, Leslie joined Mary in the study. Puttler she had not seen since the early morning, when he cycled to Willow House to bring the notice he had found.

"My dear," said Mary, "I'm not so sure I shall stay here tonight. This place is full of shocks. I'd like to see your brother very much indeed, but you can tell him all about the room under the abbey, can't you? That's where the gold is—you mark my words!"

"The gold?" Leslie for a moment did not understand. "O, you mean the Chelford treasure?"

The horrible thing! It was behind all this misery; behind the killing of Thomas and the disappearance of Harry. She said as much, and Miss Wenner, not pausing in her typewriting, calmly expressed the view that it was very likely.

Shock followed shock indeed! At half past four Leslie's maid brought a letter which had come by special delivery. It was in Arthur's writing; she tore it open, and read:

> Dear Leslie: You are, under no circumstances, to marry Gilder. I refuse to allow you to sacrifice yourself for me, now or at any time. I am going away to France for a few months, and will return when things have blown over.

Ordinarily quick witted, it was a long time before Leslie could understand the significance of this message. When she did, she took the letter to Dick, and he read it without comment, and handed it back to her.

"What does that mean, Dick?"

"It means that Arthur has taken the line of least resistance," he said. "To put it vulgarly, he has bolted!"

Her heart sank, and in that moment she felt terribly alone. As if he read her thoughts, he went on:

"He has certainly precipitated the crisis, but I don't see exactly how it will affect you. There was nothing else in the letter?"

She shook her head, and opened the envelope, and then saw a slip of paper which she had overlooked. It was an authority to sell his business, drawn up in legal form, and had evidently been added as an afterthought.

"If there are no further defalcations, that ought to be worth something," said Dick. "I'll see what I can do."

But on this point she was firm.

"I think you've enough troubles without mine," she said, quietly. "Did you find anything in the ruins?"

He started.

"Why—no," he said, a little unconvincingly. "Did you see me go back?"

"I'm afraid I spied on you," she said, with a pathetic little smile. "Dick, I'm so worried about you; I wish you wouldn't go into these places alone."

"There was nothing to fear," he said. "I thought I saw something on the floor which gave me a clew to Harry's fate, but it was nothing—nothing."

He changed the subject abruptly. She had a feeling that he was not telling her all that he had seen.

Mary and she had dinner alone, and Glover, the butler, free from the restraining presence of Dick Alford, was inclined to be talkative.

"There's no doubt Mr. Alford looks after the policemen. I have had to get a food basket ready—thermos flask and everything the heart can desire. Personally, miss, I don't believe in pampering the police. They're only dissatisfied when they go back to their own homes. He won't have anybody take the basket down to them, either. 'No,' he said, 'I'll take it myself. You have it ready at nine o'clock, put it just outside the servants' door.' My own opinion is that they'd be much more pleased with bread and cheese and a bottle of beer. What's the good of making chicken sandwiches for policemen? And having a bottle of the best wine up from the cellar! It's a waste of good food!"

Leslie listened, petrified. Now she understood!

The food was not for the police—it was for Harry! Harry, held prisoner in Chelford Abbey—by whom?

* * * * * * * * * *

The bane of life that day had been the London reporters. The "Red Lion Inn" at Chelfordbury was already filled with them, and not an hour passed that one did not make his way to the house in a vain endeavor to interview the second son. One intercepted him in Elm drive, and to him, as to the rest, he gave the same reply.

"You boys can't expect me to tell you any more than I already know," he said, at bay. "My brother has disappeared, but I believe he is still alive."

"Who do you think is responsible for these outrages, Mr. Alford?" asked the reporter.

Dick shook his head.

"If I knew, it isn't reasonable to suppose that I should be discussing the matter with you."

"Is it the Black Abbot?"

"The Black Abbot has nothing whatever to do with this crime," said Dick, shortly. "Unless I credit you with being so foolish as to believe in ghosts, it is unnecessary for me to tell you that there is no such thing as a Black Abbot and the figure that has been seen in these grounds was somebody masquerading for his own purpose."

"A practical joke?" suggested the newspaper man.

Dick shook his head.

"I don't think it was a practical joke; indeed, I am sure there is something very serious behind it. But I can't tell you any more."

"Mr. Alford," said the reporter, "I'm going to ask you a very delicate question, and I hope you won't think it an impertinence. If your brother is dead, then the title comes to you, does it not?"

"Yes," said Dick.

"You won't be offended if I tell you that there is a little talk in the village of some antagonism between your brother and you. I am told there have been frequent quarrels."

Dick mastered his anger with a great effort, realizing that the reporter was not intending to be impertinent, but simply epitomizing the gossip of the countryside.

"My brother was very nervous and quick tempered," he said, "but I've never had a serious quarrel with him in my life."

"Is it true that Lord Chelford's fiancee, Miss Leslie Gwyn, recently broke off her engagement with your brother?"

"Perfectly true," said Dick, stifling his impatience.

"And yet she is staying at Fossaway Manor as your guest?" The keen eyes of the reporter were watching him closely. He saw the blood mount to his victim's cheeks and hastened to add: "I'm merely telling you what other people will tell you, Mr. Alford. I have a much wider experience of the uncharity and suspicion that surrounds every man associated with a crime like this. If you are annoyed with me I can understand it, but I can assure you that I only want to help you."

"That I quite believe," said Dick with a smile. "But you can understand just how embarrassing your questions are. I will tell you the truth and you may put it into your paper. I am satisfied there is a very terrible danger overhanging Miss Leslie Gwyn, and it is for that reason, and that reason alone, I have asked her to stay at the hall, which is under police protection and where I know she will be safe. Her brother has gone abroad, and I cannot allow her to stay at Willow House alone."

"You mean she is in danger from the same person that killed Thomas, the footman, and who is responsible for the disappearance of Lord Chelford?"

Dick nodded, and the newspaper man made a mental note.

"Thank you," he said. "You will find that this little talk has cleared the air. In cases like this, if you clear up the minor mysteries as you go along, it makes for everybody's comfort."

Dick, who had been trembling with anger through the interview, had to agree, in the calm moments which followed, that the reporter had taken a sane view of the matter. When he met Leslie a few minutes later he told her of the interview. She was in the study alone, and had just finished writing a letter, which lay face downward on the blotting pad. She saw him glance at the envelope and turned it up. It was addressed to Fabrian Gilder.

"What have you said?" he asked.

"I've told him that I've considered the matter, and I've decided that I could not marry him—in any circumstances it would be impossible now, so soon after Harry's disappearance."

He picked up the letter and, taking out his pocket case, tore off a stamp and affixed it.

"I'll see that this goes," he said grimly. Then, seeing her tired face: "Poor old girl, you're having a bad time."

The pressure of her hand, the love and sympathy in her voice, were almost too much for him, and he had to set his teeth or he would have taken her in his arms and, in that place of tragedy and horror, told her of the love that was shaking him, and that had added a new and fearful burden to his overstrung nerves.

"Go to bed early," he said, with an effort at gayety, "and rise with the dawn. I shall be busy till very late."

——and where was now a black emptiness.

"The butler was telling me that you have ordered a basket of food for the policemen."

Not a muscle of his face moved.

"That is so; one or two men who are patrolling the cutting need a little light refreshment. They cannot get to the house and we haven't men to relieve them."

She was sensible enough not to pursue the subject.

IT was only on her earnest entreaty that, as the night grew on, Mary Wenner remained. The girl was a bundle of nerves, started at every sound, paled and flushed with the opening of a door, and the sound of a falling plate in the servery while they were at dinner had made her scream.

"I can't help it, my dear; I'm naturally temperamental," she explained. "And this house has got me shivering! I can't leave another young lady without a chaperon, or I'd fly off to London before it got dark."

She had been in the library that afternoon, she told Leslie, and the sight of that familiar room with its empty chair had been almost the last straw.

"I had to have a good cry," she confessed, "and I'm not ashamed of it. Harry was one of the best—you don't mind me calling him Harry, do you, dear?" And, when Leslie shook her head: "I can't say that I was fond of him as a young girl ought to be fond of a man she loves, but he was very nice. He had his tempers, the same as the rest of us, but they were only his high spirits. I could never understand why he hated Mr. Alford."

Leslie looked at her incredulously.

"Hated Mr. Alford?" she repeated. "Surely you're mistaken? They were very good friends."

Mary shook her head.

"No, they weren't," she said. "It all arose out of her ladyship's picture."

"The late Lady Chelford?"

"That was the lady," nodded Mary. "It happened three years ago. Dick Alford suggested that the portrait should be moved to the gallery. I think he was silly to say it, knowing how Harry adored his mother, and when he said the picture was depressing—and that was the silliest thing of all—Harry got right up in the air! It was dreadful, the things he said to Mr. Alford—and before me, too! Dick Alford realized his mistake: I could see that, and he tried to pacify Harry, but for a fortnight they didn't speak."

Leslie was silent. Slowly the inner life of Fossaway Manor was beginning to reveal itself to her; she had seen nothing of these cross-currents, had not suspected, even dimly, the conflicting antagonism which must have been visible to Harry Chelford's secretary.

"They were very friendly sometimes. You'd think that Harry was fond of him, and I think he was," Mary continued, "but the quarrels used to break out every now and then, once because Dick always stood with his back to the picture and never looked at it at all. He hated it, I'm sure of that. Of course, he never took me into his confidence. We were not what you might term good friends. I suppose it was foolish of me to take up Harry's quarrel, but I never liked Dick—you don't mind me calling him Dick?—after that."

She glanced nervously through the window. The sun had set, and dusk was creeping over the great park.

"If I get any sleep tonight I'll be lucky," she said. "Do you mind if I leave my door open and keep a light burning?"

"Why, of course not," smiled Leslie.

"There is a lock on the door, and I asked Glover to find me the key," Miss Wenner went on. "And I'll tell you frankly, Leslie, that if he hadn't found it I wouldn't have stayed, not for all the money in the world."

Leslie felt that it would be indiscreet to offer encouragement to a further discussion of this subject, for she was as reluctant to spend the night under that roof as her new found friend.

THOUGH she waited up till nearly eleven, she did not see Dick, and, in response to the repeated hints of the girl, they went upstairs together.

The manor was lighted by a power plant which was accommodated in a small shed midway between the house and the Ravensrill, and owed its installation to Dick's enterprise.

Harry always had candles in his room, Mary told her, but accepted the lighting of his library as a compromise.

"It's a very strange thing," said Mary from her inner room, "but Harry was afraid of electricity. In thunderstorms he always went down into the cellar and stayed there until they were over. He used to have a bed which was made every day in the summer, in case of a storm coming on in the night, and——"

At that moment all the lights in the room went out.

"Have you turned the lights off?" asked Mary's anxious voice.

"No, I haven't been near the switch; I expect a fuse has gone," said the girl.

There were matches and candles on the dressing table, she remembered, and, groping her way to the table, she lit the two candles. Mary was standing in the doorway, very pale and wide eyed.

"What was the meaning of that?" she asked, her voice sharp with fear, which was beginning to communicate itself to Leslie.

She forced a smile.

"That happens in the best regulated houses," she said, with spurious gayety. "The door is locked, so there's nothing to be afraid of."

And then she heard footsteps in the corridor; there was a knock at the door that made Mary jump.

"Are you there, Leslie?" It was Dick's voice. "Something has gone wrong with the lighting arrangements; we'll put it right in a minute or two."

"Are the lights out everywhere?" asked Mary, but he was gone.

Twenty minutes passed, and again Leslie heard his footsteps approaching.

"I'm afraid we shan't be able to fix up the lights till the morning. Have you candles? Did Glover put a flashlight for you?"

"We've everything we want," said Leslie. "Don't worry about us: we shall be asleep in ten minutes."

"Not me," murmured Miss Wenner, tremulously. "I shan't sleep a wink!"

By the light of her candle she had replaced most of the garments she had discarded when the lights went out.

"I knew I oughtn't to have stayed—there's somebody coming along the corridor!"

"It is only Mr. Alford."

But her ears caught the sound of two pairs of feet, and presently Dick's voice spoke.

"Do you mind if I leave one of Puttler's men outside your door?" he asked. "Don't be alarmed if you hear him walking about in the night."

"Is anything wrong, Dick?"

"No, no, nothing wrong; only I knew Miss Wenner was rather nervous."

"I am," quavered Miss Wenner, loudly. "It's very good of you, Mr. Alford."

"You had better keep your windows fastened," said Dick. "There is a system of ventilation in the room, so you needn't be afraid of waking with a headache. Good-night."

When he had gone, Mary Wenner looked solemnly at her companion.

"Did you hear what he said about keeping the windows shut?" she asked, hollowly. "My Gawd!"

"Don't be silly, Mary."

The girl was past feeling comfortable, but she had need to set an example.

"Come along; I'll help you fasten the windows."

"'Keep the windows fastened,'" repeated Mary Wenner. "There's something doing!"

They went from one to the other of the leaded windows, closed them, and pressed down the catches. Suddenly Mary clutched the girls' arm fiercely.

"There's a man under my bed!" she gasped, staring wildly at the drooping counterpane.

With a fluttering heart Leslie lifted the cover and pulled out a pair of riding boots, the soles of which the frightened secretary had seen, and they both laughed hysterically.

"I wish I could bring my bed into your room." Mary looked helplessly at the heavy four poster to which she had been assigned.

"You can come and sleep with me," said Leslie. "I've got a big bed." And this offer was most gratefully accepted.

"Have a look under your bed first," said Miss Wenner, nervously, and not till this ritual had been observed did she commence very slowly to undress.

Down below in the library Dick was in consultation with Puttler, who had just returned from a hasty visit to Scotland Yard.

"The batteries were smashed, and an attempt had been made to cut the main cable," reported Dick. "I got to

A Doubting Thomasina

A Story from Real Life

THE first time Mary Golden saw Jack Belford she said to herself that he was a man she could love. She was not aware that Jack Belford was saying to himself at the same time that the bright eyed girl before him was the kind he would like to have for a wife. Yet their conversation, when he came into the office shortly after nine o'clock, was only a business one.

"Is Mr. Haynes in?" he asked. But he accompanied his question with such a friendly, yet unassuming, smile that she smiled back.

"You're entirely too early for Mr. Haynes," she said. "He doesn't come in until 9:30 at the earliest."

"O!" he exclaimed. "Then I'm an early bird; too early for the worm."

"Well, I wouldn't exactly call Mr. Haynes a worm," she laughed.

"I didn't mean that," he explained, suddenly serious. "I meant a job. You see I'm looking for one."

"Why, then, you must be Mr. Belford."

Mary knew that Mr. Haynes was expecting Belford that day. He had been highly recommended by one of the Boston vice presidents of the company, and Mr. Haynes was supposed to put him in charge of the sales department in New York. She herself had written the letter which brought him to the metropolis. She further remembered that when Haynes was dictating the letter he had appeared disgruntled at the whole proceeding, for he had a cousin he wanted for the job.

Mary felt a little bit sorry for Jack Belford that day when he came out of Haynes's private office after having had an interview with that official. She knew that Haynes had not been easy in his reception of this young man, and that Belford was going to have a stiff time to satisfy his immediate superior.

She was right, for Haynes in the months that followed badgered his new lieutenant as much as he dared. As the manager's secretary, Mary was in a position to notice all his pettiness and meanness, but she knew from long experience that she could not use any arguments with Haynes to change his attitude.

At first this did not disturb Mary, but later it did, for she soon made the discovery that not only could she love Jack Belford, but that she did. It had all occurred so naturally that she wondered if feeling sorry for him had not had a lot to do with it.

Jack Belford, however, did not feel at all sorry for himself. He was accustomed to fight his way against odds and he found that his visits to his chief's sanctum were always sufficiently cheered by sight of the smiling girl in the anteroom.

Mary was almost ashamed of the eagerness with which she accepted his first invitation to dinner. They went to a cool, quiet little dining room, where the food was deliciously old fashioned and the trilling of canaries furnished the only music. Mary was grateful. Most of her men acquaintances always headed for a jazz palace, where they flashed pocket flasks and spoke in the vernacular of Broadway touts. But Jack Belford was different.

Before she knew it he had her talking about herself, something she could never remember having done before with a man. It was a new sensation for her, but Jack treated it as though it were the natural thing.

She really did not know that she could find so much to say about herself. Most men with whom she had dined and danced talked about themselves, recounting situations which were purely imagined and incidents which never could have happened. And all of them had given her an account of their numerous conquests of other girls.

After that evening Mary knew definitely that she loved Jack Belford, but she was not at all sure of him. He was such a good companion she rather feared he might overlook the fact of love.

But then she knew that he was having a difficult time during the day. Haynes's antagonism had not relented. His cousin was still out of a job, and he disliked seeing this young outsider occupy a position his relative might be having. His treatment of Belford was always designed to make the situation unpleasant, so that the young man would resign.

However, Belford was not the one to admit defeat.

"It is not as if I had done anything wrong," he explained to Mary one day.

"I know it isn't," she said. "I've worked for Haynes now for two years and I haven't found it easy. Still I've got to work, since my mother is dependent on me, and there is a little sister I'm trying to educate."

"He isn't unkind to you?" Belford demanded.

"No," she replied. "I've gradually learned how to handle him, although I had a time at first before he realized that I wasn't going out on parties with him."

"Well, I haven't refused to go on any with him," Jack laughed, "but I never had the chance. I'm afraid if we did go out I might forget that he was my superior and treat him as an equal. That would mean a good fight, I'm afraid, for I don't know any one I'd like to beat up more than Haynes."

"It would even things up," Mary admitted. "He certainly takes advantage of his position in his dealings with you, and I know how unpleasant he can be."

Mary really knew more about Haynes's disagreeableness to Belford than Jack did himself. Haynes's practice was to carry on his dealings with the sales department head by letters, and Mary wrote almost daily to Mr. Belford, letters which were mainly faultfinding or curt.

Out of her love, unexpressed though it was, Mary softened a good many of the letters dictated to her. She told herself it was not a businesslike thing to be doing, but she knew that Haynes never read her copy before signing it and that her efforts to save Jack would not be discovered.

With her first success in changing the wording of Haynes's letters to Jack without altering the text, Mary became bolder and bolder. If Haynes did not know the difference, Jack did, for he could not help but mark what he thought was a new attitude on his superior's part. He did not think that Mary had been taking a hand.

THEN one day, several hours before Haynes was to leave for Boston to present his anual report to the board of directors, the blow which Mary sensed might come descended. She was called in to take a letter to Mr. Belford, and when she saw the broad smile on Haynes's face, she felt her heart sink.

The letter was brief enough. It informed Mr. Belford that his services were no longer needed, but he would be given the chance of resigning.

As Mary was leaving the office with a disheartened spirit, Haynes called her back.

"Miss Golden, I want to write a letter to my cousin before I leave. It's a personal letter, but I haven't much time; so will you take it?"

Mary assented dully and reopened her notebook. So Haynes was going to put his cousin in as head of the sales department after all. And then she suddenly remembered hearing that morning that Mr. Elliot, the vice president who had recommended Jack, was dead.

". . . . At last the job will be open for you. Belford will probably send in his resignation immediately and I can act on it as soon as I return from Boston. Be ready to start by the fifteenth of next month at the latest."

"Is that all, Mr. Haynes?" Mary asked.

"Wait a minute. Here's a signed blank sheet for this last letter. You can get out Belford's letter and sign my name per yours."

Back at her desk Mary sullenly hammered out the two letters. She felt highly indignant over Haynes's treatment of Jack and felt that he would never have taken the step if he had not felt that Elliot was dead and Jack was without influence. She was sure any fair minded man would not approve of Haynes's action. And then a sudden thought came to her.

She pondered a few moments and then made the decision.

She tore the two letters she had written to bits and let them fall into the waste basket. Then she addressed an envelope to the president of the company in Boston and enclosed the carbon copies of the letters to Belford and Haynes. Next she inserted a sheet of paper in her typewriter and wrote:

"I know that this is not the general thing, but since I am leaving Mr. Haynes my resignation, I will save you the necessity of blaming me for unethical conduct. The two enclosed letters should speak for themselves and make out a plain case against Mr. Haynes. I am in a position to know that Mr. Belford has done his work satisfactorily. Further, he knows nothing about the step I am taking."

"For love," she whispered to herself as she closed the door behind her.

Three days later she set out from home, waving gayly to her mother at the window, although her mind was troubled, for she had not found another position easy to secure. Perhaps she would get something today, but she was becoming afraid. Always there was the question about previous employment, and she knew she could not give Haynes as a reference.

"Good morning, Mary. Where are you going?"

Her heart gave a sudden leap. It was Jack.

"How did you get here?" she asked.

"Walked. But I've been waiting for the last half hour."

"Aren't you working, Jack?" she pleaded heartbrokenly, fearing that her sacrifice had been in vain.

"You bet I am. But what about you?"

"O! I'm going to hire an employer today," she said forcing herself to be gay.

"What's the trouble with me?"

"You! But you don't need a stenographer."

"Who said I didn't?"

And then as she looked blankly at him, he added:

"Didn't you know that Haynes was fired—asked to resign—and that I've been appointed to take his place? You must know it, Mary. You did it."

"I?"

"Those letters you sent to the president. He hadn't been satisfied with Haynes for a long time, and they clinched his case against him. You didn't know it, but he's my uncle."

"And you mean I can have my job back again?" Mary demanded, dumfounded at these revelations.

Jack shook his head. "Not if you'll take another I have to offer first."

Mary looked at him and then slowly the color mounted to her face.

"O, heck!" Jack exclaimed. "What can a man do in broad daylight on a street? Let's take a taxi and then I'll be able to tell you properly all about this wonderful new job."

THE BLACK ABBOT

By Edgar Wallace

the power house just after it happened, but I saw nobody."

Puttler pulled at his comic little nose, and there was a look of trouble in his brown eyes.

"The commissioner thinks you ought to have a dozen men down here and make a cleanup," he said. "I've brought three, and I think they all ought to be inside the house. One we've got in the east wing, another in the west, and a patrol in the hall. That will leave you and me and the local 'flatties' for the grounds. Though I think we might as well stay here—you want a battalion to patrol the estate properly. By the way, when I was looking round early this morning I found a great mound of earth in the northeast corner of the estate, near the river. One of your gamekeepers told me it was called Chelford Greed. What is the idea?"

Dick was not in an archaeological mood, but he explained.

"One of my ancestors—I don't know which one—planned and carried out a big steal. You probably know that the charter by which we received these lands from King Henry confines the northern boundary of the estate to the course of the Ravensrill, and the ingenious Chelford of the times had the idea of changing the course of the Ravensrill so that the estate would embrace another thousand acres. The Chelford Greed was the dam he built. The natural course of the Ravensrill runs through the Long meadow. It was one of those clever little pieces of robbery that has made us landed proprietors what we are! As I say, I don't know which of the Chelfords planned this piece of larceny, because there is no written record, and the legend has come down from mouth to mouth, so to speak."

He looked up at the big portrait above the fireplace and shook his head.

"Lady," he said softly, "you've given me a lot of trouble!"

Puttler was interested.

"As how?" he asked.

"I'll tell you one of these days," said Dick. "I wonder if those girls are asleep?"

He stole quietly up the stairs. The man on duty in the corridor flashed a lamp upon him as he approached.

"No sound," he whispered, and Dick crept downstairs again.

It was arranged that he and Puttler should snatch a few hours' sleep in turn, the other patrolling round and round the block of buildings. At two o'clock in the morning he was aroused from a deep slumber to feel Puttler shaking gently at his shoulder.

"Nothing has happened," said the detective, eyeing with a friendly look the sofa from which Dick struggled. "I've warmed up some grub for you."

A spirit stove was burning on the desk and the kettle above was steaming. Dick poured the black coffee into a glass and scalded himself to wakefulness.

"One of the local men thought he saw somebody moving and challenged," reported Puttler, settling himself down with a luxurious sigh. "But it was probably only a bush. These birds are jumpy—they see a Black Abbot in every shadow!"

Dick sipped at the boiling fluid and broke a biscuit with his disengaged hand.

"Thank God, this can't go on much longer!" he said. "By the way, did you bring those papers from London?"

"I gave them to you in the library; they were in the blue envelope."

Dick put down the glass.

"I'd better keep them in my safe," he said. "I don't want the servants to see them."

HE crossed the hall, unlocked the door of the library, and went in, mechanically switching on the light and only then remembering that for the time being Fossaway Manor was denied the service of the little power house. He went back to the study and got his lamp and picked his way across the room to the desk. The envelope was where he had put it, and he slipped this into his pocket. As he did so he was aware that a cold wind was blowing. He sent his light along the windows. That at the end was open; one of the curtains, which had been drawn across, lay in a heap on the ground.

He went to the door and called Puttler softly and the detective joined him.

"Somebody has been here," he said, and pointed to the curtain and the twisted pole that had supported it.

It was easy to see how the intruder had made his way into the library. Two of the panes near the iron handle which fastened one leaf of the window had been broken, and evidently the midnight visitor, in entering, must have fallen and, catching hold of the curtain to save himself, brought it to the ground, breaking away the pole, which was hanging drunkenly.

"I passed here ten minutes ago, and the window was shut then," said Puttler.

"He may have been inside at the moment," replied Dick thoughtfully. "I wonder what has been taken?"

He examined the desk. Evidently the intruder had not opened any of the drawers, though, if he had done so, his labors would have been in vain, since Dick had cleared every document out of the room early in the day. As they circulated the room Puttler stumbled over something.

"Where did this come from?" he asked.

It was a light ladder, and Dick recognized it as one of two that were part of the library furniture and was employed to reach books from the top shelf of the lower tier.

"When I saw this last it was standing at the end of the room," he said.

He flashed his lamp up onto the shelves, looking for a gap in the long line of books. So doing, his lamp swept across that space intervening between the shelves which was covered by the portrait of the late Lady Chelford. He could see the big gold frame, caught a glimpse of one white hand hanging gracefully, and then something brought his lamp back. He heard the church warden detective swear softly. Himself, he was speechless. The light of his lamp focused on the place where the woman's face had been and where now was a black emptiness.

The face and shoulders of the picture had been cut from the frame and the ragged strands of canvas told him that it had been cut by an unskillful hand.

Neither man spoke until they were back in the little study, and then Puttler looked gloomily at his companion.

"What do you make of that?"

"Heaven knows!" groaned Dick.

The study door was closed and he had pulled across a dark curtain which had been hung that day for the purpose.

"I suppose I'd better get out, though I don't suppose I shall find anything."

"Wait until I've had the remainder of your coffee and I'll come with you," said Puttler. "No, Mr. Alford, I never felt less like sleep. We shall have daylight in a couple of hours. Wait."

He turned out the oil lamp which had been requisitioned from the kitchen, blew down the glass chimney, and the room was in darkness.

"Now you can pull open those curtains and go out," he said, "if that is your way."

DICK moved the curtains slightly and looked out. The world lay peaceful, silent, in the pallid light of the moon, and as he opened the door the sweet scent of the earth and the cold morn greeted him fragrantly.

His foot was raised to step across the threshold when Puttler's big hand closed round his arm.

"Wait," he whispered again.

Dick stood motionless.

"I see nothing," he said in the same tone.

Still Puttler held him, his head bent, listening.

"All right," he said, released his grip, and stepped out on to the little terrace before the second son.

He gave a swift glance left and right.

"What was it?" asked Dick, in surprise.

"Somebody breathing," was Puttler's astonishing reply. "You won't believe that I could hear a man breathing a dozen yards away, but I can. It's one of my many animal qualities." He took a little run, cleared the gravel path in a bound, and went noiselessly along the grass to the left. Presently Dick saw him returning at a jogtrot. The detective went past and disappeared round the wing of the block. In a few minutes he returned.

"Hearing and scent are my two qualities. Can you smell anything?"

Dick sniffed the morning air.

"No," he confessed.

"Come along with me."

This time he walked softly across the path, explaining that he was afraid of waking the girls who slept almost immediately above them.

They went to the end of the wing, and then the sergeant halted.

"Now do you smell anything?" he asked.

Dick sniffed again. There was a sweet odor in the air, the scent of some exotic flower that seemed familiar to him.

"Does anybody in this house smoke scented cigarets?" asked the detective, and Dick went suddenly cold.

"Harry!"

"Your brother, eh?" Puttler's deep set eyes surveyed him in the half light. "That doesn't necessarily mean that he is smoking them. Where were they kept?"

"In the library as a rule."

Puttler began searching the grounds with the aid of his lamp. He had not gone far before he saw something and picked it up. It was a half smoked cigaret with a rose leaf tip.

"Humph!" muttered Puttler, and continued his search—a search which yielded no further evidence.

Retracing their steps, they passed the study door, and Puttler, who was walking a little ahead, stumbled over something, and put his light to the ground.

"You keep rather a lot of ladders about here, Mr. Alford," he said, in a low voice. "A library ladder outside? What's the great idea?"

The ladder was lying parallel with the gravel drive, and Puttler examined it rung by rung.

"That wasn't here last night, I'll take my oath," he said.

"No," said Dick, puzzled; "it usually hangs on two pegs near the garage."

He lifted it up. It was a long, light, triangular ladder tapering to a point at the top and used by the staff for outside window cleaning.

"You had better have it chained up," was all Puttler said after he had finished his inspection. "The man who brought this here was the man who cut off your light supply, and, incidentally——"

Far away in the grounds came the faint sound of a man's voice challenging in military fashion.

"Halt! Who goes there?"

"That's Renwick, a local man," said Puttler immediately.

They ran towards the sound of the voice, and presently saw the flicker of his lantern; and it was a badly scared man who challenged them a few minutes later. He had seen nothing, he said, but he had heard voices.

"One of them was laughing. I thought at first it was you, sergeant, but when I heard it again it was so wild that I got a little nervout."

"Did anybody answer the challenge?"

"No, but the voices stopped. I couldn't hear the woman's voice——"

"The woman's voice?" said Dick quickly. "Was it a woman? Surely you are mistaken?"

"I could swear to it," said the watcher. "It was the woman's voice I heard first, and the man who laughed. I think the voices must have stopped as soon as I put my lamp on."

"In what direction?"

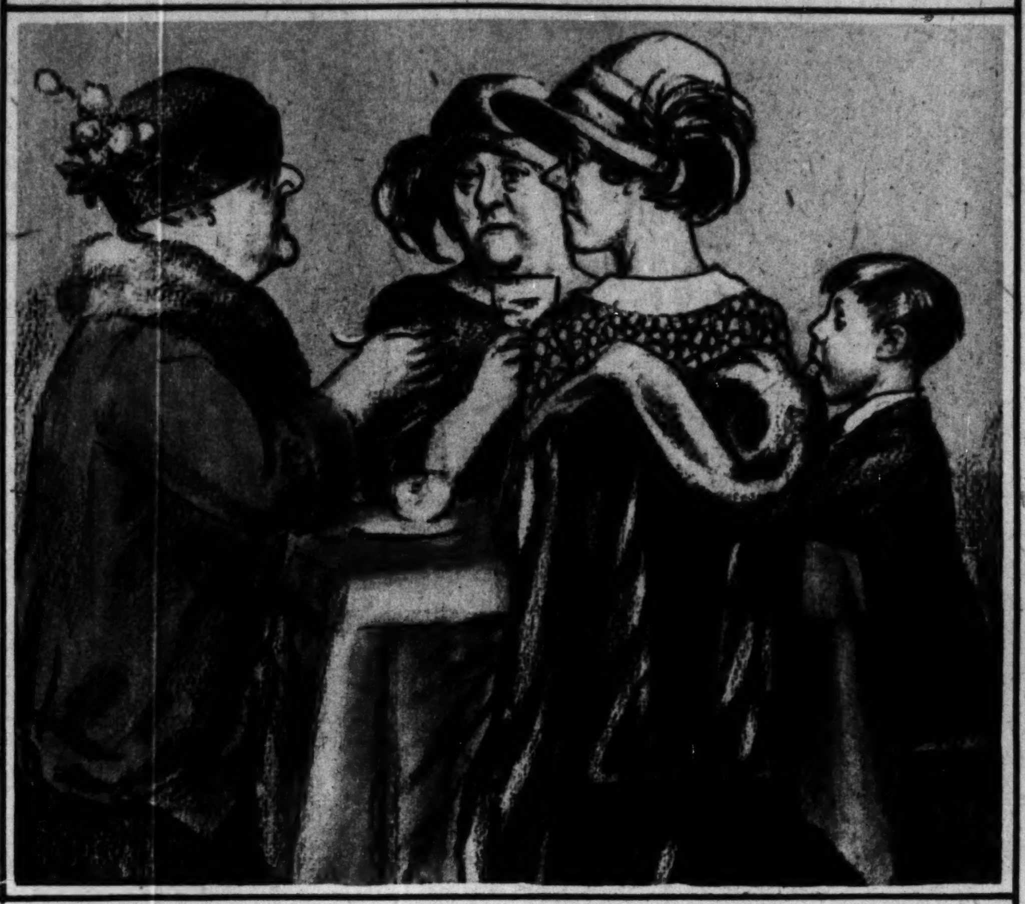
Here is Mrs. Lillian Quilp at 4:15 p. m. trying on one creation after another. If it were earlier in the day, and her arches weren't bothering her, Miss Gillen, the saleslady, would no doubt be saying sweet things of the hat on Mrs. Quilp. But in the late p. m. her words are getting pretty crisp. "You have an unusually large head to fit!" says Miss Gillen.



"My dear, I know it hurt him dreadfully when she used to get familiar with the ice man!" One of those intimate lunch groups in the restaurant. Use the Soap that Stimulates your Skin

"Choose a soap," they say, "that cleans tiny pores full length and then stimulates the areas around them—for by this method you can have skin that is healthy, vivid, soft."

And the soap that is best for both purposes they say, is Jap Rose.

Because of its purity (you can see through it) Jap Rose can enter and cleanse your tiny pores that coarse soaps would clog.

And the 2 natural tonics Jap Rose contains, stimulate the tissues beneath; the blood grows lively, new color comes.

The temporary tingle that follows its first use shows that your skin is returning to normal and new beauty is in prospect.

A boy gilded from head to foot for a DeVinci pageant died because the paint clogged his pores and halted vital body functions.

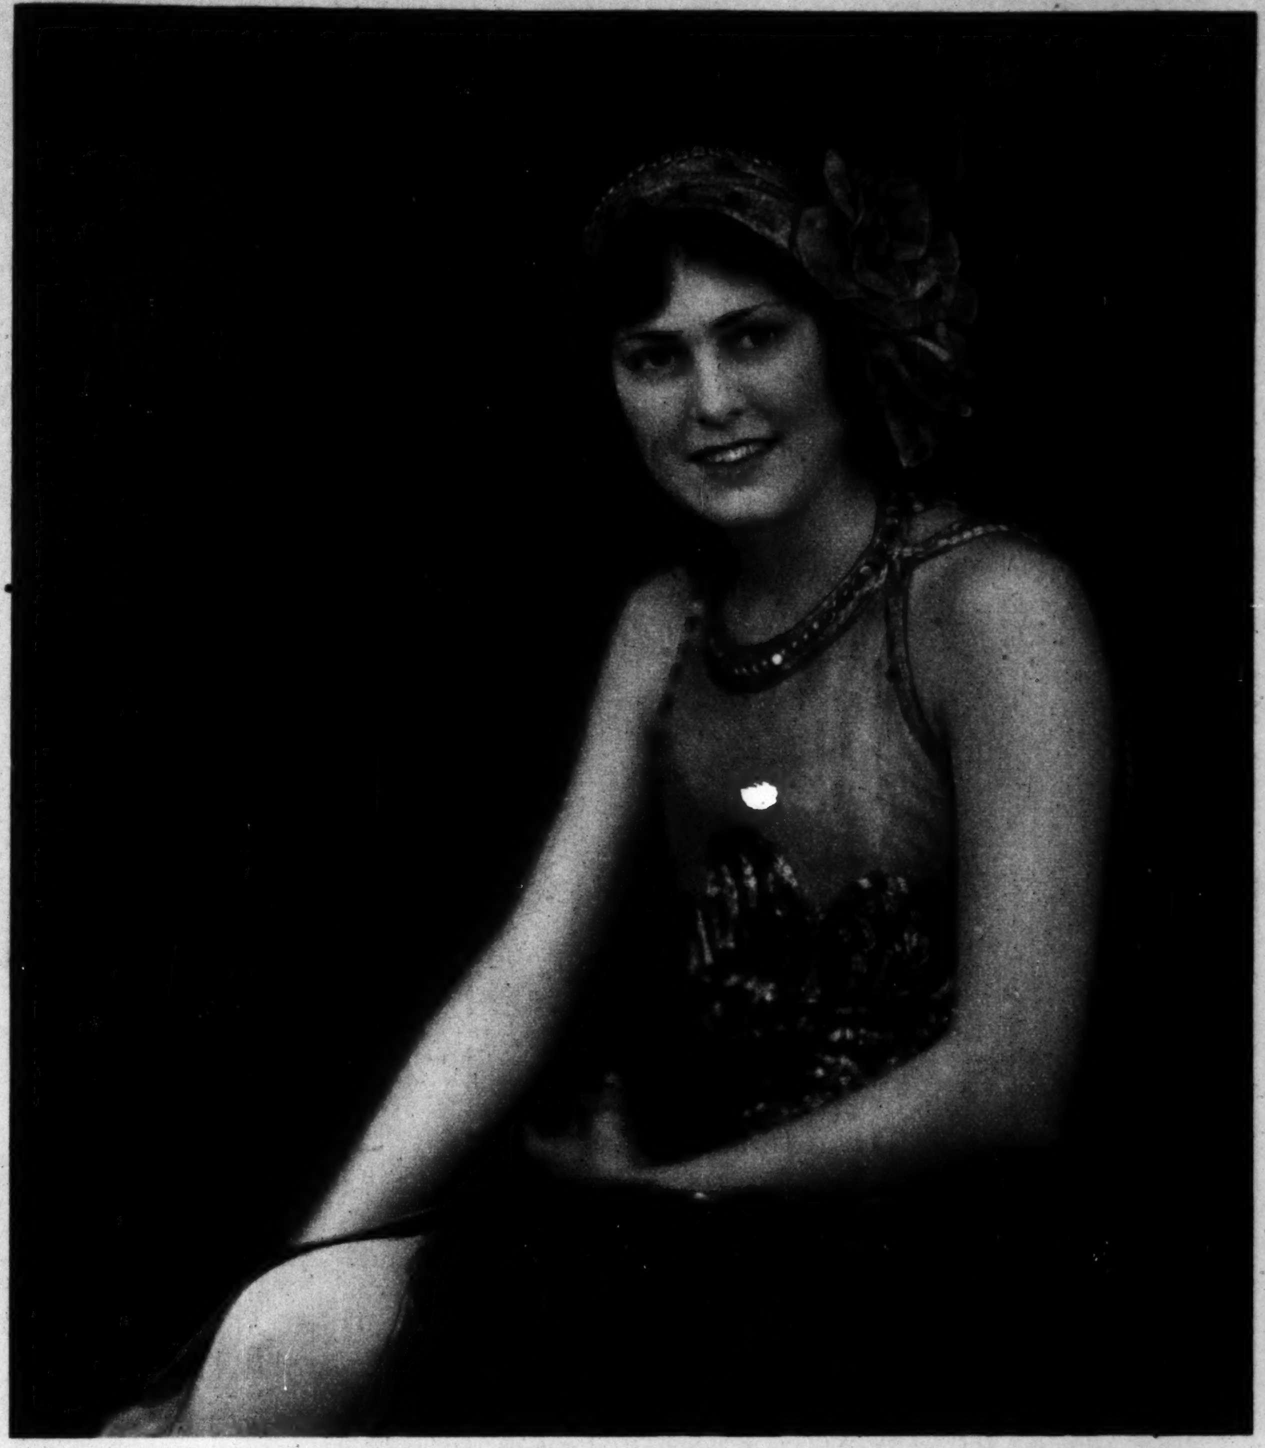
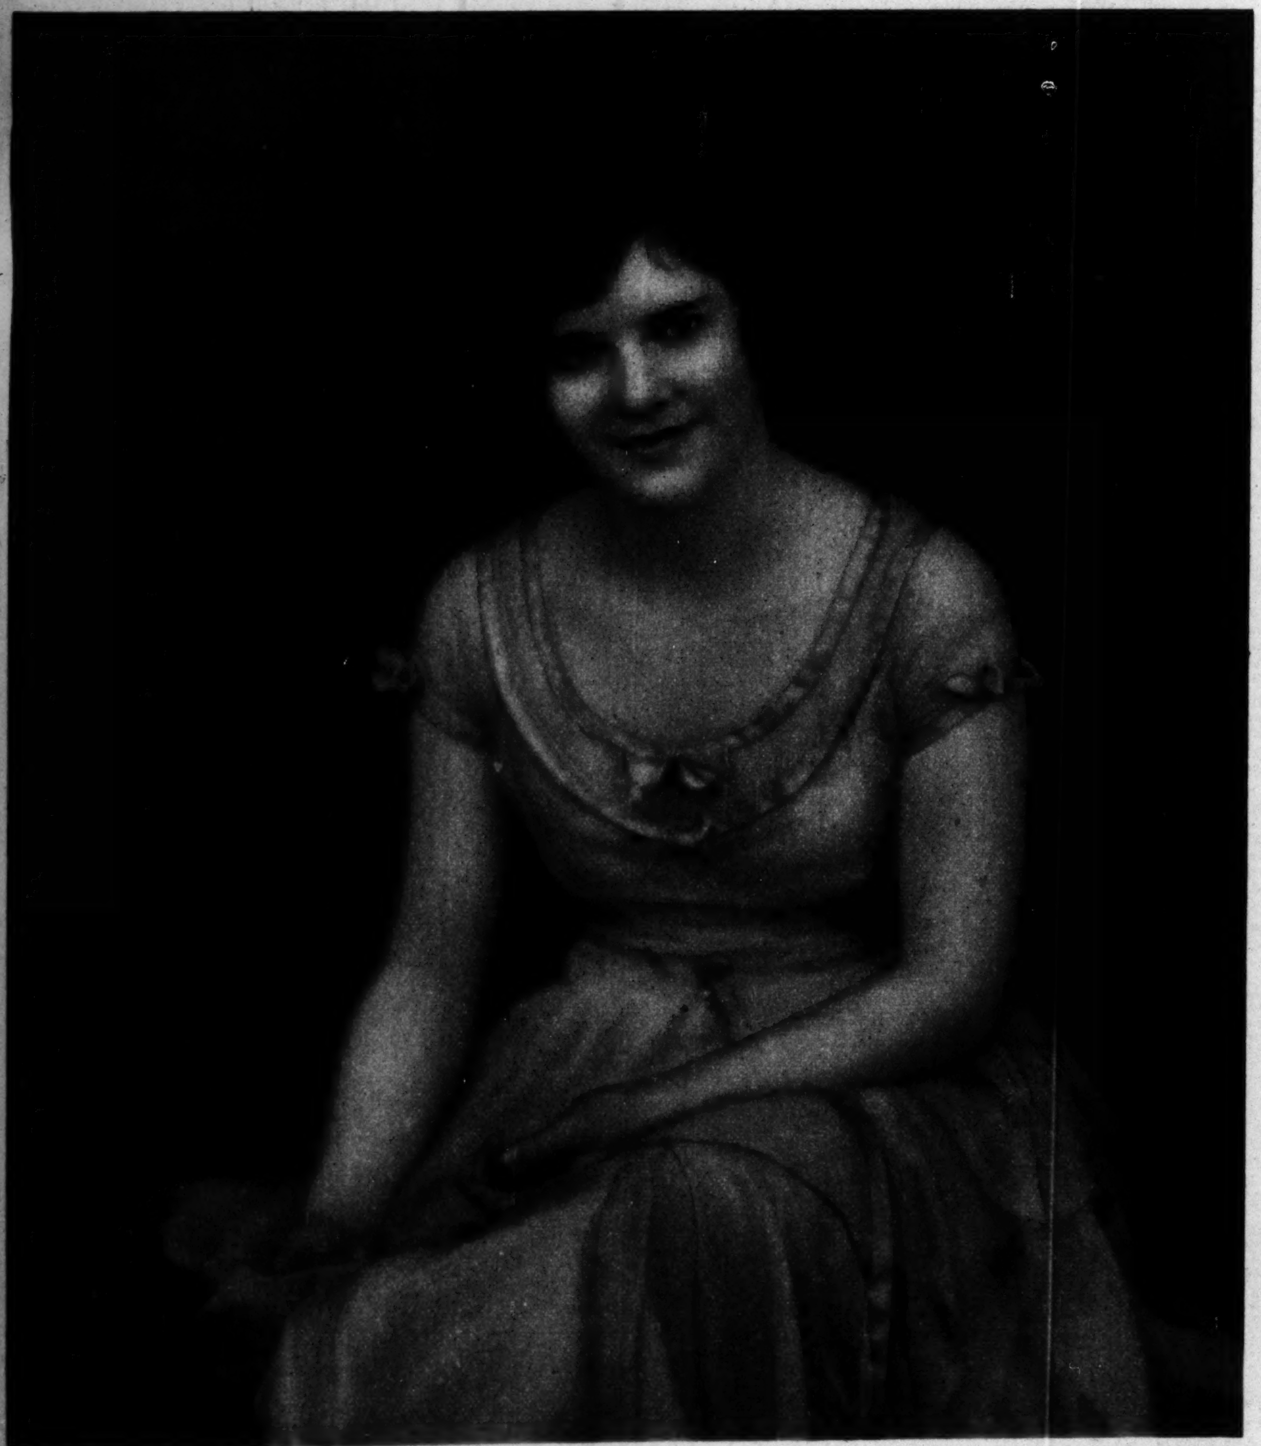
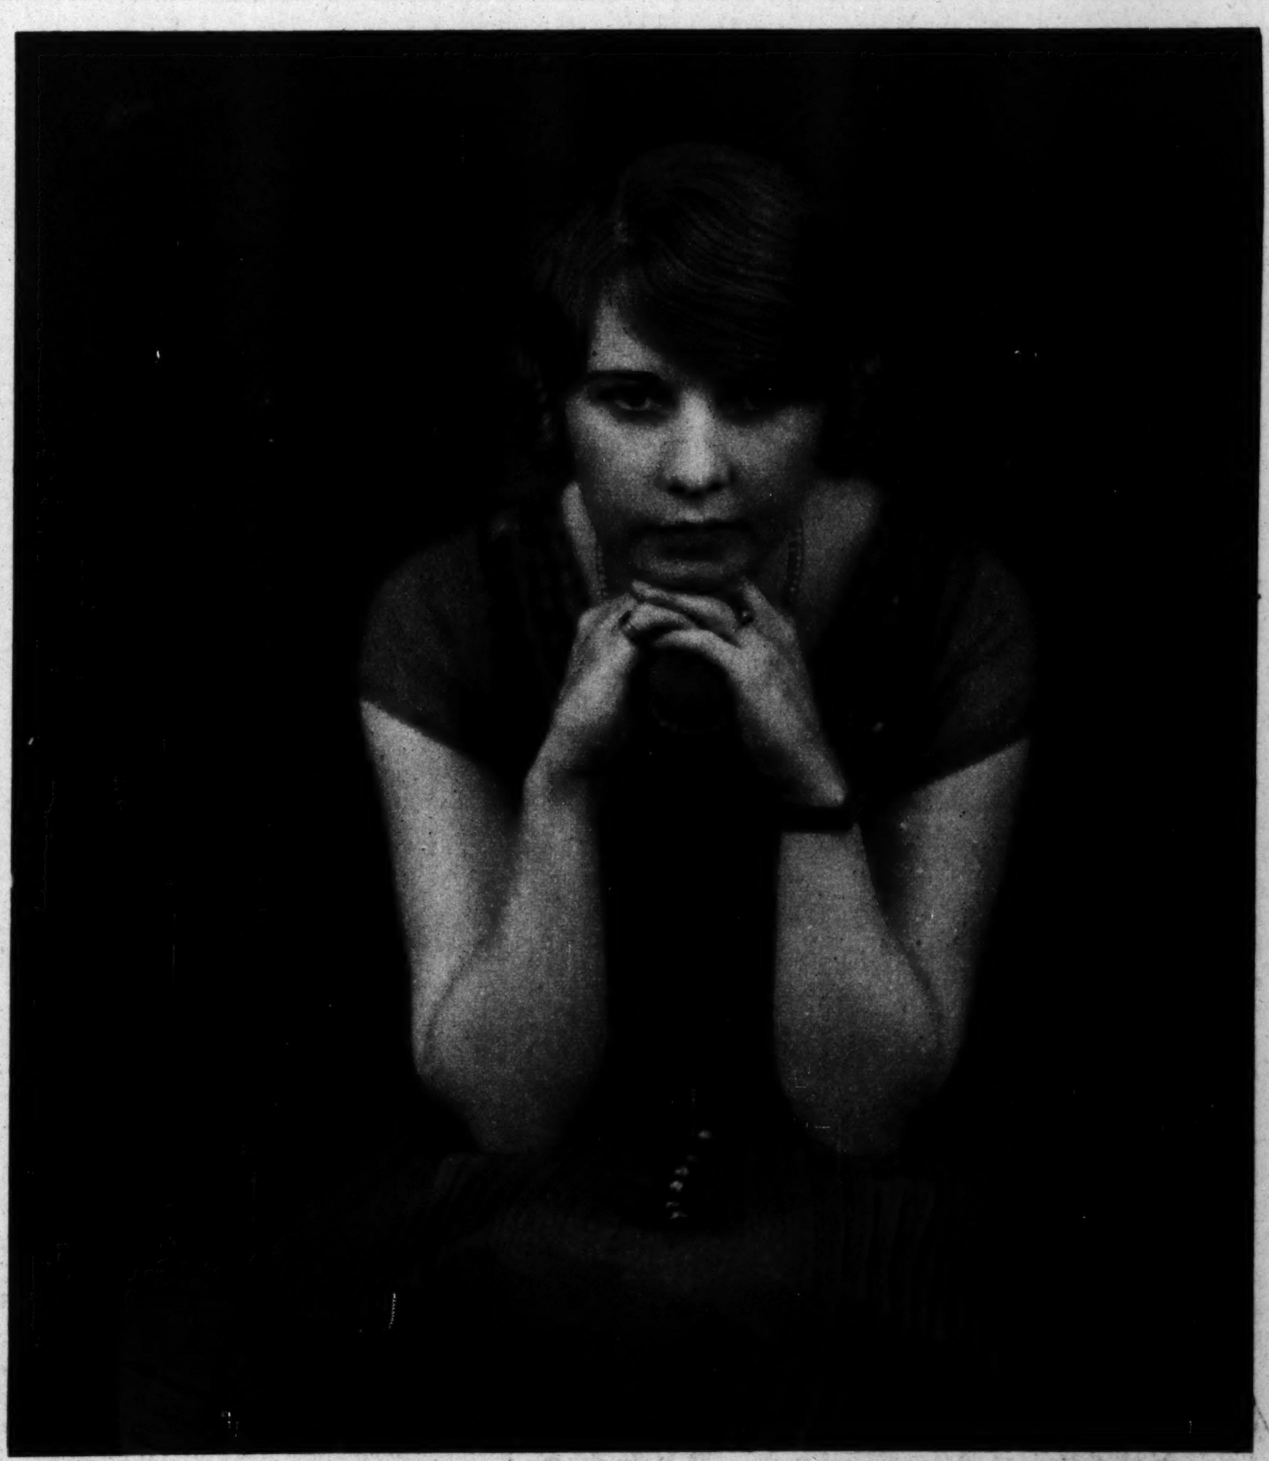
MISS ALLYN KING had large fame for a time as one of Mr. Ziegfeld's glorified American girls in the Follies; but she has for some seasons been taking acting as an art. She's been in "Out of the Night" here.



MISS EVELYN LAW is among the young women Mr. Ziegfeld has raised to measurable eminence by giving chances to them. She danced gracefully here in the run of "Louie the Fourteenth."



MISS VIOLET DUNN plays the doll-baby wife who is the cause of Mr. Joe Laurie's acted woe in "If I Was Rich!" wherein Mr. Laurie gets along without aid from a bevy of quiristers.



MISS DORIS KELLY has been performing with Miss King, of this page, in "Out of the Night," acting as a plus-fours young woman who practices medicine and extracts bullets.

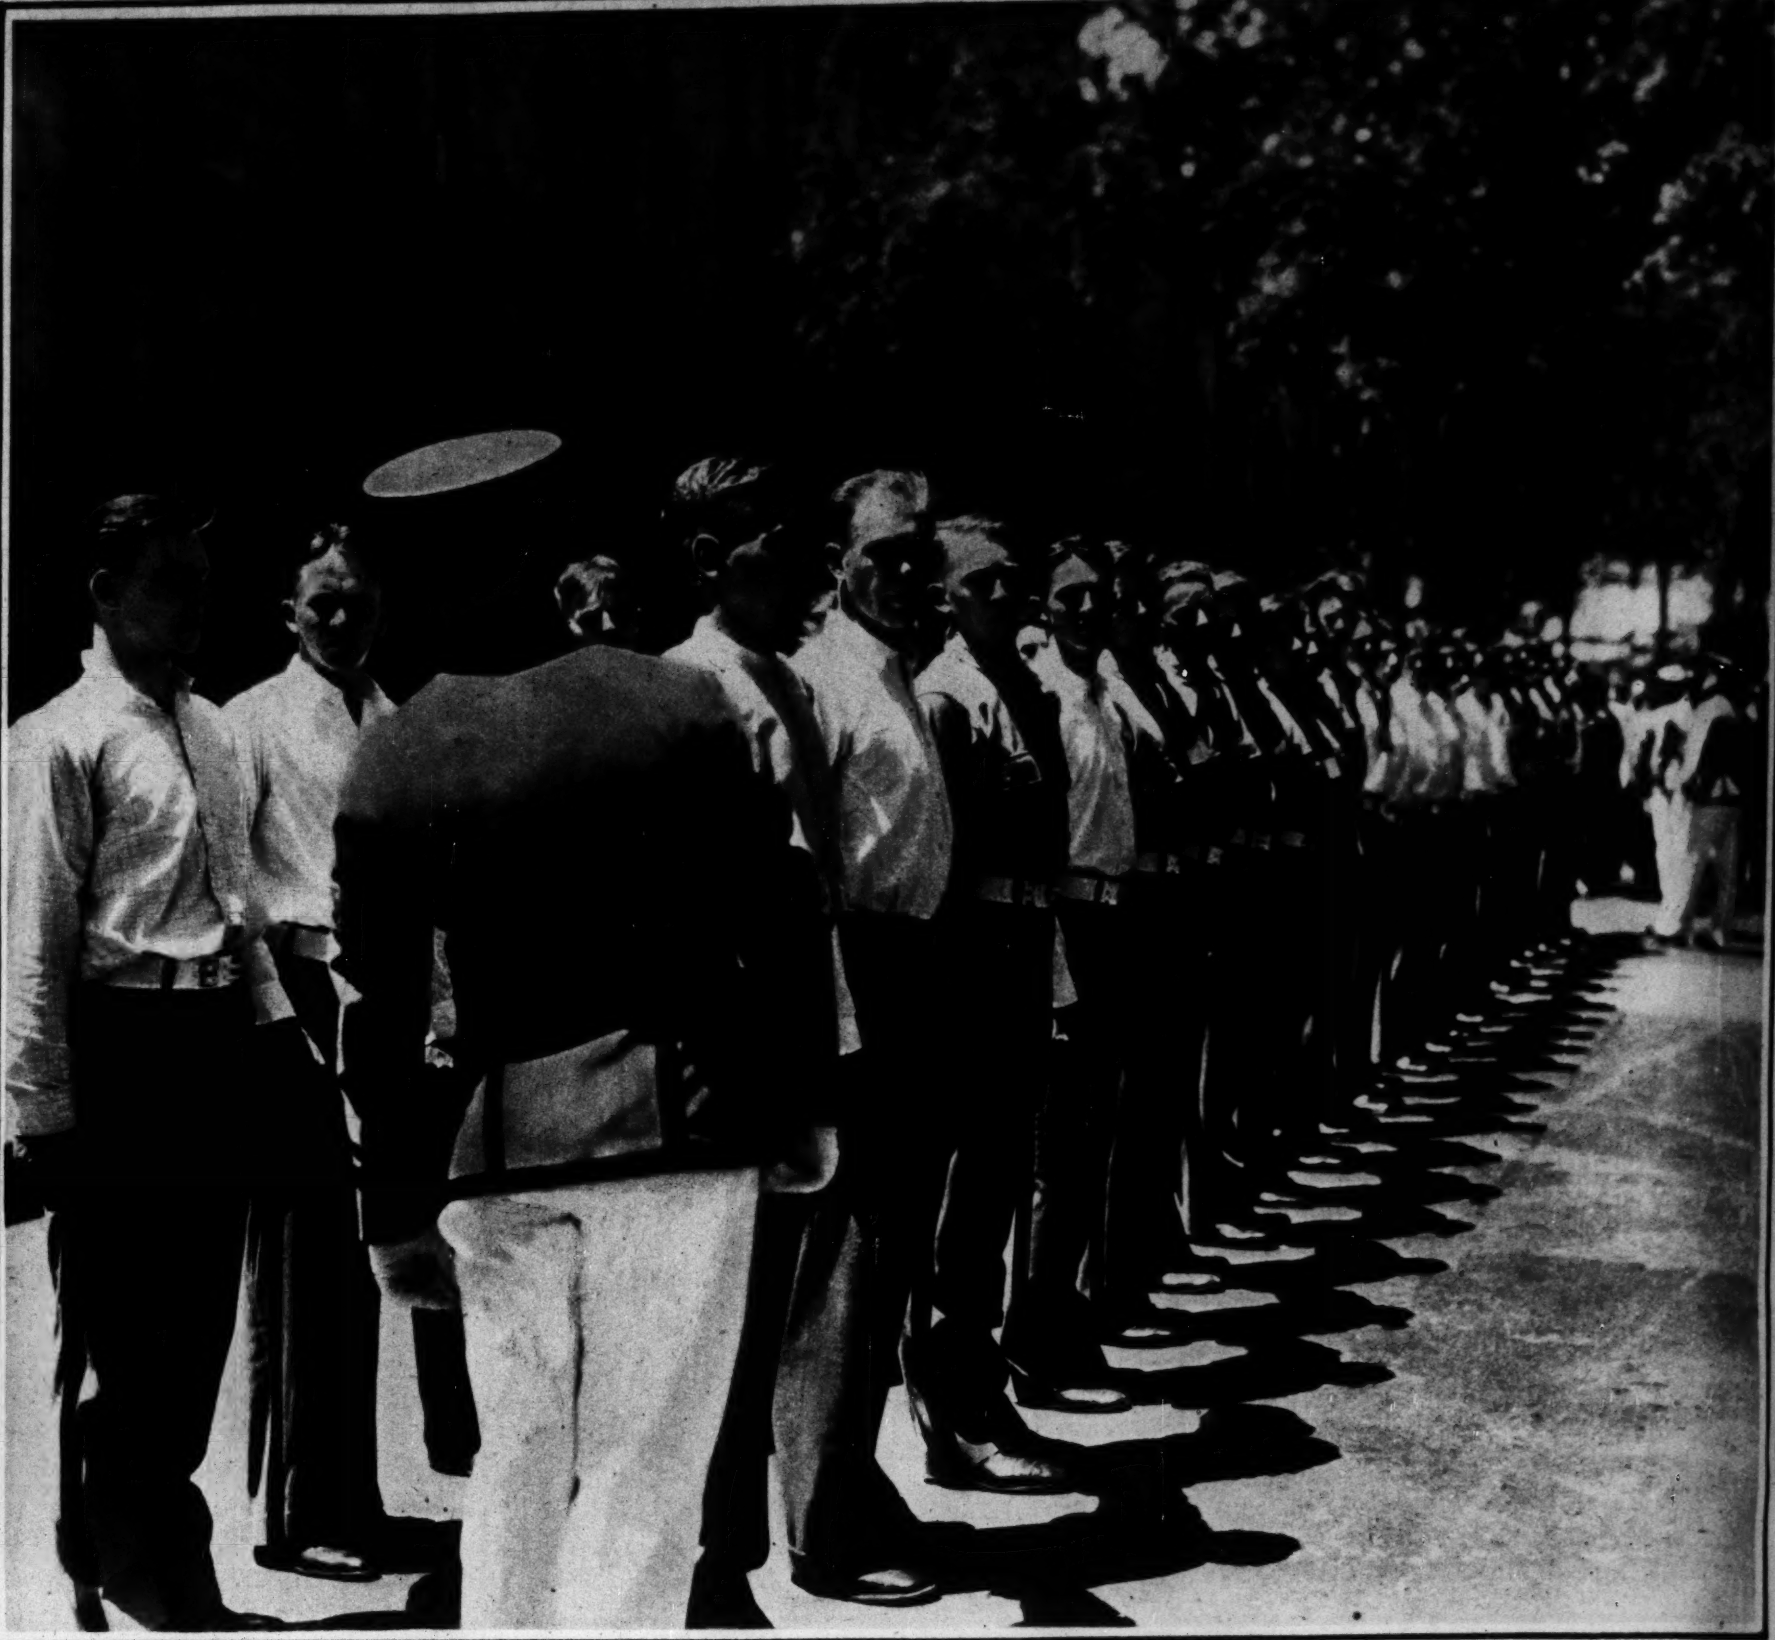
THE ASTORS RUN ACROSS for a look-see at America which included a visit to Chicago. Viscount Astor is a person of importance in the newspaper world of Great Britain. He also is noted as the husband of Lady Astor, England's first woman M. P. The son and heir, William Waldorf, is not yet 19 years old. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



RAW "PLEBES" AT WEST POINT line up for their first instructions. Fine lads, these; and they have to be, for Uncle Sam is mighty particular in picking the boys from amongst whom he will select his generals of tomorrow. It's hard work for the newcomers, this first day at the military school, but, like the doughboys of the late war, they soon learn to like it. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

No Extortionate Price For Permanence

A fair exchange is notoriously no robbery, but the price that women's hair used to pay for a permanent wave was a distinct extortion. The permanence of the waves used to demand so much of the natural beauty of the hair in exchange! But no longer—for there is today the Eugène Method.

This induces the sleekest, flattest of permanent waves without sacrificing any of the hair's life or lustre.

Many methods of permanent waving first drench the hair in chemicals, then bake it until it is fixed rigidly in form.

The Eugène Method winds the hair dry, then softens it with tiny jets of clean, white steam until the hair relaxes comfortably into the permanent, natural looking Eugène Waves. The hair then dries naturally and gradually, with no loss of suppleness.

True, the Eugène Method is slightly more expensive, but your hair's beauty is no part of the price.

May we give you a little booklet which tells you more about the Eugène Method? Perhaps, too, we may be able to direct you to a shop where you may inquire first-hand about it. Just drop us a note or a post card, and we shall forward the booklet to you at once.

DAUGHTER OF BONAR LAW MARRIES AN AMERICAN, Kent Galbraith Colwell, son of Captain and Mrs. Breckinridge Jones of St. Louis. A. Bonar Law once was prime minister of England, and was a power in British politics until his death some time ago. The groom is the half-brother of Mrs. Kent S. Clow of Chicago, who was Miss Frances Jones. Mr. Colwell and his mother both visit Chicago frequently and are well known in society here.

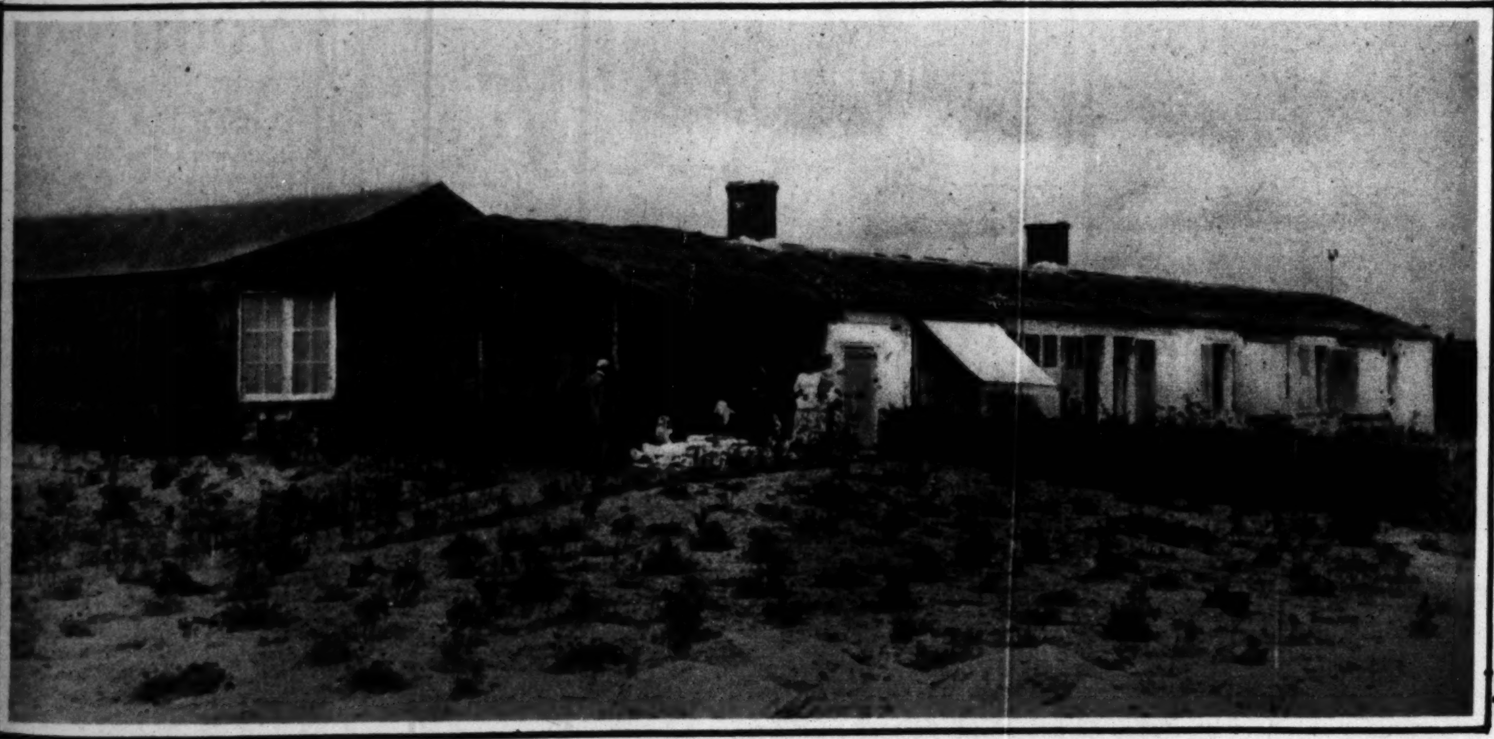
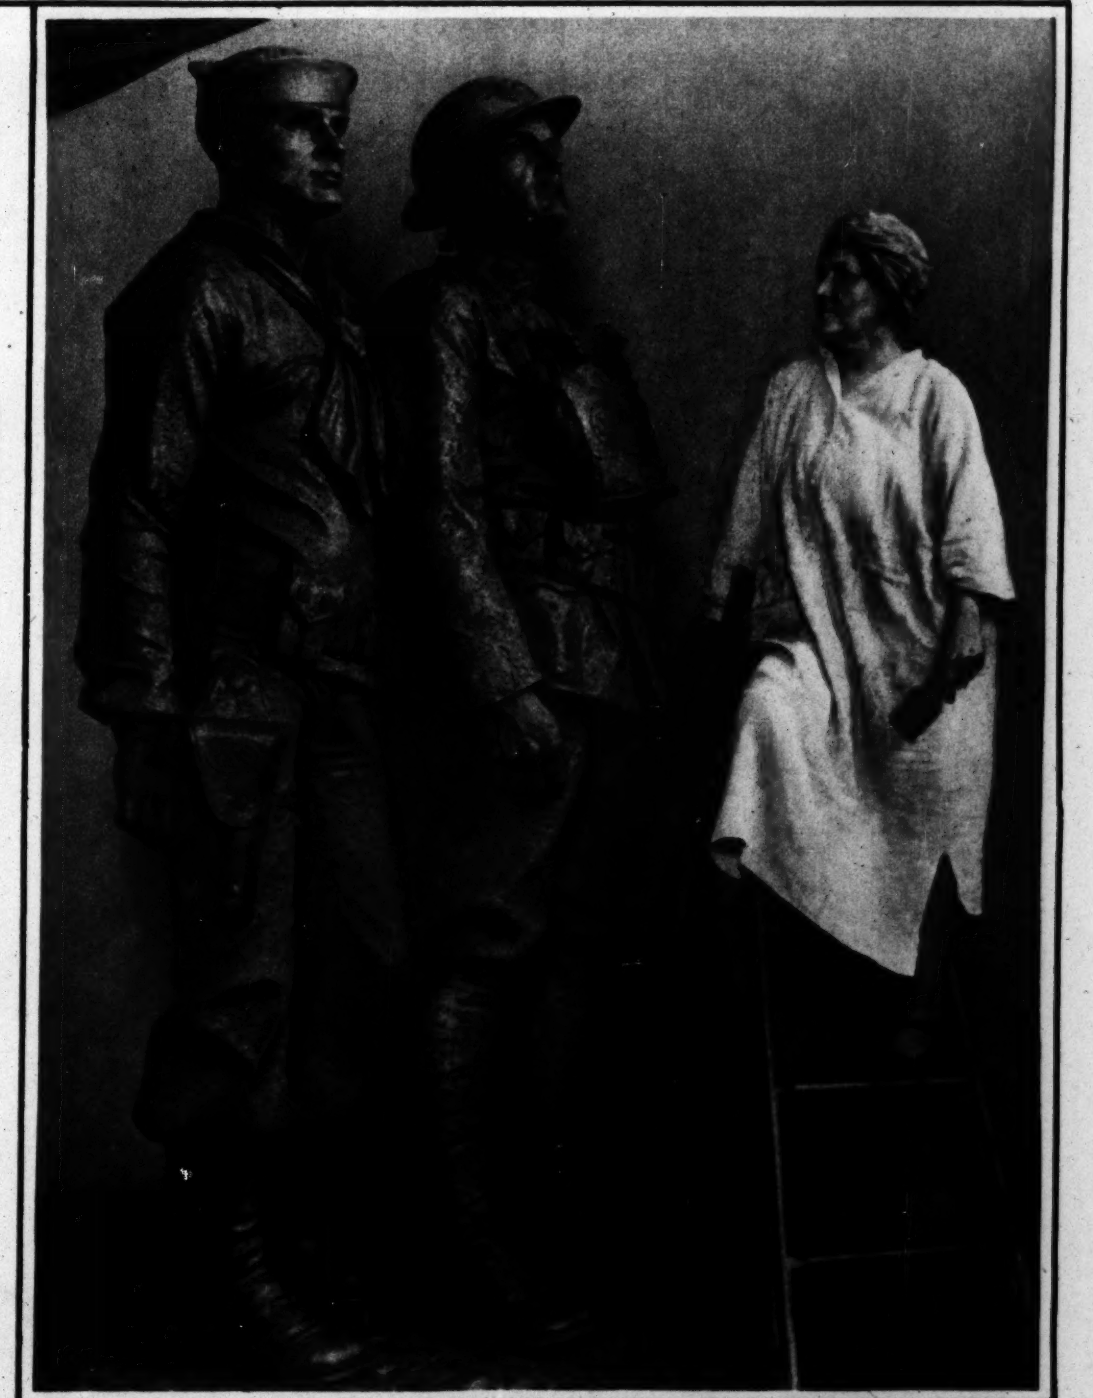
THE TIGER OF FRANCE RETREATS to the quiet of his home at La Vendee. A family reunion at the villa of Georges Clemenceau is pictured here. In the group are Lord Milner, who was a British financial leader during the war; Clemenceau's daughter-in-law; Lady Milner; the Tiger himself, and Clemenceau's daughter, Mrs. Jung.



CLEMENCEAU'S RETREAT in the quiet province of La Vendee. Here the war premier of France is devoting himself to work on two books, to be called "Demosthenes" and "Civilization." He expects to publish these works this fall.

(Both photographs for Wide World.)



ANOTHER WAR MEMORIAL—This one bears the sharp title, "Like Hell You Can!" It was designed for Fultonville, N. Y., by Sally Farnham, who is shown with her creation. The model for the sailor was Walter Smith, brother of one of the victims in the S-51 disaster. A veteran of the Seventh regiment, Ted Schmidel, posed as the soldier.

CAROL DEMPSTER is now working in "The Sorrows of Satan" opposite Adolphe Menjou. Hardly a "sorrow," would you say, from looking at this picture? Also in the cast will be Ricardo Cortez and Lya de Putti.

JOHN BARRYMORE is seen here as he will appear in "Don Juan." As the great lover who loved 'em and left 'em, one prophesies he will have a role worthy of his steel.

They simply don't tell you

What was she to do?

As an intelligent girl she knew—not by intuition, but by actual observation—that something stood between her and the men she wanted most to attract.

Some of her friends, she felt, knew what the trouble was. Yet nobody seemed ready to tell her.

She would have given almost anything to have someone tell her the truth frankly.

You, yourself, rarely know when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). That's the insidious thing about it. And even your closest friends won't tell you.

Sometimes, of course, halitosis comes from some deep-seated organic disorder that requires professional advice. But usually—and fortunately—halitosis is only a local condition that yields to the regular use of Listerine as a mouth wash and gargle. It puts you on the safe and polite side. Moreover, in using Listerine to combat halitosis, you are quite sure to avoid sore throat and those more serious illnesses that start with throat infections.

Listerine halts food fermentation in the mouth and leaves the breath sweet, fresh and clean. Not by substituting some other odor but by really removing the old one. The Listerine odor itself quickly disappears.

This safe and long-trusted antiseptic has dozens of different uses; note the little circular that comes with every bottle. Your druggist sells Listerine in the original brown package only—never in bulk. There are four sizes: 14 ounce, 7 ounce, 3 ounce and 1½ ounce Buy the large size for economy.—Lambert Pharmacal Company, Saint Louis, U. S. A.

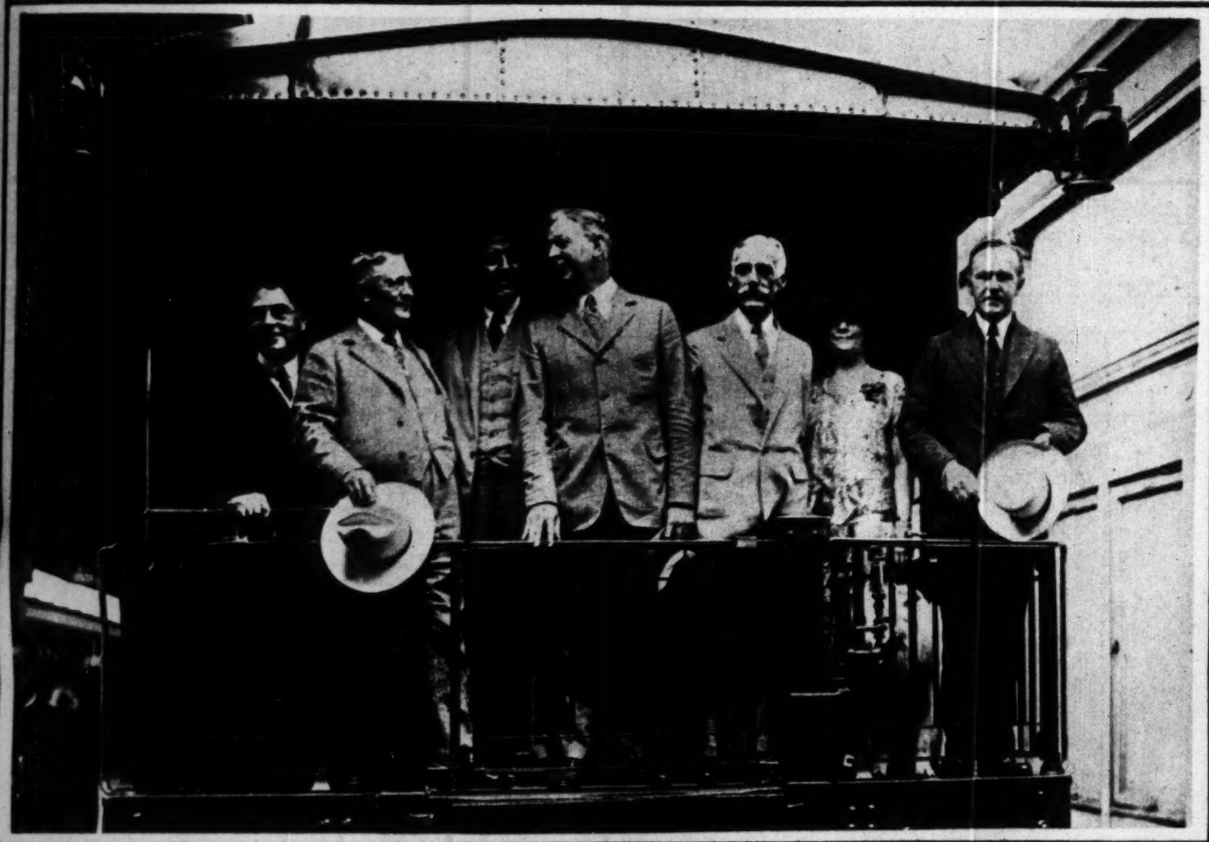
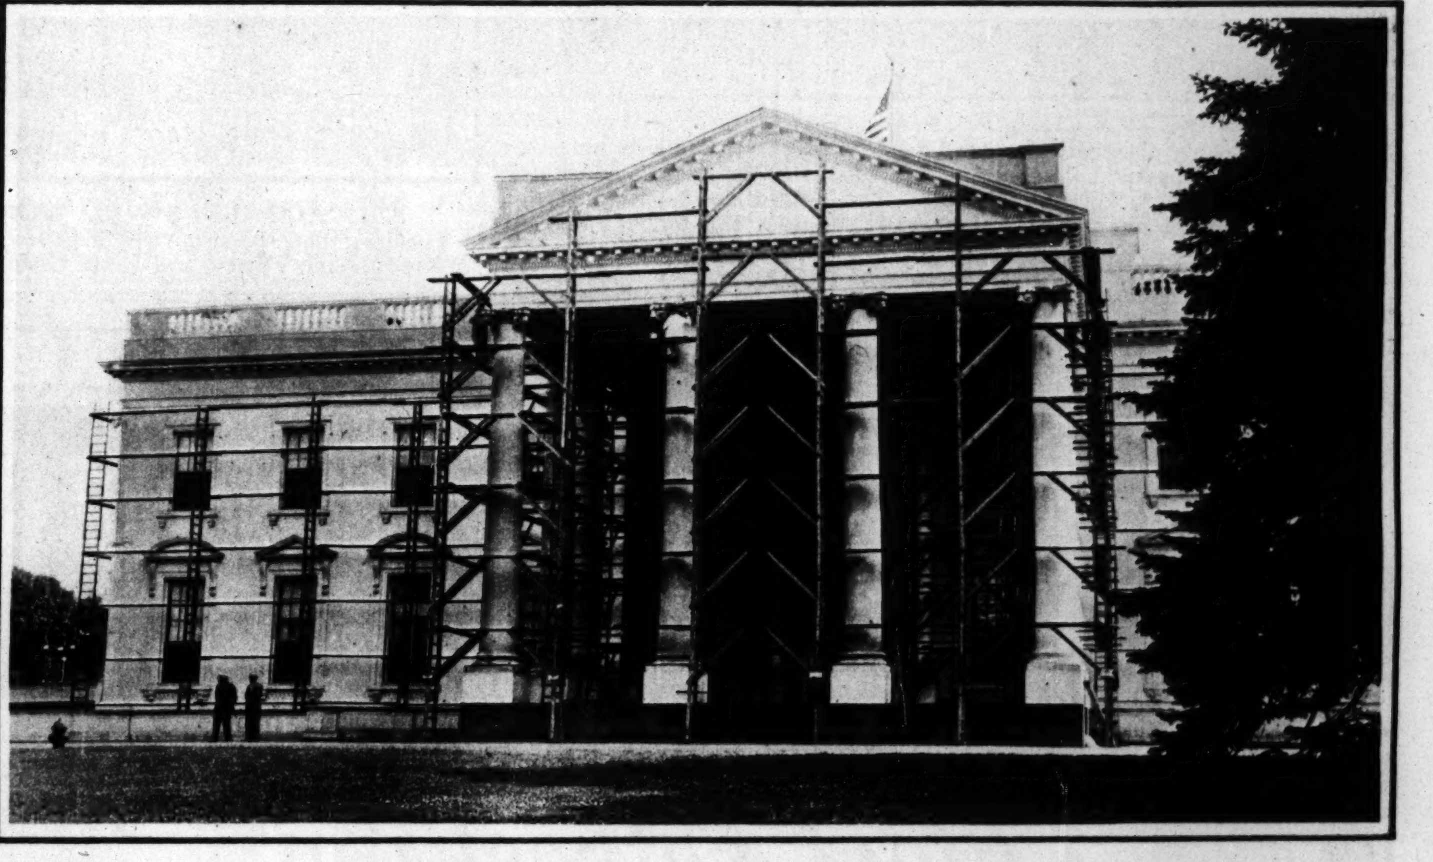
THE SEA GIVES UP THE S-51 after an epic struggle by the navy. Months of discouraging labor were required to lift the ill-fated submarine from the floor of the Atlantic off Block island. But here is the S-51 in Brooklyn navy yard, where the bodies of many sea heroes who died with their ship were taken from the tomb. Thirty-one men lost their lives on the sub. The great gash in the side shows where the diver was rammed by the steamer City of Rome. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

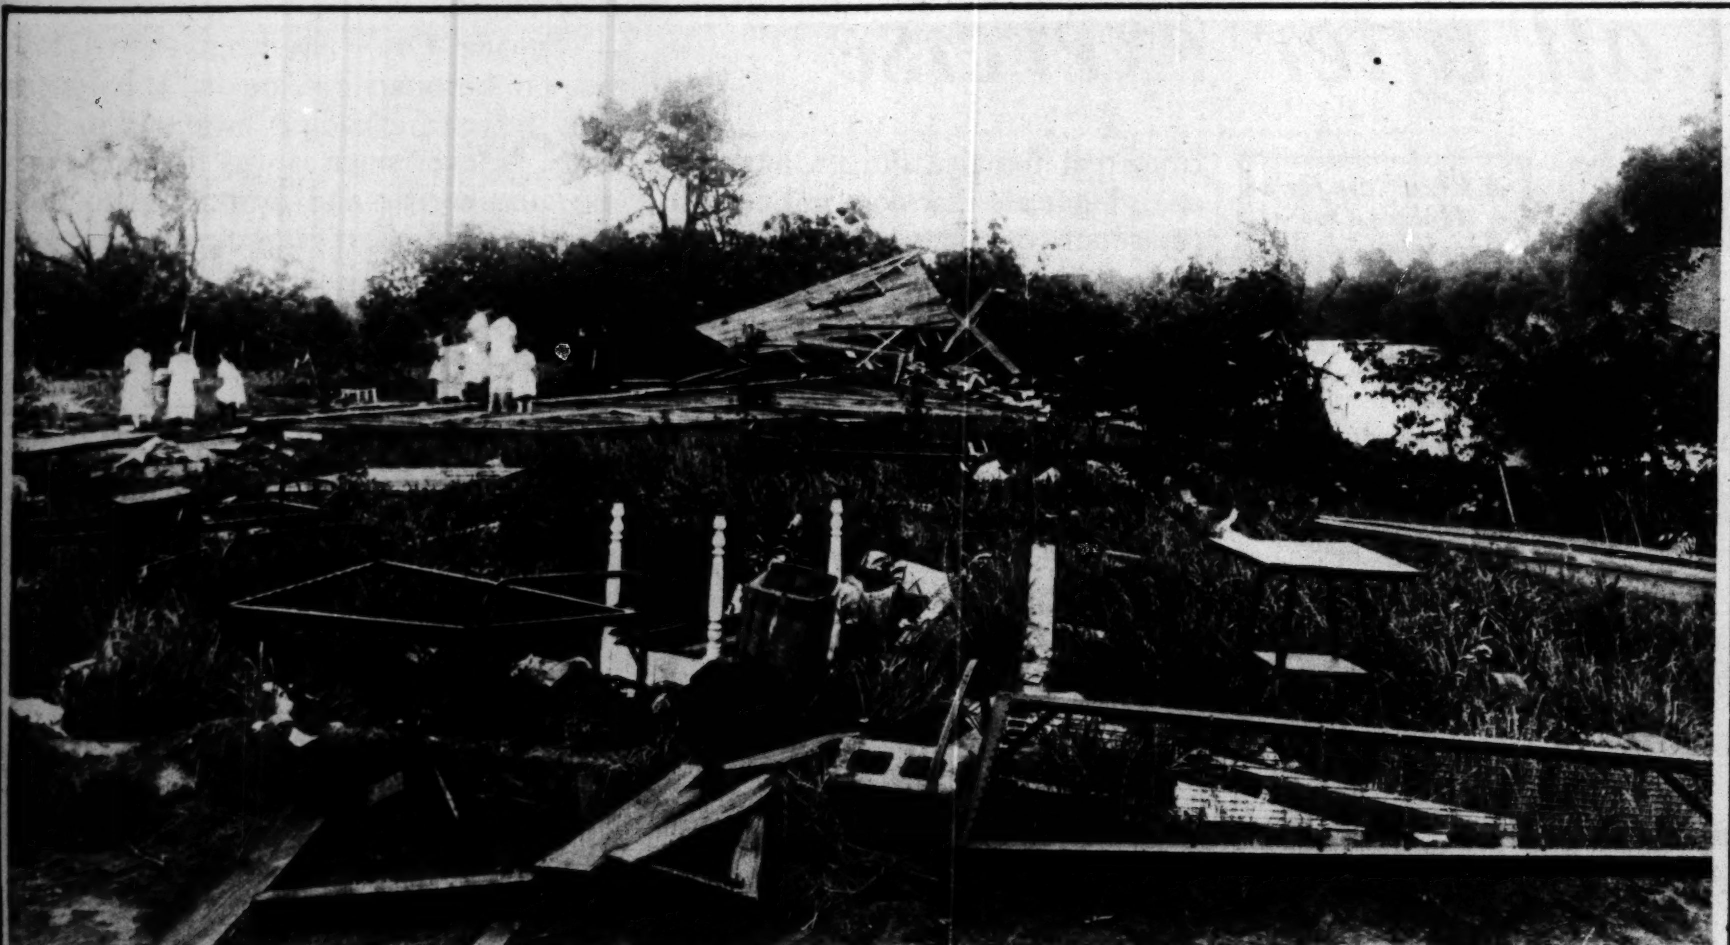
ONE OF THE THREE SURVIVORS of the S-51 proves his gameness by helping bring up the bodies of his shipmates from the diver's interior. Dewey George Kile is shown on the gangplank leading to the submarine's deck in Brooklyn navy yard. (Photograph from International.)



SCHOOL'S OUT AT WASHINGTON, and his happy cabinet members gather about Teacher Coolidge to say good-by for the summer. In this group are Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Postmaster General New, Attorney General Sargent, Secretary of War Davis, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Mrs. Coolidge, and the President. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)



CLOSED FOR REPAIRS—Summer visitors at Washington will find the White House front hiding behind this scaffolding. The executive mansion is to be cleaned up and repainted, inside and out, while the President and his family are summering in the Adirondacks. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



AFTER THE MICHIGAN CYCLONE—Three persons were killed and only one house was left standing on this island near Buchanan when a wind storm swept the St. Joseph valley recently. A woman and her child were killed in the wreckage in the central background. Freaks of the storm left household furnishings tossed about just as they appear in the picture. TRIPLETS, B'GOSH!—No wonder Queen, the pet bear out in Rainier National park, is so proud and haughty these days. She has three animated teddy-bears following her about wherever she goes. Park hands have named the trio of youngsters Hi, Lo, and Jack. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

A THREE-TIME CHAMPION who broke three American records in the women's national track and field meet at the Philadelphia fair. Miss Lillian Copeland thus helped her team, the Pasadena A. All these are new records.

The coolest, most refreshing drink of all after exercise

How grateful you will be for "Canada Dry" after a stirring round of golf or a fast set of tennis!

It is the coolest and most refreshing drink of all after exercise because it not only cools, but it refreshes.

That's an important thing to remember: "It not only cools, but it refreshes."

It lifts you up! Invigorates! Helps to calm your nerves after the excitement of a close match! Makes you feel fresh and keen for the next round or the journey home!

No other ginger ale will bring you this same refreshment because there is no other ginger ale like "Canada Dry."

Pale—like champagne in color—"dry," like an old wine—sparkling with vitality—piquant yet mellow, this fine old ginger ale is the most delicious and refreshing beverage you have ever lifted to your lips.

The reason is easy to understand: "Canada Dry" is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, and it is one ginger ale that does not contain capsicum (red pepper) in any form.

Because of this, "Canada Dry" blends delightfully with other beverages—it will not bite the tongue or burn the lips—it has none of that flat, syrupy taste—it leaves no "brassy" after-taste or recurring "back kick"—it is friendly to the stomach!

Its flavor is always a delight, yet there is an even more important reason why "Canada Dry" is so cooling and invigorating in summer. And that is its purity.

"Canada Dry" has been served for years in hospitals in Canada. It has also been served in leading hospitals in the U. S. A. ever since it was first brought over the border and introduced to this country a few short years ago.

These are important points to remember when you order a beverage at your club or for your family at home.

The name "Canada Dry" is a definite assurance of quality and well worth looking for when you want . . . purity!

A Free Case for a Hole-in-One

During 1926 we will give a case of "Canada Dry" free to every golfer who makes a hole-in-one. Complete details are given in the current issue of The American Golfer.

CHICAGO'S AIR MAIL FIELD as seen from a speeding plane. The field is far from the busy city, in the western suburb of Maywood. Suburbanites' homes are visible in the background. The two smaller structures in the foreground are hangars. The larger building is the factory in which the government now assembles ships for the air mail service. To the left is the Maywood hospital for disabled soldiers. The marked lines in front of the hangars inclose the hard-surfaced runways from which the flying machines take off. TO THE YANKS WHO FOUGHT IN FRANCE this imposing memorial has been unveiled at St. Nazaire. The memorial is the work of an American woman, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. It cost $100,000, raised by popular subscription. Our picture shows the scene at St. Nazaire as the great pile of bronze and granite was unveiled. (Photograph from International.)

NO ROYAL ROAD TO LEARNING, wherefore the young Infante Gonzalo, son of King Alfonso of Spain, faces a stern board of public examiners, just like other youngsters. But somehow the confident poise of the lad tells us he wasn't much worried about being flunked. The test for this 11 year old princekin took place at the Institute of San Isidor in Madrid. Spain! of frozen dawns and burning noons; the nurse of those marvelous tame savages, the women of Castilla, of Andalusia, of Seville. Beautiful in their feline bodies, their sculpturesque features—above all in their fair firm clear complexions, the most perfect in Europe.

The skin of a Spanish beauty—even a delicate blonde—is no fragile possession either! Despite the assault of time and the worst climate in the world, she keeps its glowing charm through middle age.

How? you know already—Castile* soap! Nothing else! Not implying for a moment that there is any miraculous virtue in Castile—still as you know nothing to approach it has ever been found in all the six hundred years since Castile was first made.

So we could think of nothing finer than a finer Castile. Therefore, Doña Castile. We have made it better in certain specific respects: Doña comes in an exquisitely dainty shape for your hand; it's "hard-milled," therefore lasting and non-deliquescent; it will give you a rich, cleansing lather, grateful as cold cream, even in lukewarm water—important—and it will rinse instantly. WE LEFT OUR THREE FRIENDS BESIEGED BY A HORDE OF CRUEL SAVAGES WHICH THEY BRAVELY HELD AT BAY UNTIL NIGHTFALL AND THEN AIDED BY THE DARK TROPICAL NIGHT THEY ESCAPED INTO THE HEART OF THE RUGGED MOUNTAINS ~ CHING CHOW AND SAM SALT HAVE GONE OUT IN SEARCH OF GAME AS THEY ARE IN DESPERATE STRAITS FOR LACK OF FOOD LEAVING BRAVE LITTLE CHESTER ALONE TO GUARD THE CAMP UNTIL THEIR RETURN ~
GEE, I WISH WE WERE OUT OF THESE MOUNTAINS - I'M TIRED AND HUNGRY - INSTEAD OF GOLD ALL WE HAVE FOUND SO FAR IS DANGER AND HARDSHIPS -
I HAVEN'T HAD ANYTHING TO EAT FOR DAYS EXCEPT A FEW CRACKERS AND SOME WILD BERRIES - EVEN IF CHING OR SAM DOES CATCH SOME GAME THE SAVAGES WILL SEE THE SMOKE FROM OUR FIRE WHEN WE COOK IT AND THAT MEANS ANOTHER ATTACK -
STILL IF WE COULD ONLY FIND THE CITY OF GOLD I'D SOON FORGET ALL THE TROUBLE AND DANGER WE HAD TO PUT UP WITH BEFORE WE FOUND IT - MY TEACHER SAID THAT CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS SUFFERED EVERY DAY AND RISKED HIS LIFE A THOUSAND TIMES BEFORE HE FOUND AMERICA - NO MATTER WHAT HAPPENS I WON'T QUIT -
OH, BOY! WOULDN'T IT BE SWELL IF WE REALLY FIND THE CITY OF GOLD? I'LL BE WORTH BILLIONS AND BILLIONS OF DOLLARS - WOULDN'T THE KIDS AT SCHOOL BE SURPRISED IF I CAME HOME WITH MONEY TO BUY ANYTHING I WANTED? IT WOULD BE JUST LIKE OWNING ALADDIN'S WONDERFUL LAMP -
THE FIRST THING I'D DO AFTER I REACHED A TOWN WOULD BE TO WALK INTO A RESTAURANT AND ASK THE OWNER HOW MUCH HE WANTED FOR HIS RESTAURANT? IF HE SAID $10,000. I'D HAND HIM A BIG LUMP OF GOLD AND SAY SOLD! THEN I'D SIT DOWN AT THE TABLE AND EAT AND EAT AND EAT -
THEN I'D GO OUT AND CALL ALL THE KIDS IN FROM THE STREET AND TELL THEM TO SIT DOWN AND EAT ALL THEY WANTED - WE'D HAVE PIE, STRAWBERRY SHORT-CAKE, WATER-MELON, CHOCOLATE SUNDAES, CANDY AND ANYTHING ANY KID WOULD LIKE TO HAVE - THEN I'D GIVE EACH KID A BIG BAG FULL OF MONEY TO BUY WHATEVER HE WISHED -
WHEN I REACHED HOME I'D HIRE A DOZEN COAL WAGONS - FILL THEM UP WITH GOLD THEN WHEN THEY WERE ALL IN FRONT OF MY HOUSE I'D TELL MY MOTHER TO COME OUT AND THEN I'D TELL THE MEN TO DUMP ALL THE GOLD IN OUR FRONT YARD AND WHENEVER MOTHER WANTED ANYTHING SHE COULD TAKE A LUMP OF GOLD FROM THE PILE - I KNOW THAT WOULD MAKE HER HAPPY -
I'D BUILD THE BIGGEST BANK IN THE WORLD FOR MY PAPA - THEN I'D PUT ALL MY MONEY IN HIS BANK SO THAT IT WOULD BE SAFE FROM ROBBERS - IF ANY POOR PEOPLE NEEDED MONEY THEY COULD COME TO MY FATHER'S BANK AND HE'D GIVE THEM SOME - WE'D HAVE A NEW AUTOMOBILE MADE OF GOLD AND I'D USE IT TO DRIVE TO SCHOOL - WOULDN'T THE KIDS OPEN THEIR EYES WHEN THEY SAW ME DRIVE IN WITH THAT GOLDEN CAR?
IF THAT WHOLE CITY IS FULL OF GOLD I'LL NEVER BE ABLE TO SPEND IT ALL - JUST ONE BUILDING FULL OF GOLD WOULD MAKE ME RICH - BUT WHEN YOU THINK OF STREETS PAVED WITH GOLD AND SIDEWALKS MADE OF GOLD, GOLDEN PARKS, GOLDEN PICTURE SHOWS, GOLDEN SCHOOL HOUSES - EVERYTHING MADE OUT OF SOLID GOLD - IT JUST MAKES YOU DIZZY TRYING TO THINK HOW MANY DOLLARS IT WOULD AMOUNT TO - GEE WHIZ - THAT ARROW JUST MISSED ME - THERE MUST BE SOME SAVAGES TRAILING ME -

GASOLINE ALLEY
KING
HE HEARD A RUSTLE AMONG THE LEAVES, THE GRASS SLOWLY PARTED, AND A LION LEAPED TOWARD HIM. RAISING HIS BIG-GAME RIFLE TO HIS SHOULDER HE FIRED AND THE GREAT ANIMAL FELL DEAD AT HIS FEET.
GEE, GRAMMA, I'D LIKE TO HUNT LIONS!
WHERE YOU GOIN' WITH THAT POPGUN, SKEEZIX?
THAT AIN'T A POPGUN. IT'S A BIG-GAME RIFLE AN' I'M GOIN' TO HUNT LIONS.
I'M GOIN' RIGHT INTO THE JUNGLE AFTER 'EM. I HAVEN'T GOT ANY AFRICAN BOYS TO CHASE 'EM AROUND WHERE I CAN SHOOT 'EM.
SNEAK UP ON 'EM, THAT'S THE ONLY WAY. YOU GOTTA S'PRISE 'EM OR YOU CAN'T GET NEAR 'EM.
THERE! I CAN SEE ONE NOW. I MUSTN'T MISS THIS SHOT OR HE'LL 'TACK ME.
I GOT HIM! RIGHT BEHIND THE EAR!
POP
WELL I GUESS IT WASN'T A LION AT ALL. IT WAS ONLY A COUPLE O' ROCKS.
YOW!
OO! IT WAS A BIG LION! I KNOW IT WAS! I SAW HIM— HIS MANE AN' TEETH AN' EVERYTHING.
HE ISN'T GOIN' TO FOLLOW ME OUT OF THE WOODS. I GOT HIM SCARED.
OH, WELL, I GUESS I'LL STAY OUT HERE AN' HUNT RABBITS. LIONS AREN'T GOOD TO EAT ANYWAY.
